144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

42. As described below, army intelligence experts abducted former Gen. Rodolfo Robles in the street in November 1996 after he had denounced the participation of the Colina group in the bombing of a television station in Puno in October of that year. The army refused to heed a habeas corpus writ issued on his behalf and only released Robles after Fujimori intervened and granted him an amnesty.

43. The Executive Commission of the Public Ministry was set up in 1996 to oversee the restructuring of the Public Ministry.

44. Article 34(4) of the Organic Law of the Judiciary stipulates that the criminal chambers of the Supreme Court are competent to hear cases against members of the CSJM.

45. Elba Greta Minaya Calle, a respected judge who has courageously defended human rights, was removed from the 37th Criminal Court in Lima after she had granted a habeas corpus writ in December 1996 on behalf of Robles. After public pressure, the president of the Superior Court of Lima reinstated her. In July 1997, the Minister of the Interior, Csar Saucedo Snchez, ordered Minaya prosecuted for terrorism and other crimes for granting a habeas corpus petition on behalf of a woman arbitraily detained by DINCOTE. Minaya had ordered the release of Carmen Cceres Hinostrozo after the criminal investigations department of the police detained her when she refused to sign a statement recognizing that police had discovered ammunition in her kitchen. She was later transferred to DINCOTE, although there was no warrant for her arrest. The accusation of terrorism against Minaya was subsequently dropped, and instead a disciplinary complaint against her was lodged with the judiciary's internal control body.

46. Constitution of 1993, Articles 201-204 and 158-160, respectively.

47. Coln has acquired a reputation as a fierce defender of Fujimori's authoritarian policies. In 1993, she refused to allow foreign forensic experts permission to assist in the exhumation of the bodies of the La Cantuta victims; she helped instigate arbitrary legal action against journalist Ricardo Uceda, editor-in-chief of S magazine, after he had published evidence of the La Colina death squad's involvement in the Los Barrios massacre; she threatened to prosecute judge Antonia Saquicuray Snchez for continuing to investigate the group's involvement in the crime despite the recently promulgated amnesty law. See Americas Watch, Peru, Anatamy of a Cover-Up: the Disappearances at La Cantuta, September, 1993, p.14, and Human Rights Watch/Americas, World Report (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1996), p. 118.

48. Law No. 26695, of December 3, 1996.

49. Law No.26738 of January 7, 1997, widely known as the "third Coln Law." The "first Coln Law" helped Coln to remain in the post of attorney general, when her temporary appointment expired, by giving her the necessary seniority to do so. The "second Coln Law" extended her period of office by discounting her time as a temporary appointee. A recurrent feature of the current administration in Peru has been its use of a comfortable parliamentary majority to pass laws couched in general terms but designed to affect one individual in particular. Another example was the "Susana Law" designed to prevent the presidential candidacy of Fujimori's estranged wife, Susana Higuchi.

50. The original vote went against him due to a last-minute appointment by Dr. Coln of a new temporary senior prosecutor to the board of senior prosecutors responsible for the election. However, following widespread protests, Dr. Coln stood down.

51. "Fiscal de la Nacin Habemos:entrevista a Miguel Aljovn," Ideele, No. 94, March 1997.

52. Three of its members voted in December 1996 to support a motion of unconstitutionality against the voting requirement, presented by a group of thirty-six members of Congress. In its annual report for 1997, the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights criticized the requirement as one that allows for "overarching state authority, above the highest-level judicial bodies, allowing for the blatant interference of the Executive in the administration of justice and judicial reform," OEA/Ser.L/V/II.95, Doc 7 rev., March 14, 1997, p. 744.

53. Since Fujimori's first re-election was in 1995, this would make him eligible to stand again in 2000.

54. Two members of the court who strongly disagreed with the verdict published a minority view alongside it, despite having abstained from the vote.

55. Article 4 of the law stipulates that "the court resolves and adopts decisions by a simple majority of votes cast, except to resolve the inadmissability of an inconstitutionality complaint or to issue a sentence that declares unconstitutional a norm with the status of law, in which case six votes in favor are needed." (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

56. One of judges who abstained, Judge Jos Garca Marcelo, a former army chaplain, was suspected by Judge Revoredo of stealing a confidential draft of the ruling from her briefcase.

Other members of the court who voted for the resolution also reported confidential documents missing. The draft in question appears to have found its way into the hands of a group of C90-NM members of congress, who sent a letter to the president of the court, Dr. Ricardo Nugent Lpez-Chvez, urging him to vote against the ruling. Judge Jos Garca Marcelo received a vote of censure in the court for disclosing its confidential deliberations.

During the week of the ruling, Judge Revoredo alleged that her home had been under surveillance by naval intelligence agents posing as ice cream sellers and gardeners. She also said that a case against her concerning the importation of an automobile, which had been closed several years ago, was suddenly reopened by a judge in Callao, apparently in retaliation for her vote. On November 8, 1996, Nugent's police bodyguard was killed and two other police officers escorting his vehicle were seriously injured when gunmen attacked his vehicle. The press reported that the gunmen, who were attempting to kidnap a businessman when Nugent's car passed by, mistook it for a police vehicle and opened fire. These were not the only suspicious incidents involving members of the court. The Minister of the Interior, Gen. Juan Briones Dvila, denied that the attack was politically motivated. However, the incident remained unclarified. See "Qued al voto pedido para procesar a Delia Revoredo," La Repblica,April 9, 1997 and "Presidente del T.C. salva de balacera," La Repblica, November 9, 1997.

57. The statement read: "Given the institutional importance of the Constitutional Court, the IACHR hopes that it will be restored to regular functioning as soon as possible, guaranteeing due respect for its independence, impartiality and autonomy of the other organs of the state, and consolidating its position as the most authoritative interpreter of the Constitution and human rights."

58. Comunicado Oficial No. 003/SZSNC-7, Ministerio de Defensa, Lima, March 18, 1997.

59. "Ejrcito Peruano presenta armamento del frustrado ataque terrorista del MRTA," El Sol, March 20, 1997.

60. "Militares los torturaron para que admitieran ser del MRTA," La Repblica, March 26, 1997.

61. El Sol, March 20, 1997. The article in the pro-military El Sol appeared on the day after a television report denouncing that the peasants had been tortured into confessing. The article claimed that all of the detainees had been interrogated in the presence of the provincial prosecutor and that none had denounced torture. Thus, it concluded, the army had "de-activated another plan by the terrorists to attack the armed forces for committing abuses against peasants, in which they hoped to use the foreign press that is in our country for the hostage crisis." (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

62. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Paulino Sols Taype, Lima, April 4, 1997. Sols's allegation was confirmed by journalist Mara Elena Cornejo, who later interviewed the provincial prosecutor, Victoriano Nez Valdivia. He told her: "The thing is I don't have a budget for clothes, and as I was in civilian clothes and my shoes were dirty, the general lent me the uniform. Besides, it was 4 p.m. on a Friday and it was time for me to leave work, and I didn't have time to change. But I don't take pressure from anyone because I stand up to anyone like a man." Mara Elena Cornejo, "El Voltaje del Miedo, Caretas, No.1460, April 10, 1997, p.37.

63. The soldiers tried to force Loida Dionicio to admit that she had been recruited to the MRTA by another detainee, Aurelio Leiva, and that he had raped her. A later medical examination in the DINCOTE showed that Loida was, in fact, a virgin. Leiva had been singled out as the "leader" of the MRTA column.

64. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Ins Marilu Avila Glvez, March 1996.

65. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Emerson Wistrecher Cnepa, March 1996.

66. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Ins Marilu Avila Glvez, March 1996.

67. Human Rights Watch/Americas saw and photographed the torture equipment during our visit on April 2, 1997.

68. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Flix Jorge Romero, Lima, April 9, 1997.

69. Human Rights Watch/Americas interviews with Alfonso Rojas Colca and Jos Teofilo Huamn, Lima, April 4,1997.

70. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Martn Augusto Elguera, Lima, April 9, 1997.

71. "Salud sicolgica de rehenes est deteriorada," Expreso, March 31, 1997.

72. Judge Onsimo Julio Vela Velsquez, Informe No. 003-96-1JEPP, expediente No. 55-95, January 23,1996. Pages not numbered.

73. The forensic doctors asserted that it was impossible to determine whether the victim's lesions were self-inflicted or had been caused by a third party, but they went on, contradictorily, to say that the lesions had not been self-inflicted. Diligencia de necropsia en el cadver de Jhoel Huamn Garca. Ministerio Pblico Fiscala Mixta Pasco, date indistinct.

74. Judge Onsimo Vela Velsquez, Expediente No. 55-95, page un-numbered.

75. Penal Code, Book II, Title 1, Chapter 3, Article 121(3, ii).

76. Letter from Francisco Sobern, general coordinator of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos and Felicita Buenda Or, Chamaya's widow, to Luz Salgado Rubianes, president of the Congressional Human Rights Committee, November 9, 1995.

77. "Policas enfran taxista en cmica," El Popular, September 23, 1995. According to the same source, their superiors were complicit in their escape.

78. A police witnesses who was not identified told reporters that the officers responsible, apparently backed by the station chief, Carlos Snchez Gutirrez, hatched a plan to remove and "disappear" the body: "Lieutenant Zevallos tried to take the corpse away in the trunk of a private car, but because others tried to stop him, he began to shout like a madman, threatening to 'talk' about other abuses committed in the station. Later, he disappeared." "Jefes de cmica en Santa Felicia

implicados en crimen de taxista," El Popular, September 25, 1995.

79. "Asesinos de taxista se entregan a las autoridades y admiten su crimen," La Repblica, September 28, 1995.

80. According to a legal advisor to the criminal investigations department of the national police, the National Directorate for the Investigation of Crimes (Direccin Nacional de Investigacin del Crmen, DININCRI): "On this point, since the events took place in the installations of a police establishment and as a consequence of the carrying out of professional functions, the criminal conduct falls within the terms of Article 173 of the Constitution; for this reason the present advisor is of the opinion that, in application of Article 319 and 326 of the Code of Military Justice, it is of the exclusive competence of the military jurisdiction." Asesora Legal de la DININCRI-PNP, Dictmen no. 181-0AJ-DININCRI-PNP, September 25, 1995. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

81. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

82. Letter to the judge of the 40th Criminal Court, signed by Jorge Vega Fernndez, May 14, 1996.

83. The civilian and military judges also conflicted over the place where Zevallos would serve his sentence. After his conviction by the military court, police authorities refused to return him to Lurigancho, sending him to a military prison instead. According to a memo from the national penitentiary authorities to the judge, "this decision has caused administrative problems in this department in that the prisoner was interned in a public prison, Lurigancho, with a detention order issued by your worthy court, and in his capacity as accused, and he should have been returned to the same prison." Memo to the judge of the 40th Penal Court of Lima from an official of the National Penitentiary Institute (INP), a department of the Ministry of Justice, September 17, 1996.

84. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

85. "Policas de la delegacin de Brea asesinan a comerciante de lpidas," Expreso, March 25, 1996.

86. Manifestacin de Jos Enrique Palomino Garca, document bearing the National Police stamp, dated March 26, 1996.

87. Protocol de autopsia, Ref. Ofc. 384-96-14 FPPL-MP-FN, March 24, 1996.

88. Ampliacin de la Instructiva del Inculpado Alberto Snchez Vsquez, July 18, 1996.

89. Testimony of Jos Fiorentini Vergara, cited in summary of evidence by Judge Cecilia Bolack Baluarte of the 44th Criminal Court of Lima, November 6, 1996.

90. Testimony of Capt. Jorge Manuel Cheng Kong Chu, March 29, 1996.

91. Atestado No. 448 IC-H-DDCV, Delito Cometido por Funcionarios Pblicos- Abuso de Autoridad, April 2, 1996.

92. "Descuartizan a mujer agente del SIN y a otra la torturan y la internan en Hospital Militar," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "El ejrcito investigaba por 'infidencia' a Mariella Barreto la agente descuartizada," La Repblica, April 8, 1997; "Una agente de inteligencia asegura haber sido torturada," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Congreso pide informe a ministros por denuncias de torturas en el SIN," Expreso, April 8, 1997.

93. "Los planes al desnudo," La Repblica, April 7, 1997.

94. "Descuartizan a mujer."

95. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Orlando Barreto Pea, father of Mariella Barreto, April 7, 1997.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

43. The Executive Commission of the Public Ministry was set up in 1996 to oversee the restructuring of the Public Ministry.

44. Article 34(4) of the Organic Law of the Judiciary stipulates that the criminal chambers of the Supreme Court are competent to hear cases against members of the CSJM.

45. Elba Greta Minaya Calle, a respected judge who has courageously defended human rights, was removed from the 37th Criminal Court in Lima after she had granted a habeas corpus writ in December 1996 on behalf of Robles. After public pressure, the president of the Superior Court of Lima reinstated her. In July 1997, the Minister of the Interior, Csar Saucedo Snchez, ordered Minaya prosecuted for terrorism and other crimes for granting a habeas corpus petition on behalf of a woman arbitraily detained by DINCOTE. Minaya had ordered the release of Carmen Cceres Hinostrozo after the criminal investigations department of the police detained her when she refused to sign a statement recognizing that police had discovered ammunition in her kitchen. She was later transferred to DINCOTE, although there was no warrant for her arrest. The accusation of terrorism against Minaya was subsequently dropped, and instead a disciplinary complaint against her was lodged with the judiciary's internal control body.

46. Constitution of 1993, Articles 201-204 and 158-160, respectively.

47. Coln has acquired a reputation as a fierce defender of Fujimori's authoritarian policies. In 1993, she refused to allow foreign forensic experts permission to assist in the exhumation of the bodies of the La Cantuta victims; she helped instigate arbitrary legal action against journalist Ricardo Uceda, editor-in-chief of S magazine, after he had published evidence of the La Colina death squad's involvement in the Los Barrios massacre; she threatened to prosecute judge Antonia Saquicuray Snchez for continuing to investigate the group's involvement in the crime despite the recently promulgated amnesty law. See Americas Watch, Peru, Anatamy of a Cover-Up: the Disappearances at La Cantuta, September, 1993, p.14, and Human Rights Watch/Americas, World Report (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1996), p. 118.

48. Law No. 26695, of December 3, 1996.

49. Law No.26738 of January 7, 1997, widely known as the "third Coln Law." The "first Coln Law" helped Coln to remain in the post of attorney general, when her temporary appointment expired, by giving her the necessary seniority to do so. The "second Coln Law" extended her period of office by discounting her time as a temporary appointee. A recurrent feature of the current administration in Peru has been its use of a comfortable parliamentary majority to pass laws couched in general terms but designed to affect one individual in particular. Another example was the "Susana Law" designed to prevent the presidential candidacy of Fujimori's estranged wife, Susana Higuchi.

50. The original vote went against him due to a last-minute appointment by Dr. Coln of a new temporary senior prosecutor to the board of senior prosecutors responsible for the election. However, following widespread protests, Dr. Coln stood down.

51. "Fiscal de la Nacin Habemos:entrevista a Miguel Aljovn," Ideele, No. 94, March 1997.

52. Three of its members voted in December 1996 to support a motion of unconstitutionality against the voting requirement, presented by a group of thirty-six members of Congress. In its annual report for 1997, the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights criticized the requirement as one that allows for "overarching state authority, above the highest-level judicial bodies, allowing for the blatant interference of the Executive in the administration of justice and judicial reform," OEA/Ser.L/V/II.95, Doc 7 rev., March 14, 1997, p. 744.

53. Since Fujimori's first re-election was in 1995, this would make him eligible to stand again in 2000.

54. Two members of the court who strongly disagreed with the verdict published a minority view alongside it, despite having abstained from the vote.

55. Article 4 of the law stipulates that "the court resolves and adopts decisions by a simple majority of votes cast, except to resolve the inadmissability of an inconstitutionality complaint or to issue a sentence that declares unconstitutional a norm with the status of law, in which case six votes in favor are needed." (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

56. One of judges who abstained, Judge Jos Garca Marcelo, a former army chaplain, was suspected by Judge Revoredo of stealing a confidential draft of the ruling from her briefcase.

Other members of the court who voted for the resolution also reported confidential documents missing. The draft in question appears to have found its way into the hands of a group of C90-NM members of congress, who sent a letter to the president of the court, Dr. Ricardo Nugent Lpez-Chvez, urging him to vote against the ruling. Judge Jos Garca Marcelo received a vote of censure in the court for disclosing its confidential deliberations.

During the week of the ruling, Judge Revoredo alleged that her home had been under surveillance by naval intelligence agents posing as ice cream sellers and gardeners. She also said that a case against her concerning the importation of an automobile, which had been closed several years ago, was suddenly reopened by a judge in Callao, apparently in retaliation for her vote. On November 8, 1996, Nugent's police bodyguard was killed and two other police officers escorting his vehicle were seriously injured when gunmen attacked his vehicle. The press reported that the gunmen, who were attempting to kidnap a businessman when Nugent's car passed by, mistook it for a police vehicle and opened fire. These were not the only suspicious incidents involving members of the court. The Minister of the Interior, Gen. Juan Briones Dvila, denied that the attack was politically motivated. However, the incident remained unclarified. See "Qued al voto pedido para procesar a Delia Revoredo," La Repblica,April 9, 1997 and "Presidente del T.C. salva de balacera," La Repblica, November 9, 1997.

57. The statement read: "Given the institutional importance of the Constitutional Court, the IACHR hopes that it will be restored to regular functioning as soon as possible, guaranteeing due respect for its independence, impartiality and autonomy of the other organs of the state, and consolidating its position as the most authoritative interpreter of the Constitution and human rights."

58. Comunicado Oficial No. 003/SZSNC-7, Ministerio de Defensa, Lima, March 18, 1997.

59. "Ejrcito Peruano presenta armamento del frustrado ataque terrorista del MRTA," El Sol, March 20, 1997.

60. "Militares los torturaron para que admitieran ser del MRTA," La Repblica, March 26, 1997.

61. El Sol, March 20, 1997. The article in the pro-military El Sol appeared on the day after a television report denouncing that the peasants had been tortured into confessing. The article claimed that all of the detainees had been interrogated in the presence of the provincial prosecutor and that none had denounced torture. Thus, it concluded, the army had "de-activated another plan by the terrorists to attack the armed forces for committing abuses against peasants, in which they hoped to use the foreign press that is in our country for the hostage crisis." (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

62. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Paulino Sols Taype, Lima, April 4, 1997. Sols's allegation was confirmed by journalist Mara Elena Cornejo, who later interviewed the provincial prosecutor, Victoriano Nez Valdivia. He told her: "The thing is I don't have a budget for clothes, and as I was in civilian clothes and my shoes were dirty, the general lent me the uniform. Besides, it was 4 p.m. on a Friday and it was time for me to leave work, and I didn't have time to change. But I don't take pressure from anyone because I stand up to anyone like a man." Mara Elena Cornejo, "El Voltaje del Miedo, Caretas, No.1460, April 10, 1997, p.37.

63. The soldiers tried to force Loida Dionicio to admit that she had been recruited to the MRTA by another detainee, Aurelio Leiva, and that he had raped her. A later medical examination in the DINCOTE showed that Loida was, in fact, a virgin. Leiva had been singled out as the "leader" of the MRTA column.

64. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Ins Marilu Avila Glvez, March 1996.

65. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Emerson Wistrecher Cnepa, March 1996.

66. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Ins Marilu Avila Glvez, March 1996.

67. Human Rights Watch/Americas saw and photographed the torture equipment during our visit on April 2, 1997.

68. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Flix Jorge Romero, Lima, April 9, 1997.

69. Human Rights Watch/Americas interviews with Alfonso Rojas Colca and Jos Teofilo Huamn, Lima, April 4,1997.

70. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Martn Augusto Elguera, Lima, April 9, 1997.

71. "Salud sicolgica de rehenes est deteriorada," Expreso, March 31, 1997.

72. Judge Onsimo Julio Vela Velsquez, Informe No. 003-96-1JEPP, expediente No. 55-95, January 23,1996. Pages not numbered.

73. The forensic doctors asserted that it was impossible to determine whether the victim's lesions were self-inflicted or had been caused by a third party, but they went on, contradictorily, to say that the lesions had not been self-inflicted. Diligencia de necropsia en el cadver de Jhoel Huamn Garca. Ministerio Pblico Fiscala Mixta Pasco, date indistinct.

74. Judge Onsimo Vela Velsquez, Expediente No. 55-95, page un-numbered.

75. Penal Code, Book II, Title 1, Chapter 3, Article 121(3, ii).

76. Letter from Francisco Sobern, general coordinator of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos and Felicita Buenda Or, Chamaya's widow, to Luz Salgado Rubianes, president of the Congressional Human Rights Committee, November 9, 1995.

77. "Policas enfran taxista en cmica," El Popular, September 23, 1995. According to the same source, their superiors were complicit in their escape.

78. A police witnesses who was not identified told reporters that the officers responsible, apparently backed by the station chief, Carlos Snchez Gutirrez, hatched a plan to remove and "disappear" the body: "Lieutenant Zevallos tried to take the corpse away in the trunk of a private car, but because others tried to stop him, he began to shout like a madman, threatening to 'talk' about other abuses committed in the station. Later, he disappeared." "Jefes de cmica en Santa Felicia

implicados en crimen de taxista," El Popular, September 25, 1995.

79. "Asesinos de taxista se entregan a las autoridades y admiten su crimen," La Repblica, September 28, 1995.

80. According to a legal advisor to the criminal investigations department of the national police, the National Directorate for the Investigation of Crimes (Direccin Nacional de Investigacin del Crmen, DININCRI): "On this point, since the events took place in the installations of a police establishment and as a consequence of the carrying out of professional functions, the criminal conduct falls within the terms of Article 173 of the Constitution; for this reason the present advisor is of the opinion that, in application of Article 319 and 326 of the Code of Military Justice, it is of the exclusive competence of the military jurisdiction." Asesora Legal de la DININCRI-PNP, Dictmen no. 181-0AJ-DININCRI-PNP, September 25, 1995. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

81. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

82. Letter to the judge of the 40th Criminal Court, signed by Jorge Vega Fernndez, May 14, 1996.

83. The civilian and military judges also conflicted over the place where Zevallos would serve his sentence. After his conviction by the military court, police authorities refused to return him to Lurigancho, sending him to a military prison instead. According to a memo from the national penitentiary authorities to the judge, "this decision has caused administrative problems in this department in that the prisoner was interned in a public prison, Lurigancho, with a detention order issued by your worthy court, and in his capacity as accused, and he should have been returned to the same prison." Memo to the judge of the 40th Penal Court of Lima from an official of the National Penitentiary Institute (INP), a department of the Ministry of Justice, September 17, 1996.

84. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

85. "Policas de la delegacin de Brea asesinan a comerciante de lpidas," Expreso, March 25, 1996.

86. Manifestacin de Jos Enrique Palomino Garca, document bearing the National Police stamp, dated March 26, 1996.

87. Protocol de autopsia, Ref. Ofc. 384-96-14 FPPL-MP-FN, March 24, 1996.

88. Ampliacin de la Instructiva del Inculpado Alberto Snchez Vsquez, July 18, 1996.

89. Testimony of Jos Fiorentini Vergara, cited in summary of evidence by Judge Cecilia Bolack Baluarte of the 44th Criminal Court of Lima, November 6, 1996.

90. Testimony of Capt. Jorge Manuel Cheng Kong Chu, March 29, 1996.

91. Atestado No. 448 IC-H-DDCV, Delito Cometido por Funcionarios Pblicos- Abuso de Autoridad, April 2, 1996.

92. "Descuartizan a mujer agente del SIN y a otra la torturan y la internan en Hospital Militar," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "El ejrcito investigaba por 'infidencia' a Mariella Barreto la agente descuartizada," La Repblica, April 8, 1997; "Una agente de inteligencia asegura haber sido torturada," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Congreso pide informe a ministros por denuncias de torturas en el SIN," Expreso, April 8, 1997.

93. "Los planes al desnudo," La Repblica, April 7, 1997.

94. "Descuartizan a mujer."

95. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Orlando Barreto Pea, father of Mariella Barreto, April 7, 1997.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

44. Article 34(4) of the Organic Law of the Judiciary stipulates that the criminal chambers of the Supreme Court are competent to hear cases against members of the CSJM.

45. Elba Greta Minaya Calle, a respected judge who has courageously defended human rights, was removed from the 37th Criminal Court in Lima after she had granted a habeas corpus writ in December 1996 on behalf of Robles. After public pressure, the president of the Superior Court of Lima reinstated her. In July 1997, the Minister of the Interior, Csar Saucedo Snchez, ordered Minaya prosecuted for terrorism and other crimes for granting a habeas corpus petition on behalf of a woman arbitraily detained by DINCOTE. Minaya had ordered the release of Carmen Cceres Hinostrozo after the criminal investigations department of the police detained her when she refused to sign a statement recognizing that police had discovered ammunition in her kitchen. She was later transferred to DINCOTE, although there was no warrant for her arrest. The accusation of terrorism against Minaya was subsequently dropped, and instead a disciplinary complaint against her was lodged with the judiciary's internal control body.

46. Constitution of 1993, Articles 201-204 and 158-160, respectively.

47. Coln has acquired a reputation as a fierce defender of Fujimori's authoritarian policies. In 1993, she refused to allow foreign forensic experts permission to assist in the exhumation of the bodies of the La Cantuta victims; she helped instigate arbitrary legal action against journalist Ricardo Uceda, editor-in-chief of S magazine, after he had published evidence of the La Colina death squad's involvement in the Los Barrios massacre; she threatened to prosecute judge Antonia Saquicuray Snchez for continuing to investigate the group's involvement in the crime despite the recently promulgated amnesty law. See Americas Watch, Peru, Anatamy of a Cover-Up: the

Disappearances at La Cantuta, September, 1993, p.14, and Human Rights Watch/Americas, World Report (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1996), p. 118.

48. Law No. 26695, of December 3, 1996.

49. Law No.26738 of January 7, 1997, widely known as the "third Coln Law." The "first Coln Law" helped Coln to remain in the post of attorney general, when her temporary appointment expired, by giving her the necessary seniority to do so. The "second Coln Law" extended her period of office by discounting her time as a temporary appointee. A recurrent feature of the current administration in Peru has been its use of a comfortable parliamentary majority to pass laws couched in general terms but designed to affect one individual in particular. Another example was the "Susana Law" designed to prevent the presidential candidacy of Fujimori's estranged wife, Susana Higuchi.

50. The original vote went against him due to a last-minute appointment by Dr. Coln of a new temporary senior prosecutor to the board of senior prosecutors responsible for the election. However, following widespread protests, Dr. Coln stood down.

51. "Fiscal de la Nacin Habemos:entrevista a Miguel Aljovn," Ideele, No. 94, March 1997.

52. Three of its members voted in December 1996 to support a motion of unconstitutionality against the voting requirement, presented by a group of thirty-six members of Congress. In its annual report for 1997, the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights criticized the requirement as one that allows for "overarching state authority, above the highest-level judicial bodies, allowing for the blatant interference of the Executive in the administration of justice and judicial reform," OEA/Ser.L/V/II.95, Doc 7 rev., March 14, 1997, p. 744.

53. Since Fujimori's first re-election was in 1995, this would make him eligible to stand again in 2000.

54. Two members of the court who strongly disagreed with the verdict published a minority view alongside it, despite having abstained from the vote.

55. Article 4 of the law stipulates that "the court resolves and adopts decisions by a simple majority of votes cast, except to resolve the inadmissability of an inconstitutionality complaint or to issue a sentence that declares unconstitutional a norm with the status of law, in which case six votes in favor are needed." (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

56. One of judges who abstained, Judge Jos Garca Marcelo, a former army chaplain, was suspected by Judge Revoredo of stealing a confidential draft of the ruling from her briefcase.

Other members of the court who voted for the resolution also reported confidential documents missing. The draft in question appears to have found its way into the hands of a group of C90-NM members of congress, who sent a letter to the president of the court, Dr. Ricardo Nugent Lpez-Chvez, urging him to vote against the ruling. Judge Jos Garca Marcelo received a vote of censure in the court for disclosing its confidential deliberations.

During the week of the ruling, Judge Revoredo alleged that her home had been under surveillance by naval intelligence agents posing as ice cream sellers and gardeners. She also said that a case against her concerning the importation of an automobile, which had been closed several years ago, was suddenly reopened by a judge in Callao, apparently in retaliation for her vote. On November 8, 1996, Nugent's police bodyguard was killed and two other police officers escorting his vehicle were seriously injured when gunmen attacked his vehicle. The press reported that the gunmen, who were attempting to kidnap a businessman when Nugent's car passed by, mistook it for a police vehicle and opened fire. These were not the only suspicious incidents involving members of the court. The Minister of the Interior, Gen. Juan Briones Dvila, denied that the attack was politically motivated. However, the incident remained unclarified. See "Qued al voto pedido para procesar a Delia Revoredo," La Repblica,April 9, 1997 and "Presidente del T.C. salva de balacera," La Repblica, November 9, 1997.

57. The statement read: "Given the institutional importance of the Constitutional Court, the IACHR hopes that it will be restored to regular functioning as soon as possible, guaranteeing due respect for its independence, impartiality and autonomy of the other organs of the state, and consolidating its position as the most authoritative interpreter of the Constitution and human rights."

58. Comunicado Oficial No. 003/SZSNC-7, Ministerio de Defensa, Lima, March 18, 1997.

59. "Ejrcito Peruano presenta armamento del frustrado ataque terrorista del MRTA," El Sol, March 20, 1997.

60. "Militares los torturaron para que admitieran ser del MRTA," La Repblica, March 26, 1997.

61. El Sol, March 20, 1997. The article in the pro-military El Sol appeared on the day after a television report denouncing that the peasants had been tortured into confessing. The article claimed that all of the detainees had been interrogated in the presence of the provincial prosecutor and that none had denounced torture. Thus, it concluded, the army had "de-activated another plan by the terrorists to attack the armed forces for committing abuses against peasants, in which they hoped to use the foreign press that is in our country for the hostage crisis." (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

62. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Paulino Sols Taype, Lima, April 4, 1997. Sols's allegation was confirmed by journalist Mara Elena Cornejo, who later interviewed the provincial prosecutor, Victoriano Nez Valdivia. He told her: "The thing is I don't have a budget for clothes, and as I was in civilian clothes and my shoes were dirty, the general lent me the uniform. Besides, it was 4 p.m. on a Friday and it was time for me to leave work, and I didn't have time to change. But I don't take pressure from anyone because I stand up to anyone like a man." Mara Elena Cornejo, "El Voltaje del Miedo, Caretas, No.1460, April 10, 1997, p.37.

63. The soldiers tried to force Loida Dionicio to admit that she had been recruited to the MRTA by another detainee, Aurelio Leiva, and that he had raped her. A later medical examination in the DINCOTE showed that Loida was, in fact, a virgin. Leiva had been singled out as the "leader" of the MRTA column.

64. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Ins Marilu Avila Glvez, March 1996.

65. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Emerson Wistrecher Cnepa, March 1996.

66. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Ins Marilu Avila Glvez, March 1996.

67. Human Rights Watch/Americas saw and photographed the torture equipment during our visit on April 2, 1997.

68. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Flix Jorge Romero, Lima, April 9, 1997.

69. Human Rights Watch/Americas interviews with Alfonso Rojas Colca and Jos Teofilo Huamn, Lima, April 4,1997.

70. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Martn Augusto Elguera, Lima, April 9, 1997.

71. "Salud sicolgica de rehenes est deteriorada," Expreso, March 31, 1997.

72. Judge Onsimo Julio Vela Velsquez, Informe No. 003-96-1JEPP, expediente No. 55-95, January 23,1996. Pages not numbered.

73. The forensic doctors asserted that it was impossible to determine whether the victim's lesions were self-inflicted or had been caused by a third party, but they went on, contradictorily, to say that the lesions had not been self-inflicted. Diligencia de necropsia en el cadver de Jhoel Huamn Garca. Ministerio Pblico Fiscala Mixta Pasco, date indistinct.

74. Judge Onsimo Vela Velsquez, Expediente No. 55-95, page un-numbered.

75. Penal Code, Book II, Title 1, Chapter 3, Article 121(3, ii).

76. Letter from Francisco Sobern, general coordinator of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos and Felicita Buenda Or, Chamaya's widow, to Luz Salgado Rubianes, president of the Congressional Human Rights Committee, November 9, 1995.

77. "Policas enfran taxista en cmica," El Popular, September 23, 1995. According to the same source, their superiors were complicit in their escape.

78. A police witnesses who was not identified told reporters that the officers responsible, apparently backed by the station chief, Carlos Snchez Gutirrez, hatched a plan to remove and "disappear" the body: "Lieutenant Zevallos tried to take the corpse away in the trunk of a private car, but because others tried to stop him, he began to shout like a madman, threatening to 'talk' about other abuses committed in the station. Later, he disappeared." "Jefes de cmica en Santa Felicia

implicados en crimen de taxista," El Popular, September 25, 1995.

79. "Asesinos de taxista se entregan a las autoridades y admiten su crimen," La Repblica, September 28, 1995.

80. According to a legal advisor to the criminal investigations department of the national police, the National Directorate for the Investigation of Crimes (Direccin Nacional de Investigacin del Crmen, DININCRI): "On this point, since the events took place in the installations of a police establishment and as a consequence of the carrying out of professional functions, the criminal conduct falls within the terms of Article 173 of the Constitution; for this reason the present advisor is of the opinion that, in application of Article 319 and 326 of the Code of Military Justice, it is of the exclusive competence of the military jurisdiction." Asesora Legal de la DININCRI-PNP, Dictmen no. 181-0AJ-DININCRI-PNP, September 25, 1995. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

81. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

82. Letter to the judge of the 40th Criminal Court, signed by Jorge Vega Fernndez, May 14, 1996.

83. The civilian and military judges also conflicted over the place where Zevallos would serve his sentence. After his conviction by the military court, police authorities refused to return him to Lurigancho, sending him to a military prison instead. According to a memo from the national penitentiary authorities to the judge, "this decision has caused administrative problems in this department in that the prisoner was interned in a public prison, Lurigancho, with a detention order issued by your worthy court, and in his capacity as accused, and he should have been returned to the same prison." Memo to the judge of the 40th Penal Court of Lima from an official of the National Penitentiary Institute (INP), a department of the Ministry of Justice, September 17, 1996.

84. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

85. "Policas de la delegacin de Brea asesinan a comerciante de lpidas," Expreso, March 25, 1996.

86. Manifestacin de Jos Enrique Palomino Garca, document bearing the National Police stamp, dated March 26, 1996.

87. Protocol de autopsia, Ref. Ofc. 384-96-14 FPPL-MP-FN, March 24, 1996.

88. Ampliacin de la Instructiva del Inculpado Alberto Snchez Vsquez, July 18, 1996.

89. Testimony of Jos Fiorentini Vergara, cited in summary of evidence by Judge Cecilia Bolack Baluarte of the 44th Criminal Court of Lima, November 6, 1996.

90. Testimony of Capt. Jorge Manuel Cheng Kong Chu, March 29, 1996.

91. Atestado No. 448 IC-H-DDCV, Delito Cometido por Funcionarios Pblicos- Abuso de Autoridad, April 2, 1996.

92. "Descuartizan a mujer agente del SIN y a otra la torturan y la internan en Hospital Militar," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "El ejrcito investigaba por 'infidencia' a Mariella Barreto la agente descuartizada," La Repblica, April 8, 1997; "Una agente de inteligencia asegura haber sido torturada," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Congreso pide informe a ministros por denuncias de torturas en el SIN," Expreso, April 8, 1997.

93. "Los planes al desnudo," La Repblica, April 7, 1997.

94. "Descuartizan a mujer."

95. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Orlando Barreto Pea, father of Mariella Barreto, April 7, 1997.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction."

DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website,

http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

45. Elba Greta Minaya Calle, a respected judge who has courageously defended human rights, was removed from the 37th Criminal Court in Lima after she had granted a habeas corpus writ in December 1996 on behalf of Robles. After public pressure, the president of the Superior Court of Lima reinstated her. In July 1997, the Minister of the Interior, Csar Saucedo Snchez, ordered Minaya prosecuted for terrorism and other crimes for granting a habeas corpus petition on behalf of a woman arbitraily detained by DINCOTE. Minaya had ordered the release of Carmen Cceres Hinostrozo after the criminal investigations department of the police detained her when she refused to sign a statement recognizing that police had discovered ammunition in her kitchen. She was later transferred to DINCOTE, although there was no warrant for her arrest. The accusation of terrorism against Minaya was subsequently dropped, and instead a disciplinary complaint against her was lodged with the judiciary's internal control body.

46. Constitution of 1993, Articles 201-204 and 158-160, respectively.

47. Coln has acquired a reputation as a fierce defender of Fujimori's authoritarian policies. In 1993, she refused to allow foreign forensic experts permission to assist in the exhumation of the bodies of the La Cantuta victims; she helped instigate arbitrary legal action against journalist Ricardo Uceda, editor-in-chief of S magazine, after he had published evidence of the La Colina death squad's involvement in the Los Barrios massacre; she threatened to prosecute judge Antonia Saquicuray Snchez for continuing to investigate the group's involvement in the crime despite the recently promulgated amnesty law. See Americas Watch, Peru, Anatamy of a Cover-Up: the Disappearances at La Cantuta, September, 1993, p.14, and Human Rights Watch/Americas, World Report (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1996), p. 118.

48. Law No. 26695, of December 3, 1996.

49. Law No.26738 of January 7, 1997, widely known as the "third Coln Law." The "first Coln Law" helped Coln to remain in the post of attorney general, when her temporary appointment expired, by giving her the necessary seniority to do so. The "second Coln Law" extended her period of office by discounting her time as a temporary appointee. A recurrent feature of the current administration in Peru has been its use of a comfortable parliamentary majority to pass laws couched in general terms but designed to affect one individual in particular. Another example was the "Susana Law" designed to prevent the presidential candidacy of Fujimori's estranged wife, Susana Higuchi.

50. The original vote went against him due to a last-minute appointment by Dr. Coln of a new temporary senior prosecutor to the board of senior prosecutors responsible for the election. However, following widespread protests, Dr. Coln stood down.

51. "Fiscal de la Nacin Habemos:entrevista a Miguel Aljovn," Ideele, No. 94, March 1997.

52. Three of its members voted in December 1996 to support a motion of unconstitutionality against the voting requirement, presented by a group of thirty-six members of Congress. In its annual report for 1997, the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights criticized the requirement as one that allows for "overarching state authority, above the highest-level judicial bodies, allowing for the blatant interference of the Executive in the administration of justice and judicial reform," OEA/Ser.L/V/II.95, Doc 7 rev., March 14, 1997, p. 744.

53. Since Fujimori's first re-election was in 1995, this would make him eligible to stand again in 2000.

54. Two members of the court who strongly disagreed with the verdict published a minority view alongside it, despite having abstained from the vote.

55. Article 4 of the law stipulates that "the court resolves and adopts decisions by a simple majority of votes cast, except to resolve the inadmissability of an inconstitutionality complaint or to issue a sentence that declares unconstitutional a norm with the status of law, in which case six votes in favor are needed." (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

56. One of judges who abstained, Judge Jos Garca Marcelo, a former army chaplain, was suspected by Judge Revoredo of stealing a confidential draft of the ruling from her briefcase.

Other members of the court who voted for the resolution also reported confidential documents missing. The draft in question appears to have found its way into the hands of a group of C90-NM members of congress, who sent a letter to the president of the court, Dr. Ricardo Nugent Lpez-Chvez, urging him to vote against the ruling. Judge Jos Garca Marcelo received a vote of censure in the court for disclosing its confidential deliberations.

During the week of the ruling, Judge Revoredo alleged that her home had been under surveillance by naval intelligence agents posing as ice cream sellers and gardeners. She also said that a case against her concerning the importation of an automobile, which had been closed several years ago, was suddenly reopened by a judge in Callao, apparently in retaliation for her vote. On November 8, 1996, Nugent's police bodyguard was killed and two other police officers escorting his vehicle were seriously injured when gunmen attacked his vehicle. The press reported that the gunmen, who were attempting to kidnap a businessman when Nugent's car passed by, mistook it for a police vehicle and opened fire. These were not the only suspicious incidents involving members of the court. The Minister of the Interior, Gen. Juan Briones Dvila, denied that the attack was politically motivated. However, the incident remained unclarified. See "Qued al voto pedido para procesar a Delia Revoredo," La Repblica,April 9, 1997 and "Presidente del T.C. salva de balacera," La Repblica, November 9, 1997.

57. The statement read: "Given the institutional importance of the Constitutional Court, the IACHR hopes that it will be restored to regular functioning as soon as possible, guaranteeing due respect for its independence, impartiality and autonomy of the other organs of the state, and consolidating its position as the most authoritative interpreter of the Constitution and human rights."

58. Comunicado Oficial No. 003/SZSNC-7, Ministerio de Defensa, Lima, March 18, 1997.

59. "Ejrcito Peruano presenta armamento del frustrado ataque terrorista del MRTA," El Sol, March 20, 1997.

60. "Militares los torturaron para que admitieran ser del MRTA," La Repblica, March 26, 1997.

61. El Sol, March 20, 1997. The article in the pro-military El Sol appeared on the day after a television report denouncing that the peasants had been tortured into confessing. The article claimed that all of the detainees had been interrogated in the presence of the provincial prosecutor and that none had denounced torture. Thus, it concluded, the army had "de-activated another plan by the terrorists to attack the armed forces for committing abuses against peasants, in which they hoped to use the foreign press that is in our country for the hostage crisis." (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

62. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Paulino Sols Taype, Lima, April 4, 1997. Sols's allegation was confirmed by journalist Mara Elena Cornejo, who later interviewed the provincial prosecutor, Victoriano Nez Valdivia. He told her: "The thing is I don't have a budget for clothes, and as I was in civilian clothes and my shoes were dirty, the general lent me the uniform. Besides, it was 4 p.m. on a Friday and it was time for me to leave work, and I didn't have time to change. But I don't take pressure from anyone because I stand up to anyone like a man." Mara Elena Cornejo, "El Voltaje del Miedo, Caretas, No.1460, April 10, 1997, p.37.

63. The soldiers tried to force Loida Dionicio to admit that she had been recruited to the MRTA by another detainee, Aurelio Leiva, and that he had raped her. A later medical examination in the DINCOTE showed that Loida was, in fact, a virgin. Leiva had been singled out as the "leader" of the MRTA column.

64. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Ins Marilu Avila Glvez, March 1996.

65. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Emerson Wistrecher Cnepa, March 1996.

66. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Ins Marilu Avila Glvez, March 1996.

67. Human Rights Watch/Americas saw and photographed the torture equipment during our visit on April 2, 1997.

68. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Flix Jorge Romero, Lima, April 9, 1997.

69. Human Rights Watch/Americas interviews with Alfonso Rojas Colca and Jos Teofilo Huamn, Lima, April 4,1997.

70. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Martn Augusto Elguera, Lima, April 9, 1997.

71. "Salud sicolgica de rehenes est deteriorada," Expreso, March 31, 1997.

72. Judge Onsimo Julio Vela Velsquez, Informe No. 003-96-1JEPP, expediente No. 55-95, January 23,1996. Pages not numbered.

73. The forensic doctors asserted that it was impossible to determine whether the victim's lesions were self-inflicted or had been caused by a third party, but they went on, contradictorily, to say that the lesions had not been self-inflicted. Diligencia de necropsia en el cadver de Jhoel Huamn Garca. Ministerio Pblico Fiscala Mixta Pasco, date indistinct.

74. Judge Onsimo Vela Velsquez, Expediente No. 55-95, page un-numbered.

75. Penal Code, Book II, Title 1, Chapter 3, Article 121(3, ii).

76. Letter from Francisco Sobern, general coordinator of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos and Felicita Buenda Or, Chamaya's widow, to Luz Salgado Rubianes, president of the Congressional Human Rights Committee, November 9, 1995.

77. "Policas enfran taxista en cmica," El Popular, September 23, 1995. According to the same source, their superiors were complicit in their escape.

78. A police witnesses who was not identified told reporters that the officers responsible, apparently backed by the station chief, Carlos Snchez Gutirrez, hatched a plan to remove and "disappear" the body: "Lieutenant Zevallos tried to take the corpse away in the trunk of a private car, but because others tried to stop him, he began to shout like a madman, threatening to 'talk' about other abuses committed in the station. Later, he disappeared." "Jefes de cmica en Santa Felicia

implicados en crimen de taxista," El Popular, September 25, 1995.

79. "Asesinos de taxista se entregan a las autoridades y admiten su crimen," La Repblica, September 28, 1995.

80. According to a legal advisor to the criminal investigations department of the national police, the National Directorate for the Investigation of Crimes (Direccin Nacional de Investigacin del Crmen, DININCRI): "On this point, since the events took place in the installations of a police establishment and as a consequence of the carrying out of professional functions, the criminal conduct falls within the terms of Article 173 of the Constitution; for this reason the present advisor is of the opinion that, in application of Article 319 and 326 of the Code of Military Justice, it is of the exclusive competence of the military jurisdiction." Asesora Legal de la DININCRI-PNP, Dictmen no. 181-0AJ-DININCRI-PNP, September 25, 1995. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

81. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

82. Letter to the judge of the 40th Criminal Court, signed by Jorge Vega Fernndez, May 14, 1996.

83. The civilian and military judges also conflicted over the place where Zevallos would serve his sentence. After his conviction by the military court, police authorities refused to return him to Lurigancho, sending him to a military prison instead. According to a memo from the national penitentiary authorities to the judge, "this decision has caused administrative problems in this department in that the prisoner was interned in a public prison, Lurigancho, with a detention order issued by your worthy court, and in his capacity as accused, and he should have been returned to the same prison." Memo to the judge of the 40th Penal Court of Lima from an official of the National Penitentiary Institute (INP), a department of the Ministry of Justice, September 17, 1996.

84. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

85. "Policas de la delegacin de Brea asesinan a comerciante de lpidas," Expreso, March 25, 1996.

86. Manifestacin de Jos Enrique Palomino Garca, document bearing the National Police stamp, dated March 26, 1996.

87. Protocol de autopsia, Ref. Ofc. 384-96-14 FPPL-MP-FN, March 24, 1996.

88. Ampliacin de la Instructiva del Inculpado Alberto Snchez Vsquez, July 18, 1996.

89. Testimony of Jos Fiorentini Vergara, cited in summary of evidence by Judge Cecilia Bolack Baluarte of the 44th Criminal Court of Lima, November 6, 1996.

90. Testimony of Capt. Jorge Manuel Cheng Kong Chu, March 29, 1996.

91. Atestado No. 448 IC-H-DDCV, Delito Cometido por Funcionarios Pblicos- Abuso de Autoridad, April 2, 1996.

92. "Descuartizan a mujer agente del SIN y a otra la torturan y la internan en Hospital Militar," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "El ejrcito investigaba por 'infidencia' a Mariella Barreto la agente descuartizada," La Repblica, April 8, 1997; "Una agente de inteligencia asegura haber sido torturada," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Congreso pide informe a ministros por denuncias de torturas en el SIN," Expreso, April 8, 1997.

93. "Los planes al desnudo," La Repblica, April 7, 1997.

94. "Descuartizan a mujer."

95. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Orlando Barreto Pea, father of Mariella Barreto, April 7, 1997.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

46. Constitution of 1993, Articles 201-204 and 158-160, respectively.

47. Coln has acquired a reputation as a fierce defender of Fujimori's authoritarian policies. In 1993, she refused to allow foreign forensic experts permission to assist in the exhumation of the bodies of the La Cantuta victims; she helped instigate arbitrary legal action against journalist Ricardo Uceda, editor-in-chief of S magazine, after he had published evidence of the La Colina death squad's involvement in the Los Barrios massacre; she threatened to prosecute judge Antonia Saquicuray Snchez for continuing to investigate the group's involvement in the crime despite the recently promulgated amnesty law. See Americas Watch, Peru, Anatamy of a Cover-Up: the Disappearances at La Cantuta, September, 1993, p.14, and Human Rights Watch/Americas, World Report (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1996), p. 118.

48. Law No. 26695, of December 3, 1996.

49. Law No.26738 of January 7, 1997, widely known as the "third Coln Law." The "first Coln Law" helped Coln to remain in the post of attorney general, when her temporary appointment expired, by giving her the necessary seniority to do so. The "second Coln Law" extended her period of office by discounting her time as a temporary appointee. A recurrent feature of the current administration in Peru has been its use of a comfortable parliamentary majority to pass laws couched in general terms but designed to affect one individual in particular. Another example was the "Susana Law" designed to prevent the presidential candidacy of Fujimori's estranged wife, Susana Higuchi.

50. The original vote went against him due to a last-minute appointment by Dr. Coln of a new temporary senior prosecutor to the board of senior prosecutors responsible for the election. However, following widespread protests, Dr. Coln stood down.

51. "Fiscal de la Nacin Habemos:entrevista a Miguel Aljovn," Ideele, No. 94, March 1997.

52. Three of its members voted in December 1996 to support a motion of unconstitutionality against the voting requirement, presented by a group of thirty-six members of Congress. In its annual report for 1997, the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights criticized the requirement as one that allows for "overarching state authority, above the highest-level judicial bodies, allowing for the blatant interference of the Executive in the administration of justice and judicial reform," OEA/Ser.L/V/II.95, Doc 7 rev., March 14, 1997, p. 744.

53. Since Fujimori's first re-election was in 1995, this would make him eligible to stand again in 2000.

54. Two members of the court who strongly disagreed with the verdict published a minority view alongside it, despite having abstained from the vote.

55. Article 4 of the law stipulates that "the court resolves and adopts decisions by a simple majority of votes cast, except to resolve the inadmissability of an inconstitutionality complaint or to issue a sentence that declares unconstitutional a norm with the status of law, in which case six votes in favor are needed." (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

56. One of judges who abstained, Judge Jos Garca Marcelo, a former army chaplain, was suspected by Judge Revoredo of stealing a confidential draft of the ruling from her briefcase.

Other members of the court who voted for the resolution also reported confidential documents missing. The draft in question appears to have found its way into the hands of a group of C90-NM members of congress, who sent a letter to the president of the court, Dr. Ricardo Nugent Lpez-Chvez, urging him to vote against the ruling. Judge Jos Garca Marcelo received a vote of censure in the court for disclosing its confidential deliberations.

During the week of the ruling, Judge Revoredo alleged that her home had been under surveillance by naval intelligence agents posing as ice cream sellers and gardeners. She also said that a case against her concerning the importation of an automobile, which had been closed several years ago, was suddenly reopened by a judge in Callao, apparently in retaliation for her vote. On November 8, 1996, Nugent's police bodyguard was killed and two other police officers escorting his vehicle were seriously injured when gunmen attacked his vehicle. The press reported that the gunmen, who were attempting to kidnap a businessman when Nugent's car passed by, mistook it for a police vehicle and opened fire. These were not the only suspicious incidents involving members of the court. The Minister of the Interior, Gen. Juan Briones Dvila, denied that the attack was politically motivated. However, the incident remained unclarified. See "Qued al voto pedido para procesar a Delia Revoredo," La Repblica,April 9, 1997 and "Presidente del T.C. salva de balacera," La Repblica, November 9, 1997.

57. The statement read: "Given the institutional importance of the Constitutional Court, the IACHR hopes that it will be restored to regular functioning as soon as possible, guaranteeing due respect for its independence, impartiality and autonomy of the other organs of the state, and consolidating its position as the most authoritative interpreter of the Constitution and human rights."

58. Comunicado Oficial No. 003/SZSNC-7, Ministerio de Defensa, Lima, March 18, 1997.

59. "Ejrcito Peruano presenta armamento del frustrado ataque terrorista del MRTA," El Sol, March 20, 1997.

60. "Militares los torturaron para que admitieran ser del MRTA," La Repblica, March 26, 1997.

61. El Sol, March 20, 1997. The article in the pro-military El Sol appeared on the day after a television report denouncing that the peasants had been tortured into confessing. The article claimed that all of the detainees had been interrogated in the presence of the provincial prosecutor and that none had denounced torture. Thus, it concluded, the army had "de-activated another plan by the terrorists to attack the armed forces for committing abuses against peasants, in which they hoped to use the foreign press that is in our country for the hostage crisis." (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

62. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Paulino Sols Taype, Lima, April 4, 1997. Sols's allegation was confirmed by journalist Mara Elena Cornejo, who later interviewed the provincial prosecutor, Victoriano Nez Valdivia. He told her: "The thing is I don't have a budget for clothes, and as I was in civilian clothes and my shoes were dirty, the general lent me the uniform. Besides, it was 4 p.m. on a Friday and it was time for me to leave work, and I didn't have time to change. But I don't take pressure from anyone because I stand up to anyone like a man." Mara Elena Cornejo, "El Voltaje del Miedo, Caretas, No.1460, April 10, 1997, p.37.

63. The soldiers tried to force Loida Dionicio to admit that she had been recruited to the MRTA by another detainee, Aurelio Leiva, and that he had raped her. A later medical examination in the DINCOTE showed that Loida was, in fact, a virgin. Leiva had been singled out as the "leader" of the MRTA column.

64. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Ins Marilu Avila Glvez, March 1996.

65. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Emerson Wistrecher Cnepa, March 1996.

66. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Ins Marilu Avila Glvez, March 1996.

67. Human Rights Watch/Americas saw and photographed the torture equipment during our visit on April 2, 1997.

68. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Flix Jorge Romero, Lima, April 9, 1997.

69. Human Rights Watch/Americas interviews with Alfonso Rojas Colca and Jos Teofilo Huamn, Lima, April 4,1997.

70. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Martn Augusto Elguera, Lima, April 9, 1997.

71. "Salud sicolgica de rehenes est deteriorada," Expreso, March 31, 1997.

72. Judge Onsimo Julio Vela Velsquez, Informe No. 003-96-1JEPP, expediente No. 55-95, January 23,1996. Pages not numbered.

73. The forensic doctors asserted that it was impossible to determine whether the victim's lesions were self-inflicted or had been caused by a third party, but they went on, contradictorily, to say that the lesions had not been self-inflicted. Diligencia de necropsia en el cadver de Jhoel Huamn Garca. Ministerio Pblico Fiscala Mixta Pasco, date indistinct.

74. Judge Onsimo Vela Velsquez, Expediente No. 55-95, page un-numbered.

75. Penal Code, Book II, Title 1, Chapter 3, Article 121(3, ii).

76. Letter from Francisco Sobern, general coordinator of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos and Felicita Buenda Or, Chamaya's widow, to Luz Salgado Rubianes, president of the Congressional Human Rights Committee, November 9, 1995.

77. "Policas enfran taxista en cmica," El Popular, September 23, 1995. According to the same source, their superiors were complicit in their escape.

78. A police witnesses who was not identified told reporters that the officers responsible, apparently backed by the station chief, Carlos Snchez Gutirrez, hatched a plan to remove and "disappear" the body: "Lieutenant Zevallos tried to take the corpse away in the trunk of a private car, but because others tried to stop him, he began to shout like a madman, threatening to 'talk' about other abuses committed in the station. Later, he disappeared." "Jefes de cmica en Santa Felicia

implicados en crimen de taxista," El Popular, September 25, 1995.

79. "Asesinos de taxista se entregan a las autoridades y admiten su crimen," La Repblica, September 28, 1995.

80. According to a legal advisor to the criminal investigations department of the national police, the National Directorate for the Investigation of Crimes (Direccin Nacional de Investigacin del Crmen, DININCRI): "On this point, since the events took place in the installations of a police establishment and as a consequence of the carrying out of professional functions, the criminal conduct falls within the terms of Article 173 of the Constitution; for this reason the present advisor is of the opinion that, in application of Article 319 and 326 of the Code of Military Justice, it is of the exclusive competence of the military jurisdiction." Asesora Legal de la DININCRI-PNP, Dictmen no. 181-0AJ-DININCRI-PNP, September 25, 1995. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

81. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

82. Letter to the judge of the 40th Criminal Court, signed by Jorge Vega Fernndez, May 14, 1996.

83. The civilian and military judges also conflicted over the place where Zevallos would serve his sentence. After his conviction by the military court, police authorities refused to return him to Lurigancho, sending him to a military prison instead. According to a memo from the national penitentiary authorities to the judge, "this decision has caused administrative problems in this department in that the prisoner was interned in a public prison, Lurigancho, with a detention order issued by your worthy court, and in his capacity as accused, and he should have been returned to the same prison." Memo to the judge of the 40th Penal Court of Lima from an official of the National Penitentiary Institute (INP), a department of the Ministry of Justice, September 17, 1996.

84. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

85. "Policas de la delegacin de Brea asesinan a comerciante de lpidas," Expreso, March 25, 1996.

86. Manifestacin de Jos Enrique Palomino Garca, document bearing the National Police stamp, dated March 26, 1996.

87. Protocol de autopsia, Ref. Ofc. 384-96-14 FPPL-MP-FN, March 24, 1996.

88. Ampliacin de la Instructiva del Inculpado Alberto Snchez Vsquez, July 18, 1996.

89. Testimony of Jos Fiorentini Vergara, cited in summary of evidence by Judge Cecilia Bolack Baluarte of the 44th Criminal Court of Lima, November 6, 1996.

90. Testimony of Capt. Jorge Manuel Cheng Kong Chu, March 29, 1996.

91. Atestado No. 448 IC-H-DDCV, Delito Cometido por Funcionarios Pblicos- Abuso de Autoridad, April 2, 1996.

92. "Descuartizan a mujer agente del SIN y a otra la torturan y la internan en Hospital Militar," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "El ejrcito investigaba por 'infidencia' a Mariella Barreto la agente descuartizada," La Repblica, April 8, 1997; "Una agente de inteligencia asegura haber sido torturada," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Congreso pide informe a ministros por denuncias de torturas en el SIN,"

Expreso, April 8, 1997.

93. "Los planes al desnudo," La Repblica, April 7, 1997.

94. "Descuartizan a mujer."

95. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Orlando Barreto Pea, father of Mariella Barreto, April 7, 1997.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

47. Coln has acquired a reputation as a fierce defender of Fujimori's authoritarian policies. In 1993, she refused to allow foreign forensic experts permission to assist in the exhumation of the bodies of the La Cantuta victims; she helped instigate arbitrary legal action against journalist Ricardo Uceda, editor-in-chief of S magazine, after he had published evidence of the La Colina death squad's involvement in the Los Barrios massacre; she threatened to prosecute judge Antonia Saquicuray Snchez for continuing to investigate the group's involvement in the crime despite the recently promulgated amnesty law. See Americas Watch, Peru, Anatamy of a Cover-Up: the Disappearances at La Cantuta, September, 1993, p.14, and Human Rights Watch/Americas, World Report (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1996), p. 118.

48. Law No. 26695, of December 3, 1996.

49. Law No.26738 of January 7, 1997, widely known as the "third Coln Law." The "first Coln Law" helped Coln to remain in the post of attorney general, when her temporary appointment expired, by giving her the necessary seniority to do so. The "second Coln Law" extended her period of office by discounting her time as a temporary appointee. A recurrent feature of the current administration in Peru has been its use of a comfortable parliamentary majority to pass laws couched in general terms but designed to affect one individual in particular. Another example was the "Susana Law" designed to prevent the presidential candidacy of Fujimori's estranged wife, Susana Higuchi.

50. The original vote went against him due to a last-minute appointment by Dr. Coln of a new temporary senior prosecutor to the board of senior prosecutors responsible for the election. However, following widespread protests, Dr. Coln stood down.

51. "Fiscal de la Nacin Habemos:entrevista a Miguel Aljovn," Ideele, No. 94, March 1997.

52. Three of its members voted in December 1996 to support a motion of unconstitutionality against the voting requirement, presented by a group of thirty-six members of Congress. In its annual report for 1997, the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights criticized the requirement as one that allows for "overarching state authority, above the highest-level judicial bodies, allowing for the blatant interference of the Executive in the administration of justice and judicial reform," OEA/Ser.L/V/II.95, Doc 7 rev., March 14, 1997, p. 744.

53. Since Fujimori's first re-election was in 1995, this would make him eligible to stand again in 2000.

54. Two members of the court who strongly disagreed with the verdict published a minority view alongside it, despite having abstained from the vote.

55. Article 4 of the law stipulates that "the court resolves and adopts decisions by a simple majority of votes cast, except to resolve the inadmissability of an inconstitutionality complaint or to issue a sentence that declares unconstitutional a norm with the status of law, in which case six votes in favor are needed." (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

56. One of judges who abstained, Judge Jos Garca Marcelo, a former army chaplain, was suspected by Judge Revoredo of stealing a confidential draft of the ruling from her briefcase.

Other members of the court who voted for the resolution also reported confidential documents missing. The draft in question appears to have found its way into the hands of a group of C90-NM members of congress, who sent a letter to the president of the court, Dr. Ricardo Nugent Lpez-Chvez, urging him to vote against the ruling. Judge Jos Garca Marcelo received a vote of censure in the court for disclosing its confidential deliberations.

During the week of the ruling, Judge Revoredo alleged that her home had been under surveillance by naval intelligence agents posing as ice cream sellers and gardeners. She also said that a case against her concerning the importation of an automobile, which had been closed several years ago, was suddenly reopened by a judge in Callao, apparently in retaliation for her vote. On November 8, 1996, Nugent's police bodyguard was killed and two other police officers escorting his vehicle were seriously injured when gunmen attacked his vehicle. The press reported that the gunmen, who were attempting to kidnap a businessman when Nugent's car passed by, mistook it for a police vehicle and opened fire. These were not the only suspicious incidents involving members of the court. The Minister of the Interior, Gen. Juan Briones Dvila, denied that the attack was politically motivated. However, the incident remained unclarified. See "Qued al voto pedido para procesar a Delia Revoredo," La Repblica,April 9, 1997 and "Presidente del T.C. salva de balacera," La Repblica, November 9, 1997.

57. The statement read: "Given the institutional importance of the Constitutional Court, the IACHR hopes that it will be restored to regular functioning as soon as possible, guaranteeing due respect for its independence, impartiality and autonomy of the other organs of the state, and consolidating its position as the most authoritative interpreter of the Constitution and human rights."

58. Comunicado Oficial No. 003/SZSNC-7, Ministerio de Defensa, Lima, March 18, 1997.

59. "Ejrcito Peruano presenta armamento del frustrado ataque terrorista del MRTA," El Sol, March 20, 1997.

60. "Militares los torturaron para que admitieran ser del MRTA," La Repblica, March 26, 1997.

61. El Sol, March 20, 1997. The article in the pro-military El Sol appeared on the day after a television report denouncing that the peasants had been tortured into confessing. The article claimed that all of the detainees had been interrogated in the presence of the provincial prosecutor and that none had denounced torture. Thus, it concluded, the army had "de-activated another plan by the terrorists to attack the armed forces for committing abuses against peasants, in which they hoped to use the foreign press that is in our country for the hostage crisis." (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

62. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Paulino Sols Taype, Lima, April 4, 1997. Sols's allegation was confirmed by journalist Mara Elena Cornejo, who later interviewed the provincial prosecutor, Victoriano Nez Valdivia. He told her: "The thing is I don't have a budget for clothes, and as I was in civilian clothes and my shoes were dirty, the general lent me the uniform. Besides, it was 4 p.m. on a Friday and it was time for me to leave work, and I didn't have time to change. But I don't take pressure from anyone because I stand up to anyone like a man." Mara Elena Cornejo, "El Voltaje del Miedo, Caretas, No.1460, April 10, 1997, p.37.

63. The soldiers tried to force Loida Dionicio to admit that she had been recruited to the MRTA by another detainee, Aurelio Leiva, and that he had raped her. A later medical examination in the DINCOTE showed that Loida was, in fact, a virgin. Leiva had been singled out as the "leader" of the MRTA column.

64. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Ins Marilu Avila Glvez, March 1996.

65. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Emerson Wistrecher Cnepa, March 1996.

66. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Ins Marilu Avila Glvez, March 1996.

67. Human Rights Watch/Americas saw and photographed the torture equipment during our visit on April 2, 1997.

68. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Flix Jorge Romero, Lima, April 9, 1997.

69. Human Rights Watch/Americas interviews with Alfonso Rojas Colca and Jos Teofilo Huamn, Lima, April 4,1997.

70. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Martn Augusto Elguera, Lima, April 9, 1997.

71. "Salud sicolgica de rehenes est deteriorada," Expreso, March 31, 1997.

72. Judge Onsimo Julio Vela Velsquez, Informe No. 003-96-1JEPP, expediente No. 55-95, January 23,1996. Pages not numbered.

73. The forensic doctors asserted that it was impossible to determine whether the victim's lesions were self-inflicted or had been caused by a third party, but they went on, contradictorily, to say that the lesions had not been self-inflicted. Diligencia de necropsia en el cadver de Jhoel Huamn Garca. Ministerio Pblico Fiscala Mixta Pasco, date indistinct.

74. Judge Onsimo Vela Velsquez, Expediente No. 55-95, page un-numbered.

75. Penal Code, Book II, Title 1, Chapter 3, Article 121(3, ii).

76. Letter from Francisco Sobern, general coordinator of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos and Felicita Buenda Or, Chamaya's widow, to Luz Salgado Rubianes, president of the Congressional Human Rights Committee, November 9, 1995.

77. "Policas enfran taxista en cmica," El Popular, September 23, 1995. According to the same source, their superiors were complicit in their escape.

78. A police witnesses who was not identified told reporters that the officers responsible, apparently backed by the station chief, Carlos Snchez Gutirrez, hatched a plan to remove and "disappear" the body: "Lieutenant Zevallos tried to take the corpse away in the trunk of a private car, but because others tried to stop him, he began to shout like a madman, threatening to 'talk' about other abuses committed in the station. Later, he disappeared." "Jefes de cmica en Santa Felicia

implicados en crimen de taxista," El Popular, September 25, 1995.

79. "Asesinos de taxista se entregan a las autoridades y admiten su crimen," La Repblica, September 28, 1995.

80. According to a legal advisor to the criminal investigations department of the national police, the National Directorate for the Investigation of Crimes (Direccin Nacional de Investigacin del Crmen, DININCRI): "On this point, since the events took place in the installations of a police establishment and as a consequence of the carrying out of professional functions, the criminal conduct falls within the terms of Article 173 of the Constitution; for this reason the present advisor is of the opinion that, in application of Article 319 and 326 of the Code of Military Justice, it is of the exclusive competence of the military jurisdiction." Asesora Legal de la DININCRI-PNP, Dictmen no. 181-0AJ-DININCRI-PNP, September 25, 1995. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

81. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

82. Letter to the judge of the 40th Criminal Court, signed by Jorge Vega Fernndez, May 14, 1996.

83. The civilian and military judges also conflicted over the place where Zevallos would serve his sentence. After his conviction by the military court, police authorities refused to return him to Lurigancho, sending him to a military prison instead. According to a memo from the national penitentiary authorities to the judge, "this decision has caused administrative problems in this department in that the prisoner was interned in a public prison, Lurigancho, with a detention order issued by your worthy court, and in his capacity as accused, and he should have been returned to the same prison." Memo to the judge of the 40th Penal Court of Lima from an official of the National Penitentiary Institute (INP), a department of the Ministry of Justice, September 17, 1996.

84. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

85. "Policas de la delegacin de Brea asesinan a comerciante de lpidas," Expreso, March 25, 1996.

86. Manifestacin de Jos Enrique Palomino Garca, document bearing the National Police stamp, dated March 26, 1996.

87. Protocol de autopsia, Ref. Ofc. 384-96-14 FPPL-MP-FN, March 24, 1996.

88. Ampliacin de la Instructiva del Inculpado Alberto Snchez Vsquez, July 18, 1996.

89. Testimony of Jos Fiorentini Vergara, cited in summary of evidence by Judge Cecilia Bolack Baluarte of the 44th Criminal Court of Lima, November 6, 1996.

90. Testimony of Capt. Jorge Manuel Cheng Kong Chu, March 29, 1996.

91. Atestado No. 448 IC-H-DDCV, Delito Cometido por Funcionarios Pblicos- Abuso de Autoridad, April 2, 1996.

92. "Descuartizan a mujer agente del SIN y a otra la torturan y la internan en Hospital Militar," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "El ejrcito investigaba por 'infidencia' a Mariella Barreto la agente descuartizada," La Repblica, April 8, 1997; "Una agente de inteligencia asegura haber sido torturada," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Congreso pide informe a ministros por denuncias de torturas en el SIN," Expreso, April 8, 1997.

93. "Los planes al desnudo," La Repblica, April 7, 1997.

94. "Descuartizan a mujer."

95. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Orlando Barreto Pea, father of Mariella Barreto, April 7, 1997.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

48. Law No. 26695, of December 3, 1996.

49. Law No.26738 of January 7, 1997, widely known as the "third Coln Law." The "first Coln Law" helped Coln to remain in the post of attorney general, when her temporary appointment expired, by giving her the necessary seniority to do so. The "second Coln Law" extended her period of office by discounting her time as a temporary appointee. A recurrent feature of the current administration in Peru has been its use of a comfortable parliamentary majority to pass laws couched in general terms but designed to affect one individual in particular. Another example was the "Susana Law" designed to prevent the presidential candidacy of Fujimori's estranged wife, Susana Higuchi.

50. The original vote went against him due to a last-minute appointment by Dr. Coln of a new temporary senior prosecutor to the board of senior prosecutors responsible for the election. However, following widespread protests, Dr. Coln stood down.

51. "Fiscal de la Nacin Habemos:entrevista a Miguel Aljovn," Ideele, No. 94, March 1997.

52. Three of its members voted in December 1996 to support a motion of unconstitutionality against the voting requirement, presented by a group of thirty-six members of Congress. In its annual report for 1997, the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights criticized the requirement as one that allows for "overarching state authority, above the highest-level judicial bodies, allowing for the blatant interference of the Executive in the administration of justice and judicial reform," OEA/Ser.L/V/II.95, Doc 7 rev., March 14, 1997, p. 744.

53. Since Fujimori's first re-election was in 1995, this would make him eligible to stand again in 2000.

54. Two members of the court who strongly disagreed with the verdict published a minority view alongside it, despite having abstained from the vote.

55. Article 4 of the law stipulates that "the court resolves and adopts decisions by a simple majority of votes cast, except to resolve the inadmissability of an inconstitutionality complaint or to issue a sentence that declares unconstitutional a norm with the status of law, in which case six votes in favor are needed." (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

56. One of judges who abstained, Judge Jos Garca Marcelo, a former army chaplain, was suspected by Judge Revoredo of stealing a confidential draft of the ruling from her briefcase.

Other members of the court who voted for the resolution also reported confidential documents missing. The draft in question appears to have found its way into the hands of a group of C90-NM members of congress, who sent a letter to the president of the court, Dr. Ricardo Nugent Lpez-Chvez, urging him to vote against the ruling. Judge Jos Garca Marcelo received a vote of censure in the court for disclosing its confidential deliberations.

During the week of the ruling, Judge Revoredo alleged that her home had been under surveillance by naval intelligence agents posing as ice cream sellers and gardeners. She also said that a case against her concerning the importation of an automobile, which had been closed several years ago, was suddenly reopened by a judge in Callao, apparently in retaliation for her vote. On November 8, 1996, Nugent's police bodyguard was killed and two other police officers escorting his vehicle were seriously injured when gunmen attacked his vehicle. The press reported that the gunmen, who were attempting to kidnap a businessman when Nugent's car passed by, mistook it for a police vehicle and opened fire. These were not the only suspicious incidents involving members of the court. The Minister of the Interior, Gen. Juan Briones Dvila, denied that the attack was politically motivated. However, the incident remained unclarified. See "Qued al voto pedido para procesar a Delia Revoredo," La Repblica,April 9, 1997 and "Presidente del T.C. salva de balacera," La Repblica, November 9, 1997.

57. The statement read: "Given the institutional importance of the Constitutional Court, the IACHR hopes that it will be restored to regular functioning as soon as possible, guaranteeing due respect for its independence, impartiality and autonomy of the other organs of the state, and consolidating its position as the most authoritative interpreter of the Constitution and human rights."

58. Comunicado Oficial No. 003/SZSNC-7, Ministerio de Defensa, Lima, March 18, 1997.

59. "Ejrcito Peruano presenta armamento del frustrado ataque terrorista del MRTA," El Sol, March 20, 1997.

60. "Militares los torturaron para que admitieran ser del MRTA," La Repblica, March 26, 1997.

61. El Sol, March 20, 1997. The article in the pro-military El Sol appeared on the day after a television report denouncing that the peasants had been tortured into confessing. The article claimed that all of the detainees had been interrogated in the presence of the provincial prosecutor and that none had denounced torture. Thus, it concluded, the army had "de-activated another plan by the terrorists to attack the armed forces for committing abuses against peasants, in which they hoped to use the foreign press that is in our country for the hostage crisis." (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

62. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Paulino Sols Taype, Lima, April 4, 1997. Sols's allegation was confirmed by journalist Mara Elena Cornejo, who later interviewed the provincial prosecutor, Victoriano Nez Valdivia. He told her: "The thing is I don't have a budget for clothes, and as I was in civilian clothes and my shoes were dirty, the general lent me the uniform. Besides, it was 4 p.m. on a Friday and it was time for me to leave work, and I didn't have time to change. But I don't take pressure from anyone because I stand up to anyone like a man." Mara Elena Cornejo, "El Voltaje del Miedo, Caretas, No.1460, April 10, 1997, p.37.

63. The soldiers tried to force Loida Dionicio to admit that she had been recruited to the MRTA by another detainee, Aurelio Leiva, and that he had raped her. A later medical examination in the DINCOTE showed that Loida was, in fact, a virgin. Leiva had been singled out as the "leader" of the MRTA column.

64. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Ins Marilu Avila Glvez, March 1996.

65. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Emerson Wistrecher Cnepa, March 1996.

66. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Ins Marilu Avila Glvez, March 1996.

67. Human Rights Watch/Americas saw and photographed the torture equipment during our visit on April 2, 1997.

68. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Flix Jorge Romero, Lima, April 9, 1997.

69. Human Rights Watch/Americas interviews with Alfonso Rojas Colca and Jos Teofilo Huamn, Lima, April 4,1997.

70. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Martn Augusto Elguera, Lima, April 9, 1997.

71. "Salud sicolgica de rehenes est deteriorada," Expreso, March 31, 1997.

72. Judge Onsimo Julio Vela Velsquez, Informe No. 003-96-1JEPP, expediente No. 55-95, January 23,1996. Pages not numbered.

73. The forensic doctors asserted that it was impossible to determine whether the victim's lesions were self-inflicted or had been caused by a third party, but they went on, contradictorily, to say that the lesions had not been self-inflicted. Diligencia de necropsia en el cadver de Jhoel Huamn Garca. Ministerio Pblico Fiscala Mixta Pasco, date indistinct.

74. Judge Onsimo Vela Velsquez, Expediente No. 55-95, page un-numbered.

75. Penal Code, Book II, Title 1, Chapter 3, Article 121(3, ii).

76. Letter from Francisco Sobern, general coordinator of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos and Felicita Buenda Or, Chamaya's widow, to Luz Salgado Rubianes, president of the Congressional Human Rights Committee, November 9, 1995.

77. "Policas enfran taxista en cmica," El Popular, September 23, 1995. According to the same source, their superiors were complicit in their escape.

78. A police witnesses who was not identified told reporters that the officers responsible, apparently backed by the station chief, Carlos Snchez Gutirrez, hatched a plan to remove and "disappear" the body: "Lieutenant Zevallos tried to take the corpse away in the trunk of a private car, but because others tried to stop him, he began to shout like a madman, threatening to 'talk' about other abuses committed in the station. Later, he disappeared." "Jefes de cmica en Santa Felicia

implicados en crimen de taxista," El Popular, September 25, 1995.

79. "Asesinos de taxista se entregan a las autoridades y admiten su crimen," La Repblica, September 28, 1995.

80. According to a legal advisor to the criminal investigations department of the national police, the National Directorate for the Investigation of Crimes (Direccin Nacional de Investigacin del Crmen, DININCRI): "On this point, since the events took place in the installations of a police establishment and as a consequence of the carrying out of professional functions, the criminal conduct falls within the terms of Article 173 of the Constitution; for this reason the present advisor is of the opinion that, in application of Article 319 and 326 of the Code of Military Justice, it is of the exclusive competence of the military jurisdiction." Asesora Legal de la DININCRI-PNP, Dictmen no. 181-0AJ-DININCRI-PNP, September 25, 1995. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

81. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

82. Letter to the judge of the 40th Criminal Court, signed by Jorge Vega Fernndez, May 14, 1996.

83. The civilian and military judges also conflicted over the place where Zevallos would serve his sentence. After his conviction by the military court, police authorities refused to return him to Lurigancho, sending him to a military prison instead. According to a memo from the national penitentiary authorities to the judge, "this decision has caused administrative problems in this department in that the prisoner was interned in a public prison, Lurigancho, with a detention order issued by your worthy court, and in his capacity as accused, and he should have been returned to the same prison." Memo to the judge of the 40th Penal Court of Lima from an official of the National Penitentiary Institute (INP), a department of the Ministry of Justice, September 17, 1996.

84. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

85. "Policas de la delegacin de Brea asesinan a comerciante de lpidas," Expreso, March 25, 1996.

86. Manifestacin de Jos Enrique Palomino Garca, document bearing the National Police stamp, dated March 26, 1996.

87. Protocol de autopsia, Ref. Ofc. 384-96-14 FPPL-MP-FN, March 24, 1996.

88. Ampliacin de la Instructiva del Inculpado Alberto Snchez Vsquez, July 18, 1996.

89. Testimony of Jos Fiorentini Vergara, cited in summary of evidence by Judge Cecilia Bolack Baluarte of the 44th Criminal Court of Lima, November 6, 1996.

90. Testimony of Capt. Jorge Manuel Cheng Kong Chu, March 29, 1996.

91. Atestado No. 448 IC-H-DDCV, Delito Cometido por Funcionarios Pblicos- Abuso de Autoridad, April 2, 1996.

92. "Descuartizan a mujer agente del SIN y a otra la torturan y la internan en Hospital Militar," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "El ejrcito investigaba por 'infidencia' a Mariella Barreto la agente descuartizada," La Repblica, April 8, 1997; "Una agente de inteligencia asegura haber sido torturada," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Congreso pide informe a ministros por denuncias de torturas en el SIN," Expreso, April 8, 1997.

93. "Los planes al desnudo," La Repblica, April 7, 1997.

94. "Descuartizan a mujer."

95. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Orlando Barreto Pea, father of Mariella Barreto, April 7, 1997.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

49. Law No.26738 of January 7, 1997, widely known as the "third Coln Law." The "first Coln Law" helped Coln to remain in the post of attorney general, when her temporary appointment expired, by giving her the necessary seniority to do so. The "second Coln Law" extended her period of office by discounting her time as a temporary appointee. A recurrent feature of the current administration in Peru has been its use of a comfortable parliamentary majority to pass laws couched in general terms but designed to affect one individual in particular. Another example was the "Susana Law" designed to prevent the presidential candidacy of Fujimori's estranged wife, Susana Higuchi.

50. The original vote went against him due to a last-minute appointment by Dr. Coln of a new temporary senior prosecutor to the board of senior prosecutors responsible for the election. However, following widespread protests, Dr. Coln stood down.

51. "Fiscal de la Nacin Habemos:entrevista a Miguel Aljovn," Ideele, No. 94, March 1997.

52. Three of its members voted in December 1996 to support a motion of unconstitutionality against the voting requirement, presented by a group of thirty-six members of Congress. In its annual report for 1997, the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights criticized the requirement as one that allows for "overarching state authority, above the highest-level judicial bodies, allowing for the blatant interference of the Executive in the administration of justice and judicial reform," OEA/Ser.L/V/II.95, Doc 7 rev., March 14, 1997, p. 744.

53. Since Fujimori's first re-election was in 1995, this would make him eligible to stand again in 2000.

54. Two members of the court who strongly disagreed with the verdict published a minority view alongside it, despite having abstained from the vote.

55. Article 4 of the law stipulates that "the court resolves and adopts decisions by a simple majority of votes cast, except to resolve the inadmissability of an inconstitutionality complaint or to issue a sentence that declares unconstitutional a norm with the status of law, in which case six votes in favor are needed." (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

56. One of judges who abstained, Judge Jos Garca Marcelo, a former army chaplain, was suspected by Judge Revoredo of stealing a confidential draft of the ruling from her briefcase.

Other members of the court who voted for the resolution also reported confidential documents missing. The draft in question appears to have found its way into the hands of a group of C90-NM members of congress, who sent a letter to the president of the court, Dr. Ricardo Nugent Lpez-Chvez, urging him to vote against the ruling. Judge Jos Garca Marcelo received a vote of censure in the court for disclosing its confidential deliberations.

During the week of the ruling, Judge Revoredo alleged that her home had been under surveillance by naval intelligence agents posing as ice cream sellers and gardeners. She also said that a case against her concerning the importation of an automobile, which had been closed several years ago, was suddenly reopened by a judge in Callao, apparently in retaliation for her vote. On November 8, 1996, Nugent's police bodyguard was killed and two other police officers escorting his vehicle were seriously injured when gunmen attacked his vehicle. The press reported that the gunmen, who were attempting to kidnap a businessman when Nugent's car passed by, mistook it for a police vehicle and opened fire. These were not the only suspicious incidents involving members of the court. The Minister of the Interior, Gen. Juan Briones Dvila, denied that the attack was politically motivated. However, the incident remained unclarified. See "Qued al voto pedido para procesar a Delia Revoredo," La Repblica,April 9, 1997 and "Presidente del T.C. salva de balacera," La Repblica, November 9, 1997.

57. The statement read: "Given the institutional importance of the Constitutional Court, the IACHR hopes that it will be restored to regular functioning as soon as possible, guaranteeing due respect for its independence, impartiality and autonomy of the other organs of the state, and consolidating its position as the most authoritative interpreter of the Constitution and human rights."

58. Comunicado Oficial No. 003/SZSNC-7, Ministerio de Defensa, Lima, March 18, 1997.

59. "Ejrcito Peruano presenta armamento del frustrado ataque terrorista del MRTA," El Sol, March 20, 1997.

60. "Militares los torturaron para que admitieran ser del MRTA," La Repblica, March 26, 1997.

61. El Sol, March 20, 1997. The article in the pro-military El Sol appeared on the day after a television report denouncing that the peasants had been tortured into confessing. The article claimed that all of the detainees had been interrogated in the presence of the provincial prosecutor and that none had denounced torture. Thus, it concluded, the army had "de-activated another plan by the terrorists to attack the armed forces for committing abuses against peasants, in which they hoped to use the foreign press that is in our country for the hostage crisis." (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

62. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Paulino Sols Taype, Lima, April 4, 1997. Sols's allegation was confirmed by journalist Mara Elena Cornejo, who later interviewed the provincial prosecutor, Victoriano Nez Valdivia. He told her: "The thing is I don't have a budget for clothes, and as I was in civilian clothes and my shoes were dirty, the general lent me the uniform. Besides, it was 4 p.m. on a Friday and it was time for me to leave work, and I didn't have time to change. But I don't take pressure from anyone because I stand up to anyone like a man." Mara Elena Cornejo, "El Voltaje del Miedo, Caretas, No.1460, April 10, 1997, p.37.

63. The soldiers tried to force Loida Dionicio to admit that she had been recruited to the MRTA by another detainee, Aurelio Leiva, and that he had raped her. A later medical examination in the DINCOTE showed that Loida was, in fact, a virgin. Leiva had been singled out as the "leader" of the MRTA column.

64. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Ins Marilu Avila Glvez, March 1996.

65. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Emerson Wistrecher Cnepa, March 1996.

66. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Ins Marilu Avila Glvez, March 1996.

67. Human Rights Watch/Americas saw and photographed the torture equipment during our visit on April 2, 1997.

68. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Flix Jorge Romero, Lima, April 9, 1997.

69. Human Rights Watch/Americas interviews with Alfonso Rojas Colca and Jos Teofilo Huamn, Lima, April 4,1997.

70. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Martn Augusto Elguera, Lima, April 9, 1997.

71. "Salud sicolgica de rehenes est deteriorada," Expreso, March 31, 1997.

72. Judge Onsimo Julio Vela Velsquez, Informe No. 003-96-1JEPP, expediente No. 55-95, January 23,1996. Pages not numbered.

73. The forensic doctors asserted that it was impossible to determine whether the victim's lesions were self-inflicted or had been caused by a third party, but they went on, contradictorily, to say that the lesions had not been self-inflicted. Diligencia de necropsia en el cadver de Jhoel Huamn Garca. Ministerio Pblico Fiscala Mixta Pasco, date indistinct.

74. Judge Onsimo Vela Velsquez, Expediente No. 55-95, page un-numbered.

75. Penal Code, Book II, Title 1, Chapter 3, Article 121(3, ii).

76. Letter from Francisco Sobern, general coordinator of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos and Felicita Buenda Or, Chamaya's widow, to Luz Salgado Rubianes, president of the Congressional Human Rights Committee, November 9, 1995.

77. "Policas enfran taxista en cmica," El Popular, September 23, 1995. According to the same source, their superiors were complicit in their escape.

78. A police witnesses who was not identified told reporters that the officers responsible, apparently backed by the station chief, Carlos Snchez Gutirrez, hatched a plan to remove and "disappear" the body: "Lieutenant Zevallos tried to take the corpse away in the trunk of a private car, but because others tried to stop him, he began to shout like a madman, threatening to 'talk' about other abuses committed in the station. Later, he disappeared." "Jefes de cmica en Santa Felicia

implicados en crimen de taxista," El Popular, September 25, 1995.

79. "Asesinos de taxista se entregan a las autoridades y admiten su crimen," La Repblica, September 28, 1995.

80. According to a legal advisor to the criminal investigations department of the national police, the National Directorate for the Investigation of Crimes (Direccin Nacional de Investigacin del Crmen, DININCRI): "On this point, since the events took place in the installations of a police establishment and as a consequence of the carrying out of professional functions, the criminal conduct falls within the terms of Article 173 of the Constitution; for this reason the present advisor is of the opinion that, in application of Article 319 and 326 of the Code of Military Justice, it is of the exclusive competence of the military jurisdiction." Asesora Legal de la DININCRI-PNP, Dictmen no. 181-0AJ-DININCRI-PNP, September 25, 1995. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

81. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

82. Letter to the judge of the 40th Criminal Court, signed by Jorge Vega Fernndez, May 14, 1996.

83. The civilian and military judges also conflicted over the place where Zevallos would serve his sentence. After his conviction by the military court, police authorities refused to return him to Lurigancho, sending him to a military prison instead. According to a memo from the national penitentiary authorities to the judge, "this decision has caused administrative problems in this department in that the prisoner was interned in a public prison, Lurigancho, with a detention order issued by your worthy court, and in his capacity as accused, and he should have been returned to the same prison." Memo to the judge of the 40th Penal Court of Lima from an official of the National Penitentiary Institute (INP), a department of the Ministry of Justice, September 17, 1996.

84. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

85. "Policas de la delegacin de Brea asesinan a comerciante de lpidas," Expreso, March 25, 1996.

86. Manifestacin de Jos Enrique Palomino Garca, document bearing the National Police stamp, dated March 26, 1996.

87. Protocol de autopsia, Ref. Ofc. 384-96-14 FPPL-MP-FN, March 24, 1996.

88. Ampliacin de la Instructiva del Inculpado Alberto Snchez Vsquez, July 18, 1996.

89. Testimony of Jos Fiorentini Vergara, cited in summary of evidence by Judge Cecilia Bolack Baluarte of the 44th Criminal Court of Lima, November 6, 1996.

90. Testimony of Capt. Jorge Manuel Cheng Kong Chu, March 29, 1996.

91. Atestado No. 448 IC-H-DDCV, Delito Cometido por Funcionarios Pblicos- Abuso de Autoridad, April 2, 1996.

92. "Descuartizan a mujer agente del SIN y a otra la torturan y la internan en Hospital Militar," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "El ejrcito investigaba por 'infidencia' a Mariella Barreto la agente descuartizada," La Repblica, April 8, 1997; "Una agente de inteligencia asegura haber sido torturada," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Congreso pide informe a ministros por denuncias de torturas en el SIN," Expreso, April 8, 1997.

93. "Los planes al desnudo," La Repblica, April 7, 1997.

94. "Descuartizan a mujer."

95. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Orlando Barreto Pea, father of Mariella Barreto, April 7, 1997.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

50. The original vote went against him due to a last-minute appointment by Dr. Coln of a new temporary senior prosecutor to the board of senior prosecutors responsible for the election. However, following widespread protests, Dr. Coln stood down.

51. "Fiscal de la Nacin Habemos:entrevista a Miguel Aljovn," Ideele, No. 94, March 1997.

52. Three of its members voted in December 1996 to support a motion of unconstitutionality against the voting requirement, presented by a group of thirty-six members of Congress. In its annual report for 1997, the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights criticized the requirement as one that allows for "overarching state authority, above the highest-level judicial bodies, allowing for the blatant interference of the Executive in the administration of justice and judicial reform," OEA/Ser.L/V/II.95, Doc 7 rev., March 14, 1997, p. 744.

53. Since Fujimori's first re-election was in 1995, this would make him eligible to stand again in 2000.

54. Two members of the court who strongly disagreed with the verdict published a minority view alongside it, despite having abstained from the vote.

55. Article 4 of the law stipulates that "the court resolves and adopts decisions by a simple majority of votes cast, except to resolve the inadmissability of an inconstitutionality complaint or to issue a sentence that declares unconstitutional a norm with the status of law, in which case six votes in favor are needed." (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

56. One of judges who abstained, Judge Jos Garca Marcelo, a former army chaplain, was suspected by Judge Revoredo of stealing a confidential draft of the ruling from her briefcase.

Other members of the court who voted for the resolution also reported confidential documents missing. The draft in question appears to have found its way into the hands of a group of C90-NM members of congress, who sent a letter to the president of the court, Dr. Ricardo Nugent Lpez-Chvez, urging him to vote against the ruling. Judge Jos Garca Marcelo received a vote of censure in the court for disclosing its confidential deliberations.

During the week of the ruling, Judge Revoredo alleged that her home had been under surveillance by naval intelligence agents posing as ice cream sellers and gardeners. She also said that a case against her concerning the importation of an automobile, which had been closed several years ago, was suddenly reopened by a judge in Callao, apparently in retaliation for her vote. On November 8, 1996, Nugent's police bodyguard was killed and two other police officers escorting his vehicle were seriously injured when gunmen attacked his vehicle. The press reported that the gunmen, who were attempting to kidnap a businessman when Nugent's car passed by, mistook it for a police vehicle and opened fire. These were not the only suspicious incidents involving members of the court. The Minister of the Interior, Gen. Juan Briones Dvila, denied that the attack was politically motivated. However, the incident remained unclarified. See "Qued al voto pedido para procesar a Delia Revoredo," La Repblica,April 9, 1997 and "Presidente del T.C. salva de balacera," La Repblica, November 9, 1997.

57. The statement read: "Given the institutional importance of the Constitutional Court, the IACHR hopes that it will be restored to regular functioning as soon as possible, guaranteeing due respect for its independence, impartiality and autonomy of the other organs of the state, and consolidating its position as the most authoritative interpreter of the Constitution and human rights."

58. Comunicado Oficial No. 003/SZSNC-7, Ministerio de Defensa, Lima, March 18, 1997.

59. "Ejrcito Peruano presenta armamento del frustrado ataque terrorista del MRTA," El Sol, March 20, 1997.

60. "Militares los torturaron para que admitieran ser del MRTA," La Repblica, March 26, 1997.

61. El Sol, March 20, 1997. The article in the pro-military El Sol appeared on the day after a television report denouncing that the peasants had been tortured into confessing. The article claimed that all of the detainees had been interrogated in the presence of the provincial prosecutor and that none had denounced torture. Thus, it concluded, the army had "de-activated another plan by the terrorists to attack the armed forces for committing abuses against peasants, in which they hoped to use the foreign press that is in our country for the hostage crisis." (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

62. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Paulino Sols Taype, Lima, April 4, 1997. Sols's allegation was confirmed by journalist Mara Elena Cornejo, who later interviewed the provincial prosecutor, Victoriano Nez Valdivia. He told her: "The thing is I don't have a budget for clothes, and as I was in civilian clothes and my shoes were dirty, the general lent me the uniform. Besides, it was 4 p.m. on a Friday and it was time for me to leave work, and I didn't have time to change. But I don't take pressure from anyone because I stand up to anyone like a man." Mara Elena Cornejo, "El Voltaje del Miedo, Caretas, No.1460, April 10, 1997, p.37.

63. The soldiers tried to force Loida Dionicio to admit that she had been recruited to the MRTA by another detainee, Aurelio Leiva, and that he had raped her. A later medical examination in the DINCOTE showed that Loida was, in fact, a virgin. Leiva had been singled out as the "leader" of the MRTA column.

64. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Ins Marilu Avila Glvez, March 1996.

65. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Emerson Wistrecher Cnepa, March 1996.

66. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Ins Marilu Avila Glvez, March 1996.

67. Human Rights Watch/Americas saw and photographed the torture equipment during our visit on April 2, 1997.

68. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Flix Jorge Romero, Lima, April 9, 1997.

69. Human Rights Watch/Americas interviews with Alfonso Rojas Colca and Jos Teofilo Huamn, Lima, April 4,1997.

70. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Martn Augusto Elguera, Lima, April 9, 1997.

71. "Salud sicolgica de rehenes est deteriorada," Expreso, March 31, 1997.

72. Judge Onsimo Julio Vela Velsquez, Informe No. 003-96-1JEPP, expediente No. 55-95, January 23,1996. Pages not numbered.

73. The forensic doctors asserted that it was impossible to determine whether the victim's lesions were self-inflicted or had been caused by a third party, but they went on, contradictorily, to say that the lesions had not been self-inflicted. Diligencia de necropsia en el cadver de Jhoel Huamn Garca. Ministerio Pblico Fiscala Mixta Pasco, date indistinct.

74. Judge Onsimo Vela Velsquez, Expediente No. 55-95, page un-numbered.

75. Penal Code, Book II, Title 1, Chapter 3, Article 121(3, ii).

76. Letter from Francisco Sobern, general coordinator of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos and Felicita Buenda Or, Chamaya's widow, to Luz Salgado Rubianes, president of the Congressional Human Rights Committee, November 9, 1995.

77. "Policas enfran taxista en cmica," El Popular, September 23, 1995. According to the same source, their superiors were complicit in their escape.

78. A police witnesses who was not identified told reporters that the officers responsible, apparently backed by the station chief, Carlos Snchez Gutirrez, hatched a plan to remove and "disappear" the body: "Lieutenant Zevallos tried to take the corpse away in the trunk of a private car, but because others tried to stop him, he began to shout like a madman, threatening to 'talk' about other abuses committed in the station. Later, he disappeared." "Jefes de cmica en Santa Felicia

implicados en crimen de taxista," El Popular, September 25, 1995.

79. "Asesinos de taxista se entregan a las autoridades y admiten su crimen," La Repblica, September 28, 1995.

80. According to a legal advisor to the criminal investigations department of the national police, the National Directorate for the Investigation of Crimes (Direccin Nacional de Investigacin del Crmen, DININCRI): "On this point, since the events took place in the installations of a police establishment and as a consequence of the carrying out of professional functions, the criminal conduct falls within the terms of Article 173 of the Constitution; for this reason the present advisor is of the opinion that, in application of Article 319 and 326 of the Code of Military Justice, it is of the exclusive competence of the military jurisdiction." Asesora Legal de la DININCRI-PNP, Dictmen no. 181-0AJ-DININCRI-PNP, September 25, 1995. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

81. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

82. Letter to the judge of the 40th Criminal Court, signed by Jorge Vega Fernndez, May 14, 1996.

83. The civilian and military judges also conflicted over the place where Zevallos would serve his sentence. After his conviction by the military court, police authorities refused to return him to Lurigancho, sending him to a military prison instead. According to a memo from the national penitentiary authorities to the judge, "this decision has caused administrative problems in this department in that the prisoner was interned in a public prison, Lurigancho, with a detention order issued by your worthy court, and in his capacity as accused, and he should have been returned to the same prison." Memo to the judge of the 40th Penal Court of Lima from an official of the National Penitentiary Institute (INP), a department of the Ministry of Justice, September 17, 1996.

84. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

85. "Policas de la delegacin de Brea asesinan a comerciante de lpidas," Expreso, March 25, 1996.

86. Manifestacin de Jos Enrique Palomino Garca, document bearing the National Police stamp, dated March 26, 1996.

87. Protocol de autopsia, Ref. Ofc. 384-96-14 FPPL-MP-FN, March 24, 1996.

88. Ampliacin de la Instructiva del Inculpado Alberto Snchez Vsquez, July 18, 1996.

89. Testimony of Jos Fiorentini Vergara, cited in summary of evidence by Judge Cecilia Bolack Baluarte of the 44th Criminal Court of Lima, November 6, 1996.

90. Testimony of Capt. Jorge Manuel Cheng Kong Chu, March 29, 1996.

91. Atestado No. 448 IC-H-DDCV, Delito Cometido por Funcionarios Pblicos- Abuso de Autoridad, April 2, 1996.

92. "Descuartizan a mujer agente del SIN y a otra la torturan y la internan en Hospital Militar," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "El ejrcito investigaba por 'infidencia' a Mariella Barreto la agente descuartizada," La Repblica, April 8, 1997; "Una agente de inteligencia asegura haber sido torturada," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Congreso pide informe a ministros por denuncias de torturas en el SIN," Expreso, April 8, 1997.

93. "Los planes al desnudo," La Repblica, April 7, 1997.

94. "Descuartizan a mujer."

95. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Orlando Barreto Pea, father of Mariella Barreto, April 7, 1997.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

51. "Fiscal de la Nacin Habemos:entrevista a Miguel Aljovn," Ideele, No. 94, March 1997.

52. Three of its members voted in December 1996 to support a motion of unconstitutionality against the voting requirement, presented by a group of thirty-six members of Congress. In its annual report for 1997, the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights criticized the requirement as one that allows for "overarching state authority, above the highest-level judicial bodies, allowing for the blatant interference of the Executive in the administration of justice and judicial reform," OEA/Ser.L/V/II.95, Doc 7 rev., March 14, 1997, p. 744.

53. Since Fujimori's first re-election was in 1995, this would make him eligible to stand again in 2000.

54. Two members of the court who strongly disagreed with the verdict published a minority view alongside it, despite having abstained from the vote.

55. Article 4 of the law stipulates that "the court resolves and adopts decisions by a simple majority of votes cast, except to resolve the inadmissability of an inconstitutionality complaint or to issue a sentence that declares unconstitutional a norm with the status of law, in which case six votes in favor are needed." (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

56. One of judges who abstained, Judge Jos Garca Marcelo, a former army chaplain, was suspected by Judge Revoredo of stealing a confidential draft of the ruling from her briefcase.

Other members of the court who voted for the resolution also reported confidential documents missing. The draft in question appears to have found its way into the hands of a group of C90-NM members of congress, who sent a letter to the president of the court, Dr. Ricardo Nugent Lpez-Chvez, urging him to vote against the ruling. Judge Jos Garca Marcelo received a vote of censure in the court for disclosing its confidential deliberations.

During the week of the ruling, Judge Revoredo alleged that her home had been under surveillance by naval intelligence agents posing as ice cream sellers and gardeners. She also said that a case against her concerning the importation of an automobile, which had been closed several years ago, was suddenly reopened by a judge in Callao, apparently in retaliation for her vote. On November 8, 1996, Nugent's police bodyguard was killed and two other police officers escorting his vehicle were seriously injured when gunmen attacked his vehicle. The press reported that the gunmen, who were attempting to kidnap a businessman when Nugent's car passed by, mistook it for a police vehicle and opened fire. These were not the only suspicious incidents involving members of the court. The Minister of the Interior, Gen. Juan Briones Dvila, denied that the attack was politically motivated. However, the incident remained unclarified. See "Qued al voto pedido para procesar a Delia Revoredo," La Repblica,April 9, 1997 and "Presidente del T.C. salva de balacera," La Repblica, November 9, 1997.

57. The statement read: "Given the institutional importance of the Constitutional Court, the IACHR hopes that it will be restored to regular functioning as soon as possible, guaranteeing due respect for its independence, impartiality and autonomy of the other organs of the state, and consolidating its position as the most authoritative interpreter of the Constitution and human rights."

58. Comunicado Oficial No. 003/SZSNC-7, Ministerio de Defensa, Lima, March 18, 1997.

59. "Ejrcito Peruano presenta armamento del frustrado ataque terrorista del MRTA," El Sol, March 20, 1997.

60. "Militares los torturaron para que admitieran ser del MRTA," La Repblica, March 26, 1997.

61. El Sol, March 20, 1997. The article in the pro-military El Sol appeared on the day after a television report denouncing that the peasants had been tortured into confessing. The article claimed that all of the detainees had been interrogated in the presence of the provincial prosecutor and that none had denounced torture. Thus, it concluded, the army had "de-activated another plan by the terrorists to attack the armed forces for committing abuses against peasants, in which they hoped to use the foreign press that is in our country for the hostage crisis." (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

62. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Paulino Sols Taype, Lima, April 4, 1997. Sols's allegation was confirmed by journalist Mara Elena Cornejo, who later interviewed the provincial prosecutor, Victoriano Nez Valdivia. He told her: "The thing is I don't have a budget for clothes, and as I was in civilian clothes and my shoes were dirty, the general lent me the uniform. Besides, it was 4 p.m. on a Friday and it was time for me to leave work, and I didn't have time to change. But I don't take pressure from anyone because I stand up to anyone like a man." Mara Elena Cornejo, "El Voltaje del Miedo, Caretas, No.1460, April 10, 1997, p.37.

63. The soldiers tried to force Loida Dionicio to admit that she had been recruited to the MRTA by another detainee, Aurelio Leiva, and that he had raped her. A later medical examination in the DINCOTE showed that Loida was, in fact, a virgin. Leiva had been singled out as the "leader" of the MRTA column.

64. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Ins Marilu Avila Glvez, March 1996.

65. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Emerson Wistrecher Cnepa, March 1996.

66. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Ins Marilu Avila Glvez, March 1996.

67. Human Rights Watch/Americas saw and photographed the torture equipment during our visit on April 2, 1997.

68. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Flix Jorge Romero, Lima, April 9, 1997.

69. Human Rights Watch/Americas interviews with Alfonso Rojas Colca and Jos Teofilo Huamn, Lima, April 4,1997.

70. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Martn Augusto Elguera, Lima, April 9, 1997.

71. "Salud sicolgica de rehenes est deteriorada," Expreso, March 31, 1997.

72. Judge Onsimo Julio Vela Velsquez, Informe No. 003-96-1JEPP, expediente No. 55-95, January 23,1996. Pages not numbered.

73. The forensic doctors asserted that it was impossible to determine whether the victim's lesions were self-inflicted or had been caused by a third party, but they went on, contradictorily, to say that the lesions had not been self-inflicted. Diligencia de necropsia en el cadver de Jhoel Huamn Garca. Ministerio Pblico Fiscala Mixta Pasco, date indistinct.

74. Judge Onsimo Vela Velsquez, Expediente No. 55-95, page un-numbered.

75. Penal Code, Book II, Title 1, Chapter 3, Article 121(3, ii).

76. Letter from Francisco Sobern, general coordinator of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos and Felicita Buenda Or, Chamaya's widow, to Luz Salgado Rubianes, president of the Congressional Human Rights Committee, November 9, 1995.

77. "Policas enfran taxista en cmica," El Popular, September 23, 1995. According to the same source, their superiors were complicit in their escape.

78. A police witnesses who was not identified told reporters that the officers responsible, apparently backed by the station chief, Carlos Snchez Gutirrez, hatched a plan to remove and "disappear" the body: "Lieutenant Zevallos tried to take the corpse away in the trunk of a private car, but because others tried to stop him, he began to shout like a madman, threatening to 'talk' about other abuses committed in the station. Later, he disappeared." "Jefes de cmica en Santa Felicia

implicados en crimen de taxista," El Popular, September 25, 1995.

79. "Asesinos de taxista se entregan a las autoridades y admiten su crimen," La Repblica, September 28, 1995.

80. According to a legal advisor to the criminal investigations department of the national police, the National Directorate for the Investigation of Crimes (Direccin Nacional de Investigacin del Crmen, DININCRI): "On this point, since the events took place in the installations of a police establishment and as a consequence of the carrying out of professional functions, the criminal conduct falls within the terms of Article 173 of the Constitution; for this reason the present advisor is of the opinion that, in application of Article 319 and 326 of the Code of Military Justice, it is of the exclusive competence of the military jurisdiction." Asesora Legal de la DININCRI-PNP, Dictmen no. 181-0AJ-DININCRI-PNP, September 25, 1995. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

81. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

82. Letter to the judge of the 40th Criminal Court, signed by Jorge Vega Fernndez, May 14, 1996.

83. The civilian and military judges also conflicted over the place where Zevallos would serve his sentence. After his conviction by the military court, police authorities refused to return him to Lurigancho, sending him to a military prison instead. According to a memo from the national penitentiary authorities to the judge, "this decision has caused administrative problems in this department in that the prisoner was interned in a public prison, Lurigancho, with a detention order issued by your worthy court, and in his capacity as accused, and he should have been returned to the same prison." Memo to the judge of the 40th Penal Court of Lima from an official of the National Penitentiary Institute (INP), a department of the Ministry of Justice, September 17, 1996.

84. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

85. "Policas de la delegacin de Brea asesinan a comerciante de lpidas," Expreso, March 25, 1996.

86. Manifestacin de Jos Enrique Palomino Garca, document bearing the National Police stamp, dated March 26, 1996.

87. Protocol de autopsia, Ref. Ofc. 384-96-14 FPPL-MP-FN, March 24, 1996.

88. Ampliacin de la Instructiva del Inculpado Alberto Snchez Vsquez, July 18, 1996.

89. Testimony of Jos Fiorentini Vergara, cited in summary of evidence by Judge Cecilia Bolack Baluarte of the 44th Criminal Court of Lima, November 6, 1996.

90. Testimony of Capt. Jorge Manuel Cheng Kong Chu, March 29, 1996.

91. Atestado No. 448 IC-H-DDCV, Delito Cometido por Funcionarios Pblicos- Abuso de Autoridad, April 2, 1996.

92. "Descuartizan a mujer agente del SIN y a otra la torturan y la internan en Hospital Militar," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "El ejrcito investigaba por 'infidencia' a Mariella Barreto la agente descuartizada," La Repblica, April 8, 1997; "Una agente de inteligencia asegura haber sido torturada," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Congreso pide informe a ministros por denuncias de torturas en el SIN," Expreso, April 8, 1997.

93. "Los planes al desnudo," La Repblica, April 7, 1997.

94. "Descuartizan a mujer."

95. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Orlando Barreto Pea, father of Mariella Barreto, April 7, 1997.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

52. Three of its members voted in December 1996 to support a motion of unconstitutionality against the voting requirement, presented by a group of thirty-six members of Congress. In its annual report for 1997, the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights criticized the requirement as one that allows for "overarching state authority, above the highest-level judicial bodies, allowing for the blatant interference of the Executive in the administration of justice and judicial reform," OEA/Ser.L/V/II.95, Doc 7 rev., March 14, 1997, p. 744.

53. Since Fujimori's first re-election was in 1995, this would make him eligible to stand again in 2000.

54. Two members of the court who strongly disagreed with the verdict published a minority view alongside it, despite having abstained from the vote.

55. Article 4 of the law stipulates that "the court resolves and adopts decisions by a simple majority of votes cast, except to resolve the inadmissability of an inconstitutionality complaint or to issue a sentence that declares unconstitutional a norm with the status of law, in which case six votes in favor are needed." (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

56. One of judges who abstained, Judge Jos Garca Marcelo, a former army chaplain, was suspected by Judge Revoredo of stealing a confidential draft of the ruling from her briefcase.

Other members of the court who voted for the resolution also reported confidential documents missing. The draft in question appears to have found its way into the hands of a group of C90-NM members of congress, who sent a letter to the president of the court, Dr. Ricardo Nugent Lpez-Chvez, urging him to vote against the ruling. Judge Jos Garca Marcelo received a vote of censure in the court for disclosing its confidential deliberations.

During the week of the ruling, Judge Revoredo alleged that her home had been under surveillance by naval intelligence agents posing as ice cream sellers and gardeners. She also said that a case against her concerning the importation of an automobile, which had been closed several years ago, was suddenly reopened by a judge in Callao, apparently in retaliation for her vote. On November 8, 1996, Nugent's police bodyguard was killed and two other police officers escorting his vehicle were seriously injured when gunmen attacked his vehicle. The press reported that the gunmen, who were attempting to kidnap a businessman when Nugent's car passed by, mistook it for a police vehicle and opened fire. These were not the only suspicious incidents involving members of the court. The Minister of the Interior, Gen. Juan Briones Dvila, denied that the attack was politically motivated. However, the incident remained unclarified. See "Qued al voto pedido para procesar a Delia Revoredo," La Repblica,April 9, 1997 and "Presidente del T.C. salva de balacera," La Repblica, November 9, 1997.

57. The statement read: "Given the institutional importance of the Constitutional Court, the IACHR hopes that it will be restored to regular functioning as soon as possible, guaranteeing due respect for its independence, impartiality and autonomy of the other organs of the state, and consolidating its position as the most authoritative interpreter of the Constitution and human rights."

58. Comunicado Oficial No. 003/SZSNC-7, Ministerio de Defensa, Lima, March 18, 1997.

59. "Ejrcito Peruano presenta armamento del frustrado ataque terrorista del MRTA," El Sol, March 20, 1997.

60. "Militares los torturaron para que admitieran ser del MRTA," La Repblica, March 26, 1997.

61. El Sol, March 20, 1997. The article in the pro-military El Sol appeared on the day after a television report denouncing that the peasants had been tortured into confessing. The article claimed that all of the detainees had been interrogated in the presence of the provincial prosecutor and that none had denounced torture. Thus, it concluded, the army had "de-activated another plan by the terrorists to attack the armed forces for committing abuses against peasants, in which they hoped to use the foreign press that is in our country for the hostage crisis." (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

62. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Paulino Sols Taype, Lima, April 4, 1997. Sols's allegation was confirmed by journalist Mara Elena Cornejo, who later interviewed the provincial prosecutor, Victoriano Nez Valdivia. He told her: "The thing is I don't have a budget for clothes, and as I was in civilian clothes and my shoes were dirty, the general lent me the uniform. Besides, it was 4 p.m. on a Friday and it was time for me to leave work, and I didn't have time to change. But I don't take pressure from anyone because I stand up to anyone like a man." Mara Elena Cornejo, "El Voltaje del Miedo, Caretas, No.1460, April 10, 1997, p.37.

63. The soldiers tried to force Loida Dionicio to admit that she had been recruited to the MRTA by another detainee, Aurelio Leiva, and that he had raped her. A later medical examination in the DINCOTE showed that Loida was, in fact, a virgin. Leiva had been singled out as the "leader" of the MRTA column.

64. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Ins Marilu Avila Glvez, March 1996.

65. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Emerson Wistrecher Cnepa, March 1996.

66. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Ins Marilu Avila Glvez, March 1996.

67. Human Rights Watch/Americas saw and photographed the torture equipment during our visit on April 2, 1997.

68. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Flix Jorge Romero, Lima, April 9, 1997.

69. Human Rights Watch/Americas interviews with Alfonso Rojas Colca and Jos Teofilo Huamn, Lima, April 4,1997.

70. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Martn Augusto Elguera, Lima, April 9, 1997.

71. "Salud sicolgica de rehenes est deteriorada," Expreso, March 31, 1997.

72. Judge Onsimo Julio Vela Velsquez, Informe No. 003-96-1JEPP, expediente No. 55-95, January 23,1996. Pages not numbered.

73. The forensic doctors asserted that it was impossible to determine whether the victim's lesions were self-inflicted or had been caused by a third party, but they went on, contradictorily, to say that the lesions had not been self-inflicted. Diligencia de necropsia en el cadver de Jhoel Huamn Garca. Ministerio Pblico Fiscala Mixta Pasco, date indistinct.

74. Judge Onsimo Vela Velsquez, Expediente No. 55-95, page un-numbered.

75. Penal Code, Book II, Title 1, Chapter 3, Article 121(3, ii).

76. Letter from Francisco Sobern, general coordinator of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos and Felicita Buenda Or, Chamaya's widow, to Luz Salgado Rubianes, president of the Congressional Human Rights Committee, November 9, 1995.

77. "Policas enfran taxista en cmica," El Popular, September 23, 1995. According to the same source, their superiors were complicit in their escape.

78. A police witnesses who was not identified told reporters that the officers responsible, apparently backed by the station chief, Carlos Snchez Gutirrez, hatched a plan to remove and "disappear" the body: "Lieutenant Zevallos tried to take the corpse away in the trunk of a private car, but because others tried to stop him, he began to shout like a madman, threatening to 'talk' about other abuses committed in the station. Later, he disappeared." "Jefes de cmica en Santa Felicia

implicados en crimen de taxista," El Popular, September 25, 1995.

79. "Asesinos de taxista se entregan a las autoridades y admiten su crimen," La Repblica, September 28, 1995.

80. According to a legal advisor to the criminal investigations department of the national police, the National Directorate for the Investigation of Crimes (Direccin Nacional de Investigacin del Crmen, DININCRI): "On this point, since the events took place in the installations of a police establishment and as a consequence of the carrying out of professional functions, the criminal conduct falls within the terms of Article 173 of the Constitution; for this reason the present advisor is of the opinion that, in application of Article 319 and 326 of the Code of Military Justice, it is of the exclusive competence of the military jurisdiction." Asesora Legal de la DININCRI-PNP, Dictmen no. 181-0AJ-DININCRI-PNP, September 25, 1995. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

81. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

82. Letter to the judge of the 40th Criminal Court, signed by Jorge Vega Fernndez, May 14, 1996.

83. The civilian and military judges also conflicted over the place where Zevallos would serve his sentence. After his conviction by the military court, police authorities refused to return him to Lurigancho, sending him to a military prison instead. According to a memo from the national penitentiary authorities to the judge, "this decision has caused administrative problems in this department in that the prisoner was interned in a public prison, Lurigancho, with a detention order issued by your worthy court, and in his capacity as accused, and he should have been returned to the same prison." Memo to the judge of the 40th Penal Court of Lima from an official of the National Penitentiary Institute (INP), a department of the Ministry of Justice, September 17, 1996.

84. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

85. "Policas de la delegacin de Brea asesinan a comerciante de lpidas," Expreso, March 25, 1996.

86. Manifestacin de Jos Enrique Palomino Garca, document bearing the National Police stamp, dated March 26, 1996.

87. Protocol de autopsia, Ref. Ofc. 384-96-14 FPPL-MP-FN, March 24, 1996.

88. Ampliacin de la Instructiva del Inculpado Alberto Snchez Vsquez, July 18, 1996.

89. Testimony of Jos Fiorentini Vergara, cited in summary of evidence by Judge Cecilia Bolack Baluarte of the 44th Criminal Court of Lima, November 6, 1996.

90. Testimony of Capt. Jorge Manuel Cheng Kong Chu, March 29, 1996.

91. Atestado No. 448 IC-H-DDCV, Delito Cometido por Funcionarios Pblicos- Abuso de Autoridad, April 2, 1996.

92. "Descuartizan a mujer agente del SIN y a otra la torturan y la internan en Hospital Militar," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "El ejrcito investigaba por 'infidencia' a Mariella Barreto la agente descuartizada," La Repblica, April 8, 1997; "Una agente de inteligencia asegura haber sido torturada," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Congreso pide informe a ministros por denuncias de torturas en el SIN," Expreso, April 8, 1997.

93. "Los planes al desnudo," La Repblica, April 7, 1997.

94. "Descuartizan a mujer."

95. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Orlando Barreto Pea, father of Mariella Barreto, April 7, 1997.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord"

with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

53. Since Fujimori's first re-election was in 1995, this would make him eligible to stand again in 2000.

54. Two members of the court who strongly disagreed with the verdict published a minority view alongside it, despite having abstained from the vote.

55. Article 4 of the law stipulates that "the court resolves and adopts decisions by a simple majority of votes cast, except to resolve the inadmissability of an inconstitutionality complaint or to issue a sentence that declares unconstitutional a norm with the status of law, in which case six votes in favor are needed." (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

56. One of judges who abstained, Judge Jos Garca Marcelo, a former army chaplain, was suspected by Judge Revoredo of stealing a confidential draft of the ruling from her briefcase.

Other members of the court who voted for the resolution also reported confidential documents missing. The draft in question appears to have found its way into the hands of a group of C90-NM members of congress, who sent a letter to the president of the court, Dr. Ricardo Nugent Lpez-Chvez, urging him to vote against the ruling. Judge Jos Garca Marcelo received a vote of censure in the court for disclosing its confidential deliberations.

During the week of the ruling, Judge Revoredo alleged that her home had been under surveillance by naval intelligence agents posing as ice cream sellers and gardeners. She also said that a case against her concerning the importation of an automobile, which had been closed several years ago, was suddenly reopened by a judge in Callao, apparently in retaliation for her vote. On November 8, 1996, Nugent's police bodyguard was killed and two other police officers escorting his vehicle were seriously injured when gunmen attacked his vehicle. The press reported that the gunmen, who were attempting to kidnap a businessman when Nugent's car passed by, mistook it for a police vehicle and opened fire. These were not the only suspicious incidents involving members of the court. The Minister of the Interior, Gen. Juan Briones Dvila, denied that the attack was politically motivated. However, the incident remained unclarified. See "Qued al voto pedido para procesar a Delia Revoredo," La Repblica,April 9, 1997 and "Presidente del T.C. salva de balacera," La Repblica, November 9, 1997.

57. The statement read: "Given the institutional importance of the Constitutional Court, the IACHR hopes that it will be restored to regular functioning as soon as possible, guaranteeing due respect for its independence, impartiality and autonomy of the other organs of the state, and consolidating its position as the most authoritative interpreter of the Constitution and human rights."

58. Comunicado Oficial No. 003/SZSNC-7, Ministerio de Defensa, Lima, March 18, 1997.

59. "Ejrcito Peruano presenta armamento del frustrado ataque terrorista del MRTA," El Sol, March 20, 1997.

60. "Militares los torturaron para que admitieran ser del MRTA," La Repblica, March 26, 1997.

61. El Sol, March 20, 1997. The article in the pro-military El Sol appeared on the day after a television report denouncing that the peasants had been tortured into confessing. The article claimed that all of the detainees had been interrogated in the presence of the provincial prosecutor and that none had denounced torture. Thus, it concluded, the army had "de-activated another plan by the terrorists to attack the armed forces for committing abuses against peasants, in which they hoped to use the foreign press that is in our country for the hostage crisis." (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

62. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Paulino Sols Taype, Lima, April 4, 1997. Sols's allegation was confirmed by journalist Mara Elena Cornejo, who later interviewed the provincial prosecutor, Victoriano Nez Valdivia. He told her: "The thing is I don't have a budget for clothes, and as I was in civilian clothes and my shoes were dirty, the general lent me the uniform. Besides, it was 4 p.m. on a Friday and it was time for me to leave work, and I didn't have time to change. But I don't take pressure from anyone because I stand up to anyone like a man." Mara Elena Cornejo, "El Voltaje del Miedo, Caretas, No.1460, April 10, 1997, p.37.

63. The soldiers tried to force Loida Dionicio to admit that she had been recruited to the MRTA by another detainee, Aurelio Leiva, and that he had raped her. A later medical examination in the DINCOTE showed that Loida was, in fact, a virgin. Leiva had been singled out as the "leader" of the MRTA column.

64. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Ins Marilu Avila Glvez, March 1996.

65. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Emerson Wistrecher Cnepa, March 1996.

66. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Ins Marilu Avila Glvez, March 1996.

67. Human Rights Watch/Americas saw and photographed the torture equipment during our visit on April 2, 1997.

68. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Flix Jorge Romero, Lima, April 9, 1997.

69. Human Rights Watch/Americas interviews with Alfonso Rojas Colca and Jos Teofilo Huamn, Lima, April 4,1997.

70. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Martn Augusto Elguera, Lima, April 9, 1997.

71. "Salud sicolgica de rehenes est deteriorada," Expreso, March 31, 1997.

72. Judge Onsimo Julio Vela Velsquez, Informe No. 003-96-1JEPP, expediente No. 55-95, January 23,1996. Pages not numbered.

73. The forensic doctors asserted that it was impossible to determine whether the victim's lesions were self-inflicted or had been caused by a third party, but they went on, contradictorily, to say that the lesions had not been self-inflicted. Diligencia de necropsia en el cadver de Jhoel Huamn Garca. Ministerio Pblico Fiscala Mixta Pasco, date indistinct.

74. Judge Onsimo Vela Velsquez, Expediente No. 55-95, page un-numbered.

75. Penal Code, Book II, Title 1, Chapter 3, Article 121(3, ii).

76. Letter from Francisco Sobern, general coordinator of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos and Felicita Buenda Or, Chamaya's widow, to Luz Salgado Rubianes, president of the Congressional Human Rights Committee, November 9, 1995.

77. "Policas enfran taxista en cmica," El Popular, September 23, 1995. According to the same source, their superiors were complicit in their escape.

78. A police witnesses who was not identified told reporters that the officers responsible, apparently backed by the station chief, Carlos Snchez Gutirrez, hatched a plan to remove and "disappear" the body: "Lieutenant Zevallos tried to take the corpse away in the trunk of a private car, but because others tried to stop him, he began to shout like a madman, threatening to 'talk' about other abuses committed in the station. Later, he disappeared." "Jefes de cmica en Santa Felicia

implicados en crimen de taxista," El Popular, September 25, 1995.

79. "Asesinos de taxista se entregan a las autoridades y admiten su crimen," La Repblica, September 28, 1995.

80. According to a legal advisor to the criminal investigations department of the national police, the National Directorate for the Investigation of Crimes (Direccin Nacional de Investigacin del Crmen, DININCRI): "On this point, since the events took place in the installations of a police establishment and as a consequence of the carrying out of professional functions, the criminal conduct falls within the terms of Article 173 of the Constitution; for this reason the present advisor is of the opinion that, in application of Article 319 and 326 of the Code of Military Justice, it is of the exclusive competence of the military jurisdiction." Asesora Legal de la DININCRI-PNP, Dictmen no. 181-0AJ-DININCRI-PNP, September 25, 1995. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

81. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

82. Letter to the judge of the 40th Criminal Court, signed by Jorge Vega Fernndez, May 14, 1996.

83. The civilian and military judges also conflicted over the place where Zevallos would serve his sentence. After his conviction by the military court, police authorities refused to return him to Lurigancho, sending him to a military prison instead. According to a memo from the national penitentiary authorities to the judge, "this decision has caused administrative problems in this department in that the prisoner was interned in a public prison, Lurigancho, with a detention order issued by your worthy court, and in his capacity as accused, and he should have been returned to the same prison." Memo to the judge of the 40th Penal Court of Lima from an official of the National Penitentiary Institute (INP), a department of the Ministry of Justice, September 17, 1996.

84. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

85. "Policas de la delegacin de Brea asesinan a comerciante de lpidas," Expreso, March 25, 1996.

86. Manifestacin de Jos Enrique Palomino Garca, document bearing the National Police stamp, dated March 26, 1996.

87. Protocol de autopsia, Ref. Ofc. 384-96-14 FPPL-MP-FN, March 24, 1996.

88. Ampliacin de la Instructiva del Inculpado Alberto Snchez Vsquez, July 18, 1996.

89. Testimony of Jos Fiorentini Vergara, cited in summary of evidence by Judge Cecilia Bolack Baluarte of the 44th Criminal Court of Lima, November 6, 1996.

90. Testimony of Capt. Jorge Manuel Cheng Kong Chu, March 29, 1996.

91. Atestado No. 448 IC-H-DDCV, Delito Cometido por Funcionarios Pblicos- Abuso de Autoridad, April 2, 1996.

92. "Descuartizan a mujer agente del SIN y a otra la torturan y la internan en Hospital Militar," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "El ejrcito investigaba por 'infidencia' a Mariella Barreto la agente descuartizada," La Repblica, April 8, 1997; "Una agente de inteligencia asegura haber sido torturada," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Congreso pide informe a ministros por denuncias de torturas en el SIN," Expreso, April 8, 1997.

93. "Los planes al desnudo," La Repblica, April 7, 1997.

94. "Descuartizan a mujer."

95. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Orlando Barreto Pea, father of Mariella Barreto, April 7, 1997.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord"

with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

54. Two members of the court who strongly disagreed with the verdict published a minority view alongside it, despite having abstained from the vote.

55. Article 4 of the law stipulates that "the court resolves and adopts decisions by a simple majority of votes cast, except to resolve the inadmissability of an inconstitutionality complaint or to issue a sentence that declares unconstitutional a norm with the status of law, in which case six votes in favor are needed." (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

56. One of judges who abstained, Judge Jos Garca Marcelo, a former army chaplain, was suspected by Judge Revoredo of stealing a confidential draft of the ruling from her briefcase.

Other members of the court who voted for the resolution also reported confidential documents missing. The draft in question appears to have found its way into the hands of a group of C90-NM members of congress, who sent a letter to the president of the court, Dr. Ricardo Nugent Lpez-Chvez, urging him to vote against the ruling. Judge Jos Garca Marcelo received a vote of censure in the court for disclosing its confidential deliberations.

During the week of the ruling, Judge Revoredo alleged that her home had been under surveillance by naval intelligence agents posing as ice cream sellers and gardeners. She also said that a case against her concerning the importation of an automobile, which had been closed several years ago, was suddenly reopened by a judge in Callao, apparently in retaliation for her vote. On November 8, 1996, Nugent's police bodyguard was killed and two other police officers escorting his vehicle were seriously injured when gunmen attacked his vehicle. The press reported that the gunmen, who were attempting to kidnap a businessman when Nugent's car passed by, mistook it for a police vehicle and opened fire. These were not the only suspicious incidents involving members of the court. The Minister of the Interior, Gen. Juan Briones Dvila, denied that the attack was politically motivated. However, the incident remained unclarified. See "Qued al voto pedido para procesar a Delia Revoredo," La Repblica,April 9, 1997 and "Presidente del T.C. salva de balacera," La Repblica, November 9, 1997.

57. The statement read: "Given the institutional importance of the Constitutional Court, the IACHR hopes that it will be restored to regular functioning as soon as possible, guaranteeing due respect for its independence, impartiality and autonomy of the other organs of the state, and consolidating its position as the most authoritative interpreter of the Constitution and human rights."

58. Comunicado Oficial No. 003/SZSNC-7, Ministerio de Defensa, Lima, March 18, 1997.

59. "Ejrcito Peruano presenta armamento del frustrado ataque terrorista del MRTA," El Sol, March 20, 1997.

60. "Militares los torturaron para que admitieran ser del MRTA," La Repblica, March 26, 1997.

61. El Sol, March 20, 1997. The article in the pro-military El Sol appeared on the day after a television report denouncing that the peasants had been tortured into confessing. The article claimed that all of the detainees had been interrogated in the presence of the provincial prosecutor and that none had denounced torture. Thus, it concluded, the army had "de-activated another plan by the terrorists to attack the armed forces for committing abuses against peasants, in which they hoped to use the foreign press that is in our country for the hostage crisis." (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

62. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Paulino Sols Taype, Lima, April 4, 1997. Sols's allegation was confirmed by journalist Mara Elena Cornejo, who later interviewed the provincial prosecutor, Victoriano Nez Valdivia. He told her: "The thing is I don't have a budget for clothes, and as I was in civilian clothes and my shoes were dirty, the general lent me the uniform. Besides, it was 4 p.m. on a Friday and it was time for me to leave work, and I didn't have time to change. But I don't take pressure from anyone because I stand up to anyone like a man." Mara Elena Cornejo, "El Voltaje del Miedo, Caretas, No.1460, April 10, 1997, p.37.

63. The soldiers tried to force Loida Dionicio to admit that she had been recruited to the MRTA by another detainee, Aurelio Leiva, and that he had raped her. A later medical examination in the DINCOTE showed that Loida was, in fact, a virgin. Leiva had been singled out as the "leader" of the MRTA column.

64. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Ins Marilu Avila Glvez, March 1996.

65. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Emerson Wistrecher Cnepa, March 1996.

66. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Ins Marilu Avila Glvez, March 1996.

67. Human Rights Watch/Americas saw and photographed the torture equipment during our visit on April 2, 1997.

68. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Flix Jorge Romero, Lima, April 9, 1997.

69. Human Rights Watch/Americas interviews with Alfonso Rojas Colca and Jos Teofilo Huamn, Lima, April 4,1997.

70. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Martn Augusto Elguera, Lima, April 9, 1997.

71. "Salud sicolgica de rehenes est deteriorada," Expreso, March 31, 1997.

72. Judge Onsimo Julio Vela Velsquez, Informe No. 003-96-1JEPP, expediente No. 55-95, January 23,1996. Pages not numbered.

73. The forensic doctors asserted that it was impossible to determine whether the victim's lesions were self-inflicted or had been caused by a third party, but they went on, contradictorily, to say that the lesions had not been self-inflicted. Diligencia de necropsia en el cadver de Jhoel Huamn Garca. Ministerio Pblico Fiscala Mixta Pasco, date indistinct.

74. Judge Onsimo Vela Velsquez, Expediente No. 55-95, page un-numbered.

75. Penal Code, Book II, Title 1, Chapter 3, Article 121(3, ii).

76. Letter from Francisco Sobern, general coordinator of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos and Felicita Buenda Or, Chamaya's widow, to Luz Salgado Rubianes, president of the Congressional Human Rights Committee, November 9, 1995.

77. "Policas enfran taxista en cmica," El Popular, September 23, 1995. According to the same source, their superiors were complicit in their escape.

78. A police witnesses who was not identified told reporters that the officers responsible, apparently backed by the station chief, Carlos Snchez Gutirrez, hatched a plan to remove and "disappear" the body: "Lieutenant Zevallos tried to take the corpse away in the trunk of a private car, but because others tried to stop him, he began to shout like a madman, threatening to 'talk' about other abuses committed in the station. Later, he disappeared." "Jefes de cmica en Santa Felicia

implicados en crimen de taxista," El Popular, September 25, 1995.

79. "Asesinos de taxista se entregan a las autoridades y admiten su crimen," La Repblica, September 28, 1995.

80. According to a legal advisor to the criminal investigations department of the national police, the National Directorate for the Investigation of Crimes (Direccin Nacional de Investigacin del Crmen, DININCRI): "On this point, since the events took place in the installations of a police establishment and as a consequence of the carrying out of professional functions, the criminal conduct falls within the terms of Article 173 of the Constitution; for this reason the present advisor is of the opinion that, in application of Article 319 and 326 of the Code of Military Justice, it is of the exclusive competence of the military jurisdiction." Asesora Legal de la DININCRI-PNP, Dictmen no. 181-0AJ-DININCRI-PNP, September 25, 1995. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

81. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

82. Letter to the judge of the 40th Criminal Court, signed by Jorge Vega Fernndez, May 14, 1996.

83. The civilian and military judges also conflicted over the place where Zevallos would serve his sentence. After his conviction by the military court, police authorities refused to return him to Lurigancho, sending him to a military prison instead. According to a memo from the national penitentiary authorities to the judge, "this decision has caused administrative problems in this department in that the prisoner was interned in a public prison, Lurigancho, with a detention order issued by your worthy court, and in his capacity as accused, and he should have been returned to the same prison." Memo to the judge of the 40th Penal Court of Lima from an official of the National Penitentiary Institute (INP), a department of the Ministry of Justice, September 17, 1996.

84. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

85. "Policas de la delegacin de Brea asesinan a comerciante de lpidas," Expreso, March 25, 1996.

86. Manifestacin de Jos Enrique Palomino Garca, document bearing the National Police stamp, dated March 26, 1996.

87. Protocol de autopsia, Ref. Ofc. 384-96-14 FPPL-MP-FN, March 24, 1996.

88. Ampliacin de la Instructiva del Inculpado Alberto Snchez Vsquez, July 18, 1996.

89. Testimony of Jos Fiorentini Vergara, cited in summary of evidence by Judge Cecilia Bolack Baluarte of the 44th Criminal Court of Lima, November 6, 1996.

90. Testimony of Capt. Jorge Manuel Cheng Kong Chu, March 29, 1996.

91. Atestado No. 448 IC-H-DDCV, Delito Cometido por Funcionarios Pblicos- Abuso de Autoridad, April 2, 1996.

92. "Descuartizan a mujer agente del SIN y a otra la torturan y la internan en Hospital Militar," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "El ejrcito investigaba por 'infidencia' a Mariella Barreto la agente descuartizada," La Repblica, April 8, 1997; "Una agente de inteligencia asegura haber sido torturada," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Congreso pide informe a ministros por denuncias de torturas en el SIN," Expreso, April 8, 1997.

93. "Los planes al desnudo," La Repblica, April 7, 1997.

94. "Descuartizan a mujer."

95. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Orlando Barreto Pea, father of Mariella Barreto, April 7, 1997.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

55. Article 4 of the law stipulates that "the court resolves and adopts decisions by a simple majority of votes cast, except to resolve the inadmissability of an inconstitutionality complaint or to issue a sentence that declares unconstitutional a norm with the status of law, in which case six votes in favor are needed." (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

56. One of judges who abstained, Judge Jos Garca Marcelo, a former army chaplain, was suspected by Judge Revoredo of stealing a confidential draft of the ruling from her briefcase.

Other members of the court who voted for the resolution also reported confidential documents missing. The draft in question appears to have found its way into the hands of a group of C90-NM members of congress, who sent a letter to the president of the court, Dr. Ricardo Nugent Lpez-Chvez, urging him to vote against the ruling. Judge Jos Garca Marcelo received a vote of censure in the court for disclosing its confidential deliberations.

During the week of the ruling, Judge Revoredo alleged that her home had been under surveillance by naval intelligence agents posing as ice cream sellers and gardeners. She also said that a case against her concerning the importation of an automobile, which had been closed several years ago, was suddenly reopened by a judge in Callao, apparently in retaliation for her vote. On November 8, 1996, Nugent's police bodyguard was killed and two other police officers escorting his vehicle were seriously injured when gunmen attacked his vehicle. The press reported that the gunmen, who were attempting to kidnap a businessman when Nugent's car passed by, mistook it for a police vehicle and opened fire. These were not the only suspicious incidents involving members of the court. The Minister of the Interior, Gen. Juan Briones Dvila, denied that the attack was politically motivated. However, the incident remained unclarified. See "Qued al voto pedido para procesar a Delia Revoredo," La Repblica,April 9, 1997 and "Presidente del T.C. salva de balacera," La Repblica, November 9, 1997.

57. The statement read: "Given the institutional importance of the Constitutional Court, the IACHR hopes that it will be restored to regular functioning as soon as possible, guaranteeing due respect for its independence, impartiality and autonomy of the other organs of the state, and consolidating its position as the most authoritative interpreter of the Constitution and human rights."

58. Comunicado Oficial No. 003/SZSNC-7, Ministerio de Defensa, Lima, March 18, 1997.

59. "Ejrcito Peruano presenta armamento del frustrado ataque terrorista del MRTA," El Sol, March 20, 1997.

60. "Militares los torturaron para que admitieran ser del MRTA," La Repblica, March 26, 1997.

61. El Sol, March 20, 1997. The article in the pro-military El Sol appeared on the day after a television report denouncing that the peasants had been tortured into confessing. The article claimed that all of the detainees had been interrogated in the presence of the provincial prosecutor and that none had denounced torture. Thus, it concluded, the army had "de-activated another plan by the terrorists to attack the armed forces for committing abuses against peasants, in which they hoped to use the foreign press that is in our country for the hostage crisis." (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

62. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Paulino Sols Taype, Lima, April 4, 1997. Sols's allegation was confirmed by journalist Mara Elena Cornejo, who later interviewed the provincial prosecutor, Victoriano Nez Valdivia. He told her: "The thing is I don't have a budget for clothes, and as I was in civilian clothes and my shoes were dirty, the general lent me the uniform. Besides, it was 4 p.m. on a

Friday and it was time for me to leave work, and I didn't have time to change. But I don't take pressure from anyone because I stand up to anyone like a man." Mara Elena Cornejo, "El Voltaje del Miedo, Caretas, No.1460, April 10, 1997, p.37.

63. The soldiers tried to force Loida Dionicio to admit that she had been recruited to the MRTA by another detainee, Aurelio Leiva, and that he had raped her. A later medical examination in the DINCOTE showed that Loida was, in fact, a virgin. Leiva had been singled out as the "leader" of the MRTA column.

64. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Ins Marilu Avila Glvez, March 1996.

65. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Emerson Wistrecher Cnepa, March 1996.

66. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Ins Marilu Avila Glvez, March 1996.

67. Human Rights Watch/Americas saw and photographed the torture equipment during our visit on April 2, 1997.

68. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Flix Jorge Romero, Lima, April 9, 1997.

69. Human Rights Watch/Americas interviews with Alfonso Rojas Colca and Jos Teofilo Huamn, Lima, April 4,1997.

70. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Martn Augusto Elguera, Lima, April 9, 1997.

71. "Salud sicolgica de rehenes est deteriorada," Expreso, March 31, 1997.

72. Judge Onsimo Julio Vela Velsquez, Informe No. 003-96-1JEPP, expediente No. 55-95, January 23,1996. Pages not numbered.

73. The forensic doctors asserted that it was impossible to determine whether the victim's lesions were self-inflicted or had been caused by a third party, but they went on, contradictorily, to say that the lesions had not been self-inflicted. Diligencia de necropsia en el cadver de Jhoel Huamn Garca. Ministerio Pblico Fiscala Mixta Pasco, date indistinct.

74. Judge Onsimo Vela Velsquez, Expediente No. 55-95, page un-numbered.

75. Penal Code, Book II, Title 1, Chapter 3, Article 121(3, ii).

76. Letter from Francisco Sobern, general coordinator of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos and Felicita Buenda Or, Chamaya's widow, to Luz Salgado Rubianes, president of the Congressional Human Rights Committee, November 9, 1995.

77. "Policas enfran taxista en cmica," El Popular, September 23, 1995. According to the same source, their superiors were complicit in their escape.

78. A police witnesses who was not identified told reporters that the officers responsible, apparently backed by the station chief, Carlos Snchez Gutirrez, hatched a plan to remove and "disappear" the body: "Lieutenant Zevallos tried to take the corpse away in the trunk of a private car, but because others tried to stop him, he began to shout like a madman, threatening to 'talk' about other abuses committed in the station. Later, he disappeared." "Jefes de cmica en Santa Felicia

implicados en crimen de taxista," El Popular, September 25, 1995.

79. "Asesinos de taxista se entregan a las autoridades y admiten su crimen," La Repblica, September 28, 1995.

80. According to a legal advisor to the criminal investigations department of the national police, the National Directorate for the Investigation of Crimes (Direccin Nacional de Investigacin del Crmen, DININCRI): "On this point, since the events took place in the installations of a police establishment and as a consequence of the carrying out of professional functions, the criminal conduct falls within the terms of Article 173 of the Constitution; for this reason the present advisor is of the opinion that, in application of Article 319 and 326 of the Code of Military Justice, it is of the exclusive competence of the military jurisdiction." Asesora Legal de la DININCRI-PNP, Dictmen no. 181-0AJ-DININCRI-PNP, September 25, 1995. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

81. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

82. Letter to the judge of the 40th Criminal Court, signed by Jorge Vega Fernndez, May 14, 1996.

83. The civilian and military judges also conflicted over the place where Zevallos would serve his sentence. After his conviction by the military court, police authorities refused to return him to Lurigancho, sending him to a military prison instead. According to a memo from the national penitentiary authorities to the judge, "this decision has caused administrative problems in this department in that the prisoner was interned in a public prison, Lurigancho, with a detention order issued by your worthy court, and in his capacity as accused, and he should have been returned to the same prison." Memo to the judge of the 40th Penal Court of Lima from an official of the National Penitentiary Institute (INP), a department of the Ministry of Justice, September 17, 1996.

84. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

85. "Policas de la delegacin de Brea asesinan a comerciante de lpidas," Expreso, March 25, 1996.

86. Manifestacin de Jos Enrique Palomino Garca, document bearing the National Police stamp, dated March 26, 1996.

87. Protocol de autopsia, Ref. Ofc. 384-96-14 FPPL-MP-FN, March 24, 1996.

88. Ampliacin de la Instructiva del Inculpado Alberto Snchez Vsquez, July 18, 1996.

89. Testimony of Jos Fiorentini Vergara, cited in summary of evidence by Judge Cecilia Bolack Baluarte of the 44th Criminal Court of Lima, November 6, 1996.

90. Testimony of Capt. Jorge Manuel Cheng Kong Chu, March 29, 1996.

91. Atestado No. 448 IC-H-DDCV, Delito Cometido por Funcionarios Pblicos- Abuso de Autoridad, April 2, 1996.

92. "Descuartizan a mujer agente del SIN y a otra la torturan y la internan en Hospital Militar," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "El ejrcito investigaba por 'infidencia' a Mariella Barreto la agente descuartizada," La Repblica, April 8, 1997; "Una agente de inteligencia asegura haber sido torturada," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Congreso pide informe a ministros por denuncias de torturas en el SIN," Expreso, April 8, 1997.

93. "Los planes al desnudo," La Repblica, April 7, 1997.

94. "Descuartizan a mujer."

95. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Orlando Barreto Pea, father of Mariella Barreto, April 7, 1997.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

56. One of judges who abstained, Judge Jos Garca Marcelo, a former army chaplain, was suspected by Judge Revoredo of stealing a confidential draft of the ruling from her briefcase.

Other members of the court who voted for the resolution also reported confidential documents missing. The draft in question appears to have found its way into the hands of a group of C90-NM members of congress, who sent a letter to the president of the court, Dr. Ricardo Nugent Lpez-Chvez, urging him to vote against the ruling. Judge Jos Garca Marcelo received a vote of censure in the court for disclosing its confidential deliberations.

During the week of the ruling, Judge Revoredo alleged that her home had been under surveillance by naval intelligence agents posing as ice cream sellers and gardeners. She also said that a case against her concerning the importation of an automobile, which had been closed several years ago, was suddenly reopened by a judge in Callao, apparently in retaliation for her vote. On November 8, 1996, Nugent's police bodyguard was killed and two other police officers escorting his vehicle were seriously injured when gunmen attacked his vehicle. The press reported that the gunmen, who were attempting to kidnap a businessman when Nugent's car passed by, mistook it for a police vehicle and opened fire. These were not the only suspicious incidents involving members of the court. The Minister of the Interior, Gen. Juan Briones Dvila, denied that the attack was politically motivated. However, the incident remained unclarified. See "Qued al voto pedido para procesar a Delia Revoredo," La Repblica,April 9, 1997 and "Presidente del T.C. salva de balacera," La Repblica, November 9, 1997.

57. The statement read: "Given the institutional importance of the Constitutional Court, the IACHR hopes that it will be restored to regular functioning as soon as possible, guaranteeing due respect for its independence, impartiality and autonomy of the other organs of the state, and consolidating its position as the most authoritative interpreter of the Constitution and human rights."

58. Comunicado Oficial No. 003/SZSNC-7, Ministerio de Defensa, Lima, March 18, 1997.

59. "Ejrcito Peruano presenta armamento del frustrado ataque terrorista del MRTA," El Sol, March 20, 1997.

60. "Militares los torturaron para que admitieran ser del MRTA," La Repblica, March 26, 1997.

61. El Sol, March 20, 1997. The article in the pro-military El Sol appeared on the day after a television report denouncing that the peasants had been tortured into confessing. The article claimed that all of the detainees had been interrogated in the presence of the provincial prosecutor and that none had denounced torture. Thus, it concluded, the army had "de-activated another plan by the terrorists to attack the armed forces for committing abuses against peasants, in which they hoped to use the foreign press that is in our country for the hostage crisis." (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

62. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Paulino Sols Taype, Lima, April 4, 1997. Sols's allegation was confirmed by journalist Mara Elena Cornejo, who later interviewed the provincial prosecutor, Victoriano Nez Valdivia. He told her: "The thing is I don't have a budget for clothes, and as I was in civilian clothes and my shoes were dirty, the general lent me the uniform. Besides, it was 4 p.m. on a Friday and it was time for me to leave work, and I didn't have time to change. But I don't take pressure from anyone because I stand up to anyone like a man." Mara Elena Cornejo, "El Voltaje del Miedo, Caretas, No.1460, April 10, 1997, p.37.

63. The soldiers tried to force Loida Dionicio to admit that she had been recruited to the MRTA by another detainee, Aurelio Leiva, and that he had raped her. A later medical examination in the DINCOTE showed that Loida was, in fact, a virgin. Leiva had been singled out as the "leader" of the MRTA column.

64. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Ins Marilu Avila Glvez, March 1996.

65. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Emerson Wistrecher Cnepa, March 1996.

66. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Ins Marilu Avila Glvez, March 1996.

67. Human Rights Watch/Americas saw and photographed the torture equipment during our visit on April 2, 1997.

68. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Flix Jorge Romero, Lima, April 9, 1997.

69. Human Rights Watch/Americas interviews with Alfonso Rojas Colca and Jos Teofilo Huamn, Lima, April 4,1997.

70. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Martn Augusto Elguera, Lima, April 9, 1997.

71. "Salud sicolgica de rehenes est deteriorada," Expreso, March 31, 1997.

72. Judge Onsimo Julio Vela Velsquez, Informe No. 003-96-1JEPP, expediente No. 55-95, January 23,1996. Pages not numbered.

73. The forensic doctors asserted that it was impossible to determine whether the victim's lesions were self-inflicted or had been caused by a third party, but they went on, contradictorily, to say that the lesions had not been self-inflicted. Diligencia de necropsia en el cadver de Jhoel Huamn Garca. Ministerio Pblico Fiscala Mixta Pasco, date indistinct.

74. Judge Onsimo Vela Velsquez, Expediente No. 55-95, page un-numbered.

75. Penal Code, Book II, Title 1, Chapter 3, Article 121(3, ii).

76. Letter from Francisco Sobern, general coordinator of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos and Felicita Buenda Or, Chamaya's widow, to Luz Salgado Rubianes, president of the Congressional Human Rights Committee, November 9, 1995.

77. "Policas enfran taxista en cmica," El Popular, September 23, 1995. According to the same source, their superiors were complicit in their escape.

78. A police witnesses who was not identified told reporters that the officers responsible, apparently backed by the station chief, Carlos Snchez Gutirrez, hatched a plan to remove and "disappear" the body: "Lieutenant Zevallos tried to take the corpse away in the trunk of a private car, but because others tried to stop him, he began to shout like a madman, threatening to 'talk' about other abuses committed in the station. Later, he disappeared." "Jefes de cmica en Santa Felicia

implicados en crimen de taxista," El Popular, September 25, 1995.

79. "Asesinos de taxista se entregan a las autoridades y admiten su crimen," La Repblica, September 28, 1995.

80. According to a legal advisor to the criminal investigations department of the national police, the National Directorate for the Investigation of Crimes (Direccin Nacional de Investigacin del Crmen, DININCRI): "On this point, since the events took place in the installations of a police establishment and as a consequence of the carrying out of professional functions, the criminal conduct falls within the terms of Article 173 of the Constitution; for this reason the present advisor is of the opinion that, in application of Article 319 and 326 of the Code of Military Justice, it is of the exclusive competence of the military jurisdiction." Asesora Legal de la DININCRI-PNP, Dictmen no. 181-0AJ-DININCRI-PNP, September 25, 1995. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

81. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

82. Letter to the judge of the 40th Criminal Court, signed by Jorge Vega Fernndez, May 14, 1996.

83. The civilian and military judges also conflicted over the place where Zevallos would serve his sentence. After his conviction by the military court, police authorities refused to return him to Lurigancho, sending him to a military prison instead. According to a memo from the national penitentiary authorities to the judge, "this decision has caused administrative problems in this department in that the prisoner was interned in a public prison, Lurigancho, with a detention order issued by your worthy court, and in his capacity as accused, and he should have been returned to the same prison." Memo to the judge of the 40th Penal Court of Lima from an official of the National Penitentiary Institute (INP), a department of the Ministry of Justice, September 17, 1996.

84. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

85. "Policas de la delegacin de Brea asesinan a comerciante de lpidas," Expreso, March 25, 1996.

86. Manifestacin de Jos Enrique Palomino Garca, document bearing the National Police stamp, dated March 26, 1996.

87. Protocol de autopsia, Ref. Ofc. 384-96-14 FPPL-MP-FN, March 24, 1996.

88. Ampliacin de la Instructiva del Inculpado Alberto Snchez Vsquez, July 18, 1996.

89. Testimony of Jos Fiorentini Vergara, cited in summary of evidence by Judge Cecilia Bolack Baluarte of the 44th Criminal Court of Lima, November 6, 1996.

90. Testimony of Capt. Jorge Manuel Cheng Kong Chu, March 29, 1996.

91. Atestado No. 448 IC-H-DDCV, Delito Cometido por Funcionarios Pblicos- Abuso de Autoridad, April 2, 1996.

92. "Descuartizan a mujer agente del SIN y a otra la torturan y la internan en Hospital Militar," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "El ejrcito investigaba por 'infidencia' a Mariella Barreto la agente descuartizada," La Repblica, April 8, 1997; "Una agente de inteligencia asegura haber sido torturada," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Congreso pide informe a ministros por denuncias de torturas en el SIN,"

Expreso, April 8, 1997.

93. "Los planes al desnudo," La Repblica, April 7, 1997.

94. "Descuartizan a mujer."

95. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Orlando Barreto Pea, father of Mariella Barreto, April 7, 1997.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

Other members of the court who voted for the resolution also reported confidential documents missing. The draft in question appears to have found its way into the hands of a group of C90-NM members of congress, who sent a letter to the president of the court, Dr. Ricardo Nugent Lpez-Chvez, urging him to vote against the ruling. Judge Jos Garca Marcelo received a vote of censure in the court for disclosing its confidential deliberations.

During the week of the ruling, Judge Revoredo alleged that her home had been under surveillance by naval intelligence agents posing as ice cream sellers and gardeners. She also said that a case against her concerning the importation of an automobile, which had been closed several years ago, was suddenly reopened by a judge in Callao, apparently in retaliation for her vote. On November 8, 1996, Nugent's police bodyguard was killed and two other police officers escorting his vehicle were seriously injured when gunmen attacked his vehicle. The press reported that the gunmen, who were attempting to kidnap a businessman when Nugent's car passed by, mistook it for a police vehicle and opened fire. These were not the only suspicious incidents involving members of the court. The Minister of the Interior, Gen. Juan Briones Dvila, denied that the attack was politically motivated. However, the incident remained unclarified. See "Qued al voto pedido para procesar a Delia Revoredo," La Repblica,April 9, 1997 and "Presidente del T.C. salva de balacera," La Repblica, November 9, 1997.

57. The statement read: "Given the institutional importance of the Constitutional Court, the IACHR hopes that it will be restored to regular functioning as soon as possible, guaranteeing due respect for its independence, impartiality and autonomy of the other organs of the state, and consolidating its position as the most authoritative interpreter of the Constitution and human rights."

58. Comunicado Oficial No. 003/SZSNC-7, Ministerio de Defensa, Lima, March 18, 1997.

59. "Ejrcito Peruano presenta armamento del frustrado ataque terrorista del MRTA," El Sol, March 20, 1997.

60. "Militares los torturaron para que admitieran ser del MRTA," La Repblica, March 26, 1997.

61. El Sol, March 20, 1997. The article in the pro-military El Sol appeared on the day after a television report denouncing that the peasants had been tortured into confessing. The article claimed that all of the detainees had been interrogated in the presence of the provincial prosecutor and that none had denounced torture. Thus, it concluded, the army had "de-activated another plan by the terrorists to attack the armed forces for committing abuses against peasants, in which they hoped to use the foreign press that is in our country for the hostage crisis." (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

62. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Paulino Sols Taype, Lima, April 4, 1997. Sols's allegation was confirmed by journalist Mara Elena Cornejo, who later interviewed the provincial prosecutor, Victoriano Nez Valdivia. He told her: "The thing is I don't have a budget for clothes, and as I was in civilian clothes and my shoes were dirty, the general lent me the uniform. Besides, it was 4 p.m. on a Friday and it was time for me to leave work, and I didn't have time to change. But I don't take pressure from anyone because I stand up to anyone like a man." Mara Elena Cornejo, "El Voltaje del Miedo, Caretas, No.1460, April 10, 1997, p.37.

63. The soldiers tried to force Loida Dionicio to admit that she had been recruited to the MRTA by another detainee, Aurelio Leiva, and that he had raped her. A later medical examination in the DINCOTE showed that Loida was, in fact, a virgin. Leiva had been singled out as the "leader" of the MRTA column.

64. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Ins Marilu Avila Glvez, March 1996.

65. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Emerson Wistrecher Cnepa, March 1996.

66. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Ins Marilu Avila Glvez, March 1996.

67. Human Rights Watch/Americas saw and photographed the torture equipment during our visit on April 2, 1997.

68. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Flix Jorge Romero, Lima, April 9, 1997.

69. Human Rights Watch/Americas interviews with Alfonso Rojas Colca and Jos Teofilo Huamn, Lima, April 4,1997.

70. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Martn Augusto Elguera, Lima, April 9, 1997.

71. "Salud sicolgica de rehenes est deteriorada," Expreso, March 31, 1997.

72. Judge Onsimo Julio Vela Velsquez, Informe No. 003-96-1JEPP, expediente No. 55-95, January 23,1996. Pages not numbered.

73. The forensic doctors asserted that it was impossible to determine whether the victim's lesions were self-inflicted or had been caused by a third party, but they went on, contradictorily, to say that the lesions had not been self-inflicted. Diligencia de necropsia en el cadver de Jhoel Huamn Garca. Ministerio Pblico Fiscala Mixta Pasco, date indistinct.

74. Judge Onsimo Vela Velsquez, Expediente No. 55-95, page un-numbered.

75. Penal Code, Book II, Title 1, Chapter 3, Article 121(3, ii).

76. Letter from Francisco Sobern, general coordinator of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos and Felicita Buenda Or, Chamaya's widow, to Luz Salgado Rubianes, president of the Congressional Human Rights Committee, November 9, 1995.

77. "Policas enfran taxista en cmica," El Popular, September 23, 1995. According to the same source, their superiors were complicit in their escape.

78. A police witnesses who was not identified told reporters that the officers responsible, apparently backed by the station chief, Carlos Snchez Gutirrez, hatched a plan to remove and "disappear" the body: "Lieutenant Zevallos tried to take the corpse away in the trunk of a private car, but because others tried to stop him, he began to shout like a madman, threatening to 'talk' about other abuses committed in the station. Later, he disappeared." "Jefes de cmica en Santa Felicia

implicados en crimen de taxista," El Popular, September 25, 1995.

79. "Asesinos de taxista se entregan a las autoridades y admiten su crimen," La Repblica, September 28, 1995.

80. According to a legal advisor to the criminal investigations department of the national police, the National Directorate for the Investigation of Crimes (Direccin Nacional de Investigacin del Crmen, DININCRI): "On this point, since the events took place in the installations of a police establishment and as a consequence of the carrying out of professional functions, the criminal conduct falls within the terms of Article 173 of the Constitution; for this reason the present advisor is of the opinion that, in application of Article 319 and 326 of the Code of Military Justice, it is of the exclusive competence of the military jurisdiction." Asesora Legal de la DININCRI-PNP, Dictmen no. 181-0AJ-DININCRI-PNP, September 25, 1995. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

81. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

82. Letter to the judge of the 40th Criminal Court, signed by Jorge Vega Fernndez, May 14, 1996.

83. The civilian and military judges also conflicted over the place where Zevallos would serve his sentence. After his conviction by the military court, police authorities refused to return him to Lurigancho, sending him to a military prison instead. According to a memo from the national penitentiary authorities to the judge, "this decision has caused administrative problems in this department in that the prisoner was interned in a public prison, Lurigancho, with a detention order issued by your worthy court, and in his capacity as accused, and he should have been returned to the same prison." Memo to the judge of the 40th Penal Court of Lima from an official of the National Penitentiary Institute (INP), a department of the Ministry of Justice, September 17, 1996.

84. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

85. "Policas de la delegacin de Brea asesinan a comerciante de lpidas," Expreso, March 25, 1996.

86. Manifestacin de Jos Enrique Palomino Garca, document bearing the National Police stamp, dated March 26, 1996.

87. Protocol de autopsia, Ref. Ofc. 384-96-14 FPPL-MP-FN, March 24, 1996.

88. Ampliacin de la Instructiva del Inculpado Alberto Snchez Vsquez, July 18, 1996.

89. Testimony of Jos Fiorentini Vergara, cited in summary of evidence by Judge Cecilia Bolack Baluarte of the 44th Criminal Court of Lima, November 6, 1996.

90. Testimony of Capt. Jorge Manuel Cheng Kong Chu, March 29, 1996.

91. Atestado No. 448 IC-H-DDCV, Delito Cometido por Funcionarios Pblicos- Abuso de Autoridad, April 2, 1996.

92. "Descuartizan a mujer agente del SIN y a otra la torturan y la internan en Hospital Militar," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "El ejrcito investigaba por 'infidencia' a Mariella Barreto la agente descuartizada," La Repblica, April 8, 1997; "Una agente de inteligencia asegura haber sido torturada," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Congreso pide informe a ministros por denuncias de torturas en el SIN," Expreso, April 8, 1997.

93. "Los planes al desnudo," La Repblica, April 7, 1997.

94. "Descuartizan a mujer."

95. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Orlando Barreto Pea, father of Mariella Barreto, April 7, 1997.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no

incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

During the week of the ruling, Judge Revoredo alleged that her home had been under surveillance by naval intelligence agents posing as ice cream sellers and gardeners. She also said that a case against her concerning the importation of an automobile, which had been closed several years ago, was suddenly reopened by a judge in Callao, apparently in retaliation for her vote. On November 8, 1996, Nugent's police bodyguard was killed and two other police officers escorting his vehicle were seriously injured when gunmen attacked his vehicle. The press reported that the gunmen, who were attempting to kidnap a businessman when Nugent's car passed by, mistook it for a police vehicle and opened fire. These were not the only suspicious incidents involving members of the court. The Minister of the Interior, Gen. Juan Briones Dvila, denied that the attack was politically motivated. However, the incident remained unclarified. See "Qued al voto pedido para procesar a Delia Revoredo," La Repblica,April 9, 1997 and "Presidente del T.C. salva de balacera," La Repblica, November 9, 1997.

57. The statement read: "Given the institutional importance of the Constitutional Court, the IACHR hopes that it will be restored to regular functioning as soon as possible, guaranteeing due respect for its independence, impartiality and autonomy of the other organs of the state, and consolidating its position as the most authoritative interpreter of the Constitution and human rights."

58. Comunicado Oficial No. 003/SZSNC-7, Ministerio de Defensa, Lima, March 18, 1997.

59. "Ejrcito Peruano presenta armamento del frustrado ataque terrorista del MRTA," El Sol, March 20, 1997.

60. "Militares los torturaron para que admitieran ser del MRTA," La Repblica, March 26, 1997.

61. El Sol, March 20, 1997. The article in the pro-military El Sol appeared on the day after a television report denouncing that the peasants had been tortured into confessing. The article claimed that all of the detainees had been interrogated in the presence of the provincial prosecutor and that none had denounced torture. Thus, it concluded, the army had "de-activated another plan by the terrorists to attack the armed forces for committing abuses against peasants, in which they hoped to use the foreign press that is in our country for the hostage crisis." (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

62. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Paulino Sols Taype, Lima, April 4, 1997. Sols's allegation was confirmed by journalist Mara Elena Cornejo, who later interviewed the provincial prosecutor, Victoriano Nez Valdivia. He told her: "The thing is I don't have a budget for clothes, and as I was in civilian clothes and my shoes were dirty, the general lent me the uniform. Besides, it was 4 p.m. on a Friday and it was time for me to leave work, and I didn't have time to change. But I don't take pressure from anyone because I stand up to anyone like a man." Mara Elena Cornejo, "El Voltaje del Miedo, Caretas, No.1460, April 10, 1997, p.37.

63. The soldiers tried to force Loida Dionicio to admit that she had been recruited to the MRTA by another detainee, Aurelio Leiva, and that he had raped her. A later medical examination in the DINCOTE showed that Loida was, in fact, a virgin. Leiva had been singled out as the "leader" of the MRTA column.

64. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Ins Marilu Avila Glvez, March 1996.

65. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Emerson Wistrecher Cnepa, March 1996.

66. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Ins Marilu Avila Glvez, March 1996.

67. Human Rights Watch/Americas saw and photographed the torture equipment during our visit on April 2, 1997.

68. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Flix Jorge Romero, Lima, April 9, 1997.

69. Human Rights Watch/Americas interviews with Alfonso Rojas Colca and Jos Teofilo Huamn, Lima, April 4,1997.

70. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Martn Augusto Elguera, Lima, April 9, 1997.

71. "Salud sicolgica de rehenes est deteriorada," Expreso, March 31, 1997.

72. Judge Onsimo Julio Vela Velsquez, Informe No. 003-96-1JEPP, expediente No. 55-95, January 23,1996. Pages not numbered.

73. The forensic doctors asserted that it was impossible to determine whether the victim's lesions were self-inflicted or had been caused by a third party, but they went on, contradictorily, to say that the lesions had not been self-inflicted. Diligencia de necropsia en el cadver de Jhoel Huamn Garca. Ministerio Pblico Fiscala Mixta Pasco, date indistinct.

74. Judge Onsimo Vela Velsquez, Expediente No. 55-95, page un-numbered.

75. Penal Code, Book II, Title 1, Chapter 3, Article 121(3, ii).

76. Letter from Francisco Sobern, general coordinator of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos and Felicita Buenda Or, Chamaya's widow, to Luz Salgado Rubianes, president of the Congressional Human Rights Committee, November 9, 1995.

77. "Policas enfran taxista en cmica," El Popular, September 23, 1995. According to the same source, their superiors were complicit in their escape.

78. A police witnesses who was not identified told reporters that the officers responsible, apparently backed by the station chief, Carlos Snchez Gutirrez, hatched a plan to remove and "disappear" the body: "Lieutenant Zevallos tried to take the corpse away in the trunk of a private car, but because others tried to stop him, he began to shout like a madman, threatening to 'talk' about other abuses committed in the station. Later, he disappeared." "Jefes de cmica en Santa Felicia

implicados en crimen de taxista," El Popular, September 25, 1995.

79. "Asesinos de taxista se entregan a las autoridades y admiten su crimen," La Repblica, September 28, 1995.

80. According to a legal advisor to the criminal investigations department of the national police, the National Directorate for the Investigation of Crimes (Direccin Nacional de Investigacin del Crmen, DININCRI): "On this point, since the events took place in the installations of a police establishment and as a consequence of the carrying out of professional functions, the criminal conduct falls within the terms of Article 173 of the Constitution; for this reason the present advisor is of the opinion that, in application of Article 319 and 326 of the Code of Military Justice, it is of the exclusive competence of the military jurisdiction." Asesora Legal de la DININCRI-PNP, Dictmen no. 181-0AJ-DININCRI-PNP, September 25, 1995. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

81. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

82. Letter to the judge of the 40th Criminal Court, signed by Jorge Vega Fernndez, May 14, 1996.

83. The civilian and military judges also conflicted over the place where Zevallos would serve his sentence. After his conviction by the military court, police authorities refused to return him to Lurigancho, sending him to a military prison instead. According to a memo from the national penitentiary authorities to the judge, "this decision has caused administrative problems in this department in that the prisoner was interned in a public prison, Lurigancho, with a detention order issued by your worthy court, and in his capacity as accused, and he should have been returned to the same prison." Memo to the judge of the 40th Penal Court of Lima from an official of the National Penitentiary Institute (INP), a department of the Ministry of Justice, September 17, 1996.

84. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

85. "Policas de la delegacin de Brea asesinan a comerciante de lpidas," Expreso, March 25, 1996.

86. Manifestacin de Jos Enrique Palomino Garca, document bearing the National Police stamp, dated March 26, 1996.

87. Protocol de autopsia, Ref. Ofc. 384-96-14 FPPL-MP-FN, March 24, 1996.

88. Ampliacin de la Instructiva del Inculpado Alberto Snchez Vsquez, July 18, 1996.

89. Testimony of Jos Fiorentini Vergara, cited in summary of evidence by Judge Cecilia Bolack Baluarte of the 44th Criminal Court of Lima, November 6, 1996.

90. Testimony of Capt. Jorge Manuel Cheng Kong Chu, March 29, 1996.

91. Atestado No. 448 IC-H-DDCV, Delito Cometido por Funcionarios Pblicos- Abuso de Autoridad, April 2, 1996.

92. "Descuartizan a mujer agente del SIN y a otra la torturan y la internan en Hospital Militar," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "El ejrcito investigaba por 'infidencia' a Mariella Barreto la agente descuartizada," La Repblica, April 8, 1997; "Una agente de inteligencia asegura haber sido torturada," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Congreso pide informe a ministros por denuncias de torturas en el SIN," Expreso, April 8, 1997.

93. "Los planes al desnudo," La Repblica, April 7, 1997.

94. "Descuartizan a mujer."

95. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Orlando Barreto Pea, father of Mariella Barreto, April 7, 1997.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

57. The statement read: "Given the institutional importance of the Constitutional Court, the IACHR hopes that it will be restored to regular functioning as soon as possible, guaranteeing due respect for its independence, impartiality and autonomy of the other organs of the state, and consolidating its position as the most authoritative interpreter of the Constitution and human rights."

58. Comunicado Oficial No. 003/SZSNC-7, Ministerio de Defensa, Lima, March 18, 1997.

59. "Ejrcito Peruano presenta armamento del frustrado ataque terrorista del MRTA," El Sol, March 20, 1997.

60. "Militares los torturaron para que admitieran ser del MRTA," La Repblica, March 26, 1997.

61. El Sol, March 20, 1997. The article in the pro-military El Sol appeared on the day after a television report denouncing that the peasants had been tortured into confessing. The article claimed that all of the detainees had been interrogated in the presence of the provincial prosecutor and that none had denounced torture. Thus, it concluded, the army had "de-activated another plan by the terrorists to attack the armed forces for committing abuses against peasants, in which they hoped to use the foreign press that is in our country for the hostage crisis." (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

62. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Paulino Sols Taype, Lima, April 4, 1997. Sols's allegation was confirmed by journalist Mara Elena Cornejo, who later interviewed the provincial prosecutor, Victoriano Nez Valdivia. He told her: "The thing is I don't have a budget for clothes, and as I was in civilian clothes and my shoes were dirty, the general lent me the uniform. Besides, it was 4 p.m. on a Friday and it was time for me to leave work, and I didn't have time to change. But I don't take pressure from anyone because I stand up to anyone like a man." Mara Elena Cornejo, "El Voltaje del Miedo, Caretas, No.1460, April 10, 1997, p.37.

63. The soldiers tried to force Loida Dionicio to admit that she had been recruited to the MRTA by another detainee, Aurelio Leiva, and that he had raped her. A later medical examination in the DINCOTE showed that Loida was, in fact, a virgin. Leiva had been singled out as the "leader" of the MRTA column.

64. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Ins Marilu Avila Glvez, March 1996.

65. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Emerson Wistrecher Cnepa, March 1996.

66. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Ins Marilu Avila Glvez, March 1996.

67. Human Rights Watch/Americas saw and photographed the torture equipment during our visit on April 2, 1997.

68. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Flix Jorge Romero, Lima, April 9, 1997.

69. Human Rights Watch/Americas interviews with Alfonso Rojas Colca and Jos Teofilo Huamn, Lima, April 4,1997.

70. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Martn Augusto Elguera, Lima, April 9, 1997.

71. "Salud sicolgica de rehenes est deteriorada," Expreso, March 31, 1997.

72. Judge Onsimo Julio Vela Velsquez, Informe No. 003-96-1JEPP, expediente No. 55-95, January 23,1996. Pages not numbered.

73. The forensic doctors asserted that it was impossible to determine whether the victim's lesions were self-inflicted or had been caused by a third party, but they went on, contradictorily, to say that the lesions had not been self-inflicted. Diligencia de necropsia en el cadver de Jhoel Huamn Garca. Ministerio Pblico Fiscala Mixta Pasco, date indistinct.

74. Judge Onsimo Vela Velsquez, Expediente No. 55-95, page un-numbered.

75. Penal Code, Book II, Title 1, Chapter 3, Article 121(3, ii).

76. Letter from Francisco Sobern, general coordinator of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos and Felicita Buenda Or, Chamaya's widow, to Luz Salgado Rubianes, president of the Congressional Human Rights Committee, November 9, 1995.

77. "Policas enfran taxista en cmica," El Popular, September 23, 1995. According to the same source, their superiors were complicit in their escape.

78. A police witnesses who was not identified told reporters that the officers responsible, apparently backed by the station chief, Carlos Snchez Gutirrez, hatched a plan to remove and "disappear" the body: "Lieutenant Zevallos tried to take the corpse away in the trunk of a private car, but because others tried to stop him, he began to shout like a madman, threatening to 'talk' about other abuses committed in the station. Later, he disappeared." "Jefes de cmica en Santa Felicia

implicados en crimen de taxista," El Popular, September 25, 1995.

79. "Asesinos de taxista se entregan a las autoridades y admiten su crimen," La Repblica, September 28, 1995.

80. According to a legal advisor to the criminal investigations department of the national police, the National Directorate for the Investigation of Crimes (Direccin Nacional de Investigacin del Crmen, DININCRI): "On this point, since the events took place in the installations of a police establishment and as a consequence of the carrying out of professional functions, the criminal conduct falls within the terms of Article 173 of the Constitution; for this reason the present advisor is of the opinion that, in application of Article 319 and 326 of the Code of Military Justice, it is of the exclusive competence of the military jurisdiction." Asesora Legal de la DININCRI-PNP, Dictmen no. 181-0AJ-DININCRI-PNP, September 25, 1995. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

81. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

82. Letter to the judge of the 40th Criminal Court, signed by Jorge Vega Fernndez, May 14, 1996.

83. The civilian and military judges also conflicted over the place where Zevallos would serve his sentence. After his conviction by the military court, police authorities refused to return him to Lurigancho, sending him to a military prison instead. According to a memo from the national penitentiary authorities to the judge, "this decision has caused administrative problems in this department in that the prisoner was interned in a public prison, Lurigancho, with a detention order issued by your worthy court, and in his capacity as accused, and he should have been returned to the same prison." Memo to the judge of the 40th Penal Court of Lima from an official of the National Penitentiary Institute (INP), a department of the Ministry of Justice, September 17, 1996.

84. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

85. "Policas de la delegacin de Brea asesinan a comerciante de lpidas," Expreso, March 25, 1996.

86. Manifestacin de Jos Enrique Palomino Garca, document bearing the National Police stamp, dated March 26, 1996.

87. Protocol de autopsia, Ref. Ofc. 384-96-14 FPPL-MP-FN, March 24, 1996.

88. Ampliacin de la Instructiva del Inculpado Alberto Snchez Vsquez, July 18, 1996.

89. Testimony of Jos Fiorentini Vergara, cited in summary of evidence by Judge Cecilia Bolack Baluarte of the 44th Criminal Court of Lima, November 6, 1996.

90. Testimony of Capt. Jorge Manuel Cheng Kong Chu, March 29, 1996.

91. Atestado No. 448 IC-H-DDCV, Delito Cometido por Funcionarios Pblicos- Abuso de Autoridad, April 2, 1996.

92. "Descuartizan a mujer agente del SIN y a otra la torturan y la internan en Hospital Militar," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "El ejrcito investigaba por 'infidencia' a Mariella Barreto la agente descuartizada," La Repblica, April 8, 1997; "Una agente de inteligencia asegura haber sido torturada," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Congreso pide informe a ministros por denuncias de torturas en el SIN," Expreso, April 8, 1997.

93. "Los planes al desnudo," La Repblica, April 7, 1997.

94. "Descuartizan a mujer."

95. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Orlando Barreto Pea, father of Mariella Barreto, April 7, 1997.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

58. Comunicado Oficial No. 003/SZSNC-7, Ministerio de Defensa, Lima, March 18, 1997.

59. "Ejrcito Peruano presenta armamento del frustrado ataque terrorista del MRTA," El Sol, March 20, 1997.

60. "Militares los torturaron para que admitieran ser del MRTA," La Repblica, March 26, 1997.

61. El Sol, March 20, 1997. The article in the pro-military El Sol appeared on the day after a television report denouncing that the peasants had been tortured into confessing. The article claimed that all of the detainees had been interrogated in the presence of the provincial prosecutor and that none had denounced torture. Thus, it concluded, the army had "de-activated another plan by the terrorists to attack the armed forces for committing abuses against peasants, in which they hoped to use the foreign press that is in our country for the hostage crisis." (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

62. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Paulino Sols Taype, Lima, April 4, 1997. Sols's allegation was confirmed by journalist Mara Elena Cornejo, who later interviewed the provincial prosecutor, Victoriano Nez Valdivia. He told her: "The thing is I don't have a budget for clothes, and as I was in civilian clothes and my shoes were dirty, the general lent me the uniform. Besides, it was 4 p.m. on a Friday and it was time for me to leave work, and I didn't have time to change. But I don't take pressure from anyone because I stand up to anyone like a man." Mara Elena Cornejo, "El Voltaje del Miedo, Caretas, No.1460, April 10, 1997, p.37.

63. The soldiers tried to force Loida Dionicio to admit that she had been recruited to the MRTA by another detainee, Aurelio Leiva, and that he had raped her. A later medical examination in the DINCOTE showed that Loida was, in fact, a virgin. Leiva had been singled out as the "leader" of the MRTA column.

64. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Ins Marilu Avila Glvez, March 1996.

65. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Emerson Wistrecher Cnepa, March 1996.

66. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Ins Marilu Avila Glvez, March 1996.

67. Human Rights Watch/Americas saw and photographed the torture equipment during our visit on April 2, 1997.

68. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Flix Jorge Romero, Lima, April 9, 1997.

69. Human Rights Watch/Americas interviews with Alfonso Rojas Colca and Jos Teofilo Huamn, Lima, April 4,1997.

70. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Martn Augusto Elguera, Lima, April 9, 1997.

71. "Salud sicolgica de rehenes est deteriorada," Expreso, March 31, 1997.

72. Judge Onsimo Julio Vela Velsquez, Informe No. 003-96-1JEPP, expediente No. 55-95, January 23,1996. Pages not numbered.

73. The forensic doctors asserted that it was impossible to determine whether the victim's lesions were self-inflicted or had been caused by a third party, but they went on, contradictorily, to say that the lesions had not been self-inflicted. Diligencia de necropsia en el cadver de Jhoel Huamn Garca. Ministerio Pblico Fiscala Mixta Pasco, date indistinct.

74. Judge Onsimo Vela Velsquez, Expediente No. 55-95, page un-numbered.

75. Penal Code, Book II, Title 1, Chapter 3, Article 121(3, ii).

76. Letter from Francisco Sobern, general coordinator of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos and Felicita Buenda Or, Chamaya's widow, to Luz Salgado Rubianes, president of the Congressional Human Rights Committee, November 9, 1995.

77. "Policas enfran taxista en cmica," El Popular, September 23, 1995. According to the same source, their superiors were complicit in their escape.

78. A police witnesses who was not identified told reporters that the officers responsible, apparently backed by the station chief, Carlos Snchez Gutirrez, hatched a plan to remove and "disappear" the body: "Lieutenant Zevallos tried to take the corpse away in the trunk of a private car, but because others tried to stop him, he began to shout like a madman, threatening to 'talk' about other abuses committed in the station. Later, he disappeared." "Jefes de cmica en Santa Felicia

implicados en crimen de taxista," El Popular, September 25, 1995.

79. "Asesinos de taxista se entregan a las autoridades y admiten su crimen," La Repblica, September 28, 1995.

80. According to a legal advisor to the criminal investigations department of the national police, the National Directorate for the Investigation of Crimes (Direccin Nacional de Investigacin del Crmen, DININCRI): "On this point, since the events took place in the installations of a police establishment and as a consequence of the carrying out of professional functions, the criminal conduct falls within the terms of Article 173 of the Constitution; for this reason the present advisor is of the opinion that, in application of Article 319 and 326 of the Code of Military Justice, it is of the exclusive competence of the military jurisdiction." Asesora Legal de la DININCRI-PNP, Dictmen no. 181-0AJ-DININCRI-PNP, September 25, 1995. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

81. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

82. Letter to the judge of the 40th Criminal Court, signed by Jorge Vega Fernndez, May 14, 1996.

83. The civilian and military judges also conflicted over the place where Zevallos would serve his sentence. After his conviction by the military court, police authorities refused to return him to Lurigancho, sending him to a military prison instead. According to a memo from the national penitentiary authorities to the judge, "this decision has caused administrative problems in this department in that the prisoner was interned in a public prison, Lurigancho, with a detention order issued by your worthy court, and in his capacity as accused, and he should have been returned to the same prison." Memo to the judge of the 40th Penal Court of Lima from an official of the National Penitentiary Institute (INP), a department of the Ministry of Justice, September 17, 1996.

84. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

85. "Policas de la delegacin de Brea asesinan a comerciante de lpidas," Expreso, March 25, 1996.

86. Manifestacin de Jos Enrique Palomino Garca, document bearing the National Police stamp, dated March 26, 1996.

87. Protocol de autopsia, Ref. Ofc. 384-96-14 FPPL-MP-FN, March 24, 1996.

88. Ampliacin de la Instructiva del Inculpado Alberto Snchez Vsquez, July 18, 1996.

89. Testimony of Jos Fiorentini Vergara, cited in summary of evidence by Judge Cecilia Bolack Baluarte of the 44th Criminal Court of Lima, November 6, 1996.

90. Testimony of Capt. Jorge Manuel Cheng Kong Chu, March 29, 1996.

91. Atestado No. 448 IC-H-DDCV, Delito Cometido por Funcionarios Pblicos- Abuso de Autoridad, April 2, 1996.

92. "Descuartizan a mujer agente del SIN y a otra la torturan y la internan en Hospital Militar," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "El ejrcito investigaba por 'infidencia' a Mariella Barreto la agente descuartizada," La Repblica, April 8, 1997; "Una agente de inteligencia asegura haber sido torturada," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Congreso pide informe a ministros por denuncias de torturas en el SIN," Expreso, April 8, 1997.

93. "Los planes al desnudo," La Repblica, April 7, 1997.

94. "Descuartizan a mujer."

95. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Orlando Barreto Pea, father of Mariella Barreto, April 7, 1997.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no

incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

59. "Ejrcito Peruano presenta armamento del frustrado ataque terrorista del MRTA," El Sol, March 20, 1997.

60. "Militares los torturaron para que admitieran ser del MRTA," La Repblica, March 26, 1997.

61. El Sol, March 20, 1997. The article in the pro-military El Sol appeared on the day after a television report denouncing that the peasants had been tortured into confessing. The article claimed that all of the detainees had been interrogated in the presence of the provincial prosecutor and that none had denounced torture. Thus, it concluded, the army had "de-activated another plan by the terrorists to attack the armed forces for committing abuses against peasants, in which they hoped to use the foreign press that is in our country for the hostage crisis." (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

62. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Paulino Sols Taype, Lima, April 4, 1997. Sols's allegation was confirmed by journalist Mara Elena Cornejo, who later interviewed the provincial prosecutor, Victoriano Nez Valdivia. He told her: "The thing is I don't have a budget for clothes, and as I was in civilian clothes and my shoes were dirty, the general lent me the uniform. Besides, it was 4 p.m. on a Friday and it was time for me to leave work, and I didn't have time to change. But I don't take pressure from anyone because I stand up to anyone like a man." Mara Elena Cornejo, "El Voltaje del Miedo, Caretas, No.1460, April 10, 1997, p.37.

63. The soldiers tried to force Loida Dionicio to admit that she had been recruited to the MRTA by another detainee, Aurelio Leiva, and that he had raped her. A later medical examination in the DINCOTE showed that Loida was, in fact, a virgin. Leiva had been singled out as the "leader" of the MRTA column.

64. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Ins Marilu Avila Glvez, March 1996.

65. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Emerson Wistrecher Cnepa, March 1996.

66. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Ins Marilu Avila Glvez, March 1996.

67. Human Rights Watch/Americas saw and photographed the torture equipment during our visit on April 2, 1997.

68. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Flix Jorge Romero, Lima, April 9, 1997.

69. Human Rights Watch/Americas interviews with Alfonso Rojas Colca and Jos Teofilo Huamn, Lima, April 4,1997.

70. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Martn Augusto Elguera, Lima, April 9, 1997.

71. "Salud sicolgica de rehenes est deteriorada," Expreso, March 31, 1997.

72. Judge Onsimo Julio Vela Velsquez, Informe No. 003-96-1JEPP, expediente No. 55-95, January 23,1996. Pages not numbered.

73. The forensic doctors asserted that it was impossible to determine whether the victim's lesions were self-inflicted or had been caused by a third party, but they went on, contradictorily, to say that the lesions had not been self-inflicted. Diligencia de necropsia en el cadver de Jhoel Huamn Garca. Ministerio Pblico Fiscala Mixta Pasco, date indistinct.

74. Judge Onsimo Vela Velsquez, Expediente No. 55-95, page un-numbered.

75. Penal Code, Book II, Title 1, Chapter 3, Article 121(3, ii).

76. Letter from Francisco Sobern, general coordinator of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos and Felicita Buenda Or, Chamaya's widow, to Luz Salgado Rubianes, president of the Congressional Human Rights Committee, November 9, 1995.

77. "Policas enfran taxista en cmica," El Popular, September 23, 1995. According to the same source, their superiors were complicit in their escape.

78. A police witnesses who was not identified told reporters that the officers responsible, apparently backed by the station chief, Carlos Snchez Gutirrez, hatched a plan to remove and "disappear" the body: "Lieutenant Zevallos tried to take the corpse away in the trunk of a private car, but because others tried to stop him, he began to shout like a madman, threatening to 'talk' about other abuses committed in the station. Later, he disappeared." "Jefes de cmica en Santa Felicia

implicados en crimen de taxista," El Popular, September 25, 1995.

79. "Asesinos de taxista se entregan a las autoridades y admiten su crimen," La Repblica, September 28, 1995.

80. According to a legal advisor to the criminal investigations department of the national police, the National Directorate for the Investigation of Crimes (Direccin Nacional de Investigacin del Crmen, DININCRI): "On this point, since the events took place in the installations of a police establishment and as a consequence of the carrying out of professional functions, the criminal conduct falls within the terms of Article 173 of the Constitution; for this reason the present advisor is of the opinion that, in application of Article 319 and 326 of the Code of Military Justice, it is of the exclusive competence of the military jurisdiction." Asesora Legal de la DININCRI-PNP, Dictmen no. 181-0AJ-DININCRI-PNP, September 25, 1995. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

81. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

82. Letter to the judge of the 40th Criminal Court, signed by Jorge Vega Fernndez, May 14, 1996.

83. The civilian and military judges also conflicted over the place where Zevallos would serve his sentence. After his conviction by the military court, police authorities refused to return him to Lurigancho, sending him to a military prison instead. According to a memo from the national penitentiary authorities to the judge, "this decision has caused administrative problems in this department in that the prisoner was interned in a public prison, Lurigancho, with a detention order issued by your worthy court, and in his capacity as accused, and he should have been returned to the same prison." Memo to the judge of the 40th Penal Court of Lima from an official of the National Penitentiary Institute (INP), a department of the Ministry of Justice, September 17, 1996.

84. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

85. "Policas de la delegacin de Brea asesinan a comerciante de lpidas," Expreso, March 25, 1996.

86. Manifestacin de Jos Enrique Palomino Garca, document bearing the National Police stamp, dated March 26, 1996.

87. Protocol de autopsia, Ref. Ofc. 384-96-14 FPPL-MP-FN, March 24, 1996.

88. Ampliacin de la Instructiva del Inculpado Alberto Snchez Vsquez, July 18, 1996.

89. Testimony of Jos Fiorentini Vergara, cited in summary of evidence by Judge Cecilia Bolack Baluarte of the 44th Criminal Court of Lima, November 6, 1996.

90. Testimony of Capt. Jorge Manuel Cheng Kong Chu, March 29, 1996.

91. Atestado No. 448 IC-H-DDCV, Delito Cometido por Funcionarios Pblicos- Abuso de Autoridad, April 2, 1996.

92. "Descuartizan a mujer agente del SIN y a otra la torturan y la internan en Hospital Militar," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "El ejrcito investigaba por 'infidencia' a Mariella Barreto la agente descuartizada," La Repblica, April 8, 1997; "Una agente de inteligencia asegura haber sido torturada," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Congreso pide informe a ministros por denuncias de torturas en el SIN," Expreso, April 8, 1997.

93. "Los planes al desnudo," La Repblica, April 7, 1997.

94. "Descuartizan a mujer."

95. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Orlando Barreto Pea, father of Mariella Barreto, April 7, 1997.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La

Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

60. "Militares los torturaron para que admitieran ser del MRTA," La Repblica, March 26, 1997.

61. El Sol, March 20, 1997. The article in the pro-military El Sol appeared on the day after a television report denouncing that the peasants had been tortured into confessing. The article claimed that all of the detainees had been interrogated in the presence of the provincial prosecutor and that none had denounced torture. Thus, it concluded, the army had "de-activated another plan by the terrorists to attack the armed forces for committing abuses against peasants, in which they hoped to use the foreign press that is in our country for the hostage crisis." (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

62. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Paulino Sols Taype, Lima, April 4, 1997. Sols's allegation was confirmed by journalist Mara Elena Cornejo, who later interviewed the provincial prosecutor, Victoriano Nez Valdivia. He told her: "The thing is I don't have a budget for clothes, and as I was in civilian clothes and my shoes were dirty, the general lent me the uniform. Besides, it was 4 p.m. on a Friday and it was time for me to leave work, and I didn't have time to change. But I don't take pressure from anyone because I stand up to anyone like a man." Mara Elena Cornejo, "El Voltaje del Miedo, Caretas, No.1460, April 10, 1997, p.37.

63. The soldiers tried to force Loida Dionicio to admit that she had been recruited to the MRTA by another detainee, Aurelio Leiva, and that he had raped her. A later medical examination in the DINCOTE showed that Loida was, in fact, a virgin. Leiva had been singled out as the "leader" of the MRTA column.

64. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Ins Marilu Avila Glvez, March 1996.

65. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Emerson Wistrecher Cnepa, March 1996.

66. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Ins Marilu Avila Glvez, March 1996.

67. Human Rights Watch/Americas saw and photographed the torture equipment during our visit on April 2, 1997.

68. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Flix Jorge Romero, Lima, April 9, 1997.

69. Human Rights Watch/Americas interviews with Alfonso Rojas Colca and Jos Teofilo Huamn, Lima, April 4,1997.

70. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Martn Augusto Elguera, Lima, April 9, 1997.

71. "Salud sicolgica de rehenes est deteriorada," Expreso, March 31, 1997.

72. Judge Onsimo Julio Vela Velsquez, Informe No. 003-96-1JEPP, expediente No. 55-95, January 23,1996. Pages not numbered.

73. The forensic doctors asserted that it was impossible to determine whether the victim's lesions were self-inflicted or had been caused by a third party, but they went on, contradictorily, to say that the lesions had not been self-inflicted. Diligencia de necropsia en el cadver de Jhoel Huamn Garca. Ministerio Pblico Fiscala Mixta Pasco, date indistinct.

74. Judge Onsimo Vela Velsquez, Expediente No. 55-95, page un-numbered.

75. Penal Code, Book II, Title 1, Chapter 3, Article 121(3, ii).

76. Letter from Francisco Sobern, general coordinator of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos and Felicita Buenda Or, Chamaya's widow, to Luz Salgado Rubianes, president of the Congressional Human Rights Committee, November 9, 1995.

77. "Policas enfran taxista en cmica," El Popular, September 23, 1995. According to the same source, their superiors were complicit in their escape.

78. A police witnesses who was not identified told reporters that the officers responsible, apparently backed by the station chief, Carlos Snchez Gutirrez, hatched a plan to remove and "disappear" the body: "Lieutenant Zevallos tried to take the corpse away in the trunk of a private car, but because others tried to stop him, he began to shout like a madman, threatening to 'talk' about other abuses committed in the station. Later, he disappeared." "Jefes de cmica en Santa Felicia

implicados en crimen de taxista," El Popular, September 25, 1995.

79. "Asesinos de taxista se entregan a las autoridades y admiten su crimen," La Repblica, September 28, 1995.

80. According to a legal advisor to the criminal investigations department of the national police, the National Directorate for the Investigation of Crimes (Direccin Nacional de Investigacin del Crmen, DININCRI): "On this point, since the events took place in the installations of a police establishment and as a consequence of the carrying out of professional functions, the criminal conduct falls within the terms of Article 173 of the Constitution; for this reason the present advisor is of the opinion that, in application of Article 319 and 326 of the Code of Military Justice, it is of the exclusive competence of the military jurisdiction." Asesora Legal de la DININCRI-PNP, Dictmen no. 181-0AJ-DININCRI-PNP, September 25, 1995. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

81. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

82. Letter to the judge of the 40th Criminal Court, signed by Jorge Vega Fernndez, May 14, 1996.

83. The civilian and military judges also conflicted over the place where Zevallos would serve his sentence. After his conviction by the military court, police authorities refused to return him to Lurigancho, sending him to a military prison instead. According to a memo from the national penitentiary authorities to the judge, "this decision has caused administrative problems in this department in that the prisoner was interned in a public prison, Lurigancho, with a detention order issued by your worthy court, and in his capacity as accused, and he should have been returned to the same prison." Memo to the judge of the 40th Penal Court of Lima from an official of the National Penitentiary Institute (INP), a department of the Ministry of Justice, September 17, 1996.

84. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

85. "Policas de la delegacin de Brea asesinan a comerciante de lpidas," Expreso, March 25, 1996.

86. Manifestacin de Jos Enrique Palomino Garca, document bearing the National Police stamp, dated March 26, 1996.

87. Protocol de autopsia, Ref. Ofc. 384-96-14 FPPL-MP-FN, March 24, 1996.

88. Ampliacin de la Instructiva del Inculpado Alberto Snchez Vsquez, July 18, 1996.

89. Testimony of Jos Fiorentini Vergara, cited in summary of evidence by Judge Cecilia Bolack Baluarte of the 44th Criminal Court of Lima, November 6, 1996.

90. Testimony of Capt. Jorge Manuel Cheng Kong Chu, March 29, 1996.

91. Atestado No. 448 IC-H-DDCV, Delito Cometido por Funcionarios Pblicos- Abuso de Autoridad, April 2, 1996.

92. "Descuartizan a mujer agente del SIN y a otra la torturan y la internan en Hospital Militar," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "El ejrcito investigaba por 'infidencia' a Mariella Barreto la agente descuartizada," La Repblica, April 8, 1997; "Una agente de inteligencia asegura haber sido torturada," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Congreso pide informe a ministros por denuncias de torturas en el SIN," Expreso, April 8, 1997.

93. "Los planes al desnudo," La Repblica, April 7, 1997.

94. "Descuartizan a mujer."

95. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Orlando Barreto Pea, father of Mariella Barreto, April 7, 1997.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

61. El Sol, March 20, 1997. The article in the pro-military El Sol appeared on the day after a television report denouncing that the peasants had been tortured into confessing. The article claimed that all of the detainees had been interrogated in the presence of the provincial prosecutor and that none had denounced torture. Thus, it concluded, the army had "de-activated another plan by the terrorists to attack the armed forces for committing abuses against peasants, in which they hoped to use the foreign press that is in our country for the hostage crisis." (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

62. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Paulino Sols Taype, Lima, April 4, 1997. Sols's allegation was confirmed by journalist Mara Elena Cornejo, who later interviewed the provincial prosecutor, Victoriano Nez Valdivia. He told her: "The thing is I don't have a budget for clothes, and as I was in civilian clothes and my shoes were dirty, the general lent me the uniform. Besides, it was 4 p.m. on a Friday and it was time for me to leave work, and I didn't have time to change. But I don't take pressure from anyone because I stand up to anyone like a man." Mara Elena Cornejo, "El Voltaje del Miedo, Caretas, No.1460, April 10, 1997, p.37.

63. The soldiers tried to force Loida Dionicio to admit that she had been recruited to the MRTA by another detainee, Aurelio Leiva, and that he had raped her. A later medical examination in the DINCOTE showed that Loida was, in fact, a virgin. Leiva had been singled out as the "leader" of the MRTA column.

64. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Ins Marilu Avila Glvez, March 1996.

65. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Emerson Wistrecher Cnepa, March 1996.

66. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Ins Marilu Avila Glvez, March 1996.

67. Human Rights Watch/Americas saw and photographed the torture equipment during our visit on April 2, 1997.

68. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Flix Jorge Romero, Lima, April 9, 1997.

69. Human Rights Watch/Americas interviews with Alfonso Rojas Colca and Jos Teofilo Huamn, Lima, April 4,1997.

70. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Martn Augusto Elguera, Lima, April 9, 1997.

71. "Salud sicolgica de rehenes est deteriorada," Expreso, March 31, 1997.

72. Judge Onsimo Julio Vela Velsquez, Informe No. 003-96-1JEPP, expediente No. 55-95, January 23,1996. Pages not numbered.

73. The forensic doctors asserted that it was impossible to determine whether the victim's lesions were self-inflicted or had been caused by a third party, but they went on, contradictorily, to say that the lesions had not been self-inflicted. Diligencia de necropsia en el cadver de Jhoel Huamn Garca. Ministerio Pblico Fiscala Mixta Pasco, date indistinct.

74. Judge Onsimo Vela Velsquez, Expediente No. 55-95, page un-numbered.

75. Penal Code, Book II, Title 1, Chapter 3, Article 121(3, ii).

76. Letter from Francisco Sobern, general coordinator of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos and Felicita Buenda Or, Chamaya's widow, to Luz Salgado Rubianes, president of the Congressional Human Rights Committee, November 9, 1995.

77. "Policas enfran taxista en cmica," El Popular, September 23, 1995. According to the same source, their superiors were complicit in their escape.

78. A police witnesses who was not identified told reporters that the officers responsible, apparently backed by the station chief, Carlos Snchez Gutirrez, hatched a plan to remove and "disappear" the body: "Lieutenant Zevallos tried to take the corpse away in the trunk of a private car, but because others tried to stop him, he began to shout like a madman, threatening to 'talk' about other abuses committed in the station. Later, he disappeared." "Jefes de cmica en Santa Felicia

implicados en crimen de taxista," El Popular, September 25, 1995.

79. "Asesinos de taxista se entregan a las autoridades y admiten su crimen," La Repblica, September 28, 1995.

80. According to a legal advisor to the criminal investigations department of the national police, the National Directorate for the Investigation of Crimes (Direccin Nacional de Investigacin del Crmen, DININCRI): "On this point, since the events took place in the installations of a police establishment and as a consequence of the carrying out of professional functions, the criminal conduct falls within the terms of Article 173 of the Constitution; for this reason the present advisor is of the opinion that, in application of Article 319 and 326 of the Code of Military Justice, it is of the exclusive competence of the military jurisdiction." Asesora Legal de la DININCRI-PNP, Dictmen no. 181-0AJ-DININCRI-PNP, September 25, 1995. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

81. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

82. Letter to the judge of the 40th Criminal Court, signed by Jorge Vega Fernndez, May 14, 1996.

83. The civilian and military judges also conflicted over the place where Zevallos would serve his sentence. After his conviction by the military court, police authorities refused to return him to Lurigancho, sending him to a military prison instead. According to a memo from the national penitentiary authorities to the judge, "this decision has caused administrative problems in this department in that the prisoner was interned in a public prison, Lurigancho, with a detention order issued by your worthy court, and in his capacity as accused, and he should have been returned to the same prison." Memo to the judge of the 40th Penal Court of Lima from an official of the National Penitentiary Institute (INP), a department of the Ministry of Justice, September 17, 1996.

84. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

85. "Policas de la delegacin de Brea asesinan a comerciante de lpidas," Expreso, March 25, 1996.

86. Manifestacin de Jos Enrique Palomino Garca, document bearing the National Police stamp, dated March 26, 1996.

87. Protocol de autopsia, Ref. Ofc. 384-96-14 FPPL-MP-FN, March 24, 1996.

88. Ampliacin de la Instructiva del Inculpado Alberto Snchez Vsquez, July 18, 1996.

89. Testimony of Jos Fiorentini Vergara, cited in summary of evidence by Judge Cecilia Bolack Baluarte of the 44th Criminal Court of Lima, November 6, 1996.

90. Testimony of Capt. Jorge Manuel Cheng Kong Chu, March 29, 1996.

91. Atestado No. 448 IC-H-DDCV, Delito Cometido por Funcionarios Pblicos- Abuso de Autoridad, April 2, 1996.

92. "Descuartizan a mujer agente del SIN y a otra la torturan y la internan en Hospital Militar," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "El ejrcito investigaba por 'infidencia' a Mariella Barreto la agente descuartizada," La Repblica, April 8, 1997; "Una agente de inteligencia asegura haber sido torturada," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Congreso pide informe a ministros por denuncias de torturas en el SIN," Expreso, April 8, 1997.

93. "Los planes al desnudo," La Repblica, April 7, 1997.

94. "Descuartizan a mujer."

95. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Orlando Barreto Pea, father of Mariella Barreto, April 7, 1997.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

62. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Paulino Sols Taype, Lima, April 4, 1997. Sols's allegation was confirmed by journalist Mara Elena Cornejo, who later interviewed the provincial prosecutor, Victoriano Nez Valdivia. He told her: "The thing is I don't have a budget for clothes, and as I was in civilian clothes and my shoes were dirty, the general lent me the uniform. Besides, it was 4 p.m. on a Friday and it was time for me to leave work, and I didn't have time to change. But I don't take pressure from anyone because I stand up to anyone like a man." Mara Elena Cornejo, "El Voltaje del Miedo, Caretas, No.1460, April 10, 1997, p.37.

63. The soldiers tried to force Loida Dionicio to admit that she had been recruited to the MRTA by another detainee, Aurelio Leiva, and that he had raped her. A later medical examination in the DINCOTE showed that Loida was, in fact, a virgin. Leiva had been singled out as the "leader" of the MRTA column.

64. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Ins Marilu Avila Glvez, March 1996.

65. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Emerson Wistrecher Cnepa, March 1996.

66. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Ins Marilu Avila Glvez, March 1996.

67. Human Rights Watch/Americas saw and photographed the torture equipment during our visit on April 2, 1997.

68. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Flix Jorge Romero, Lima, April 9, 1997.

69. Human Rights Watch/Americas interviews with Alfonso Rojas Colca and Jos Teofilo Huamn, Lima, April 4,1997.

70. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Martn Augusto Elguera, Lima, April 9, 1997.

71. "Salud sicolgica de rehenes est deteriorada," Expreso, March 31, 1997.

72. Judge Onsimo Julio Vela Velsquez, Informe No. 003-96-1JEPP, expediente No. 55-95, January 23,1996. Pages not numbered.

73. The forensic doctors asserted that it was impossible to determine whether the victim's lesions were self-inflicted or had been caused by a third party, but they went on, contradictorily, to say that the lesions had not been self-inflicted. Diligencia de necropsia en el cadver de Jhoel Huamn Garca. Ministerio Pblico Fiscala Mixta Pasco, date indistinct.

74. Judge Onsimo Vela Velsquez, Expediente No. 55-95, page un-numbered.

75. Penal Code, Book II, Title 1, Chapter 3, Article 121(3, ii).

76. Letter from Francisco Sobern, general coordinator of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos and Felicita Buenda Or, Chamaya's widow, to Luz Salgado Rubianes, president of the Congressional Human Rights Committee, November 9, 1995.

77. "Policas enfran taxista en cmica," El Popular, September 23, 1995. According to the same source, their superiors were complicit in their escape.

78. A police witnesses who was not identified told reporters that the officers responsible, apparently backed by the station chief, Carlos Snchez Gutirrez, hatched a plan to remove and "disappear" the body: "Lieutenant Zevallos tried to take the corpse away in the trunk of a private car, but because others tried to stop him, he began to shout like a madman, threatening to 'talk' about other abuses committed in the station. Later, he disappeared." "Jefes de cmica en Santa Felicia

implicados en crimen de taxista," El Popular, September 25, 1995.

79. "Asesinos de taxista se entregan a las autoridades y admiten su crimen," La Repblica, September 28, 1995.

80. According to a legal advisor to the criminal investigations department of the national police, the National Directorate for the Investigation of Crimes (Direccin Nacional de Investigacin del Crmen, DININCRI): "On this point, since the events took place in the installations of a police establishment and as a consequence of the carrying out of professional functions, the criminal conduct falls within the terms of Article 173 of the Constitution; for this reason the present advisor is of the opinion that, in application of Article 319 and 326 of the Code of Military Justice, it is of the exclusive competence of the military jurisdiction." Asesora Legal de la DININCRI-PNP, Dictmen no. 181-0AJ-DININCRI-PNP, September 25, 1995. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

81. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

82. Letter to the judge of the 40th Criminal Court, signed by Jorge Vega Fernndez, May 14, 1996.

83. The civilian and military judges also conflicted over the place where Zevallos would serve his sentence. After his conviction by the military court, police authorities refused to return him to Lurigancho, sending him to a military prison instead. According to a memo from the national penitentiary authorities to the judge, "this decision has caused administrative problems in this department in that the prisoner was interned in a public prison, Lurigancho, with a detention order issued by your worthy court, and in his capacity as accused, and he should have been returned to the same prison." Memo to the judge of the 40th Penal Court of Lima from an official of the National Penitentiary Institute (INP), a department of the Ministry of Justice, September 17, 1996.

84. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

85. "Policas de la delegacin de Brea asesinan a comerciante de lpidas," Expreso, March 25, 1996.

86. Manifestacin de Jos Enrique Palomino Garca, document bearing the National Police stamp, dated March 26, 1996.

87. Protocol de autopsia, Ref. Ofc. 384-96-14 FPPL-MP-FN, March 24, 1996.

88. Ampliacin de la Instructiva del Inculpado Alberto Snchez Vsquez, July 18, 1996.

89. Testimony of Jos Fiorentini Vergara, cited in summary of evidence by Judge Cecilia Bolack Baluarte of the 44th Criminal Court of Lima, November 6, 1996.

90. Testimony of Capt. Jorge Manuel Cheng Kong Chu, March 29, 1996.

91. Atestado No. 448 IC-H-DDCV, Delito Cometido por Funcionarios Pblicos- Abuso de Autoridad, April 2, 1996.

92. "Descuartizan a mujer agente del SIN y a otra la torturan y la internan en Hospital Militar," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "El ejrcito investigaba por 'infidencia' a Mariella Barreto la agente descuartizada," La Repblica, April 8, 1997; "Una agente de inteligencia asegura haber sido torturada," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Congreso pide informe a ministros por denuncias de torturas en el SIN," Expreso, April 8, 1997.

93. "Los planes al desnudo," La Repblica, April 7, 1997.

94. "Descuartizan a mujer."

95. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Orlando Barreto Pea, father of Mariella Barreto, April 7, 1997.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

63. The soldiers tried to force Loida Dionicio to admit that she had been recruited to the MRTA by another detainee, Aurelio Leiva, and that he had raped her. A later medical examination in the DINCOTE showed that Loida was, in fact, a virgin. Leiva had been singled out as the "leader" of the MRTA column.

64. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Ins Marilu Avila Glvez, March 1996.

65. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Emerson Wistrecher Cnepa, March 1996.

66. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Ins Marilu Avila Glvez, March 1996.

67. Human Rights Watch/Americas saw and photographed the torture equipment during our visit on April 2, 1997.

68. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Flix Jorge Romero, Lima, April 9, 1997.

69. Human Rights Watch/Americas interviews with Alfonso Rojas Colca and Jos Teofilo Huamn, Lima, April 4,1997.

70. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Martn Augusto Elguera, Lima, April 9, 1997.

71. "Salud sicolgica de rehenes est deteriorada," Expreso, March 31, 1997.

72. Judge Onsimo Julio Vela Velsquez, Informe No. 003-96-1JEPP, expediente No. 55-95, January 23,1996. Pages not numbered.

73. The forensic doctors asserted that it was impossible to determine whether the victim's lesions were self-inflicted or had been caused by a third party, but they went on, contradictorily, to say that the lesions had not been self-inflicted. Diligencia de necropsia en el cadver de Jhoel Huamn Garca. Ministerio Pblico Fiscala Mixta Pasco, date indistinct.

74. Judge Onsimo Vela Velsquez, Expediente No. 55-95, page un-numbered.

75. Penal Code, Book II, Title 1, Chapter 3, Article 121(3, ii).

76. Letter from Francisco Sobern, general coordinator of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos and Felicita Buenda Or, Chamaya's widow, to Luz Salgado Rubianes, president of the Congressional Human Rights Committee, November 9, 1995.

77. "Policas enfran taxista en cmica," El Popular, September 23, 1995. According to the same source, their superiors were complicit in their escape.

78. A police witnesses who was not identified told reporters that the officers responsible, apparently backed by the station chief, Carlos Snchez Gutirrez, hatched a plan to remove and "disappear" the body: "Lieutenant Zevallos tried to take the corpse away in the trunk of a private car, but because others tried to stop him, he began to shout like a madman, threatening to 'talk' about other abuses committed in the station. Later, he disappeared." "Jefes de cmica en Santa Felicia

implicados en crimen de taxista," El Popular, September 25, 1995.

79. "Asesinos de taxista se entregan a las autoridades y admiten su crimen," La Repblica, September 28, 1995.

80. According to a legal advisor to the criminal investigations department of the national police, the National Directorate for the Investigation of Crimes (Direccin Nacional de Investigacin del Crmen, DININCRI): "On this point, since the events took place in the installations of a police establishment and as a consequence of the carrying out of professional functions, the criminal conduct falls within the terms of Article 173 of the Constitution; for this reason the present advisor is of the opinion that, in application of Article 319 and 326 of the Code of Military Justice, it is of the exclusive competence of the military jurisdiction." Asesora Legal de la DININCRI-PNP, Dictmen no. 181-0AJ-DININCRI-PNP, September 25, 1995. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

81. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

82. Letter to the judge of the 40th Criminal Court, signed by Jorge Vega Fernndez, May 14, 1996.

83. The civilian and military judges also conflicted over the place where Zevallos would serve his sentence. After his conviction by the military court, police authorities refused to return him to Lurigancho, sending him to a military prison instead. According to a memo from the national penitentiary authorities to the judge, "this decision has caused administrative problems in this department in that the prisoner was interned in a public prison, Lurigancho, with a detention order issued by your worthy court, and in his capacity as accused, and he should have been returned to the same prison." Memo to the judge of the 40th Penal Court of Lima from an official of the National Penitentiary Institute (INP), a department of the Ministry of Justice, September 17, 1996.

84. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

85. "Policas de la delegacin de Brea asesinan a comerciante de lpidas," Expreso, March 25, 1996.

86. Manifestacin de Jos Enrique Palomino Garca, document bearing the National Police stamp, dated March 26, 1996.

87. Protocol de autopsia, Ref. Ofc. 384-96-14 FPPL-MP-FN, March 24, 1996.

88. Ampliacin de la Instructiva del Inculpado Alberto Snchez Vsquez, July 18, 1996.

89. Testimony of Jos Fiorentini Vergara, cited in summary of evidence by Judge Cecilia Bolack Baluarte of the 44th Criminal Court of Lima, November 6, 1996.

90. Testimony of Capt. Jorge Manuel Cheng Kong Chu, March 29, 1996.

91. Atestado No. 448 IC-H-DDCV, Delito Cometido por Funcionarios Pblicos- Abuso de Autoridad, April 2, 1996.

92. "Descuartizan a mujer agente del SIN y a otra la torturan y la internan en Hospital Militar," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "El ejrcito investigaba por 'infidencia' a Mariella Barreto la agente descuartizada," La Repblica, April 8, 1997; "Una agente de inteligencia asegura haber sido torturada," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Congreso pide informe a ministros por denuncias de torturas en el SIN," Expreso, April 8, 1997.

93. "Los planes al desnudo," La Repblica, April 7, 1997.

94. "Descuartizan a mujer."

95. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Orlando Barreto Pea, father of Mariella Barreto, April 7, 1997.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord"

with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

64. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Ins Marilu Avila Glvez, March 1996.

65. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Emerson Wistrecher Cnepa, March 1996.

66. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Ins Marilu Avila Glvez, March 1996.

67. Human Rights Watch/Americas saw and photographed the torture equipment during our visit on April 2, 1997.

68. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Flix Jorge Romero, Lima, April 9, 1997.

69. Human Rights Watch/Americas interviews with Alfonso Rojas Colca and Jos Teofilo Huamn, Lima, April 4,1997.

70. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Martn Augusto Elguera, Lima, April 9, 1997.

71. "Salud sicolgica de rehenes est deteriorada," Expreso, March 31, 1997.

72. Judge Onsimo Julio Vela Velsquez, Informe No. 003-96-1JEPP, expediente No. 55-95, January 23,1996. Pages not numbered.

73. The forensic doctors asserted that it was impossible to determine whether the victim's lesions were self-inflicted or had been caused by a third party, but they went on, contradictorily, to say that the lesions had not been self-inflicted. Diligencia de necropsia en el cadver de Jhoel Huamn Garca. Ministerio Pblico Fiscala Mixta Pasco, date indistinct.

74. Judge Onsimo Vela Velsquez, Expediente No. 55-95, page un-numbered.

75. Penal Code, Book II, Title 1, Chapter 3, Article 121(3, ii).

76. Letter from Francisco Sobern, general coordinator of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos and Felicita Buenda Or, Chamaya's widow, to Luz Salgado Rubianes, president of the Congressional Human Rights Committee, November 9, 1995.

77. "Policas enfran taxista en cmica," El Popular, September 23, 1995. According to the same source, their superiors were complicit in their escape.

78. A police witnesses who was not identified told reporters that the officers responsible, apparently backed by the station chief, Carlos Snchez Gutirrez, hatched a plan to remove and "disappear" the body: "Lieutenant Zevallos tried to take the corpse away in the trunk of a private car, but because others tried to stop him, he began to shout like a madman, threatening to 'talk' about other abuses committed in the station. Later, he disappeared." "Jefes de cmica en Santa Felicia

implicados en crimen de taxista," El Popular, September 25, 1995.

79. "Asesinos de taxista se entregan a las autoridades y admiten su crimen," La Repblica, September 28, 1995.

80. According to a legal advisor to the criminal investigations department of the national police, the National Directorate for the Investigation of Crimes (Direccin Nacional de Investigacin del Crmen, DININCRI): "On this point, since the events took place in the installations of a police establishment and as a consequence of the carrying out of professional functions, the criminal conduct falls within the terms of Article 173 of the Constitution; for this reason the present advisor is of the opinion that, in application of Article 319 and 326 of the Code of Military Justice, it is of the exclusive competence of the military jurisdiction." Asesora Legal de la DININCRI-PNP, Dictmen no. 181-0AJ-DININCRI-PNP, September 25, 1995. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

81. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

82. Letter to the judge of the 40th Criminal Court, signed by Jorge Vega Fernndez, May 14, 1996.

83. The civilian and military judges also conflicted over the place where Zevallos would serve his sentence. After his conviction by the military court, police authorities refused to return him to Lurigancho, sending him to a military prison instead. According to a memo from the national penitentiary authorities to the judge, "this decision has caused administrative problems in this department in that the prisoner was interned in a public prison, Lurigancho, with a detention order issued by your worthy court, and in his capacity as accused, and he should have been returned to the same prison." Memo to the judge of the 40th Penal Court of Lima from an official of the National Penitentiary Institute (INP), a department of the Ministry of Justice, September 17, 1996.

84. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

85. "Policas de la delegacin de Brea asesinan a comerciante de lpidas," Expreso, March 25, 1996.

86. Manifestacin de Jos Enrique Palomino Garca, document bearing the National Police stamp, dated March 26, 1996.

87. Protocol de autopsia, Ref. Ofc. 384-96-14 FPPL-MP-FN, March 24, 1996.

88. Ampliacin de la Instructiva del Inculpado Alberto Snchez Vsquez, July 18, 1996.

89. Testimony of Jos Fiorentini Vergara, cited in summary of evidence by Judge Cecilia Bolack Baluarte of the 44th Criminal Court of Lima, November 6, 1996.

90. Testimony of Capt. Jorge Manuel Cheng Kong Chu, March 29, 1996.

91. Atestado No. 448 IC-H-DDCV, Delito Cometido por Funcionarios Pblicos- Abuso de Autoridad, April 2, 1996.

92. "Descuartizan a mujer agente del SIN y a otra la torturan y la internan en Hospital Militar," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "El ejrcito investigaba por 'infidencia' a Mariella Barreto la agente descuartizada," La Repblica, April 8, 1997; "Una agente de inteligencia asegura haber sido torturada," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Congreso pide informe a ministros por denuncias de torturas en el SIN," Expreso, April 8, 1997.

93. "Los planes al desnudo," La Repblica, April 7, 1997.

94. "Descuartizan a mujer."

95. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Orlando Barreto Pea, father of Mariella Barreto, April 7, 1997.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

65. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Emerson Wistrecher Cnepa, March 1996.

66. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Ins Marilu Avila Glvez, March 1996.

67. Human Rights Watch/Americas saw and photographed the torture equipment during our visit on April 2, 1997.

68. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Flix Jorge Romero, Lima, April 9, 1997.

69. Human Rights Watch/Americas interviews with Alfonso Rojas Colca and Jos Teofilo Huamn, Lima, April 4,1997.

70. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Martn Augusto Elguera, Lima, April 9, 1997.

71. "Salud sicolgica de rehenes est deteriorada," Expreso, March 31, 1997.

72. Judge Onsimo Julio Vela Velsquez, Informe No. 003-96-1JEPP, expediente No. 55-95, January 23,1996. Pages not numbered.

73. The forensic doctors asserted that it was impossible to determine whether the victim's lesions were self-inflicted or had been caused by a third party, but they went on, contradictorily, to say that the lesions had not been self-inflicted. Diligencia de necropsia en el cadver de Jhoel Huamn Garca. Ministerio Pblico Fiscala Mixta Pasco, date indistinct.

74. Judge Onsimo Vela Velsquez, Expediente No. 55-95, page un-numbered.

75. Penal Code, Book II, Title 1, Chapter 3, Article 121(3, ii).

76. Letter from Francisco Sobern, general coordinator of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos and Felicita Buenda Or, Chamaya's widow, to Luz Salgado Rubianes, president of the Congressional Human Rights Committee, November 9, 1995.

77. "Policas enfran taxista en cmica," El Popular, September 23, 1995. According to the same source, their superiors were complicit in their escape.

78. A police witnesses who was not identified told reporters that the officers responsible, apparently backed by the station chief, Carlos Snchez Gutirrez, hatched a plan to remove and "disappear" the body: "Lieutenant Zevallos tried to take the corpse away in the trunk of a private car, but because others tried to stop him, he began to shout like a madman, threatening to 'talk' about other abuses committed in the station. Later, he disappeared." "Jefes de cmica en Santa Felicia

implicados en crimen de taxista," El Popular, September 25, 1995.

79. "Asesinos de taxista se entregan a las autoridades y admiten su crimen," La Repblica, September 28, 1995.

80. According to a legal advisor to the criminal investigations department of the national police, the National Directorate for the Investigation of Crimes (Direccin Nacional de Investigacin del Crmen, DININCRI): "On this point, since the events took place in the installations of a police establishment and as a consequence of the carrying out of professional functions, the criminal conduct falls within the terms of Article 173 of the Constitution; for this reason the present advisor is of the opinion that, in application of Article 319 and 326 of the Code of Military Justice, it is of the exclusive competence of the military jurisdiction." Asesora Legal de la DININCRI-PNP, Dictmen no. 181-0AJ-DININCRI-PNP, September 25, 1995. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

81. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

82. Letter to the judge of the 40th Criminal Court, signed by Jorge Vega Fernndez, May 14, 1996.

83. The civilian and military judges also conflicted over the place where Zevallos would serve his sentence. After his conviction by the military court, police authorities refused to return him to Lurigancho, sending him to a military prison instead. According to a memo from the national penitentiary authorities to the judge, "this decision has caused administrative problems in this department in that the prisoner was interned in a public prison, Lurigancho, with a detention order issued by your worthy court, and in his capacity as accused, and he should have been returned to the same prison." Memo to the judge of the 40th Penal Court of Lima from an official of the National Penitentiary Institute (INP), a department of the Ministry of Justice, September 17, 1996.

84. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

85. "Policas de la delegacin de Brea asesinan a comerciante de lpidas," Expreso, March 25, 1996.

86. Manifestacin de Jos Enrique Palomino Garca, document bearing the National Police stamp, dated March 26, 1996.

87. Protocol de autopsia, Ref. Ofc. 384-96-14 FPPL-MP-FN, March 24, 1996.

88. Ampliacin de la Instructiva del Inculpado Alberto Snchez Vsquez, July 18, 1996.

89. Testimony of Jos Fiorentini Vergara, cited in summary of evidence by Judge Cecilia Bolack Baluarte of the 44th Criminal Court of Lima, November 6, 1996.

90. Testimony of Capt. Jorge Manuel Cheng Kong Chu, March 29, 1996.

91. Atestado No. 448 IC-H-DDCV, Delito Cometido por Funcionarios Pblicos- Abuso de Autoridad, April 2, 1996.

92. "Descuartizan a mujer agente del SIN y a otra la torturan y la internan en Hospital Militar," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "El ejrcito investigaba por 'infidencia' a Mariella Barreto la agente descuartizada," La Repblica, April 8, 1997; "Una agente de inteligencia asegura haber sido torturada," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Congreso pide informe a ministros por denuncias de torturas en el SIN," Expreso, April 8, 1997.

93. "Los planes al desnudo," La Repblica, April 7, 1997.

94. "Descuartizan a mujer."

95. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Orlando Barreto Pea, father of Mariella Barreto, April 7, 1997.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

66. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, unpublished testimony of Ins Marilu Avila Glvez, March 1996.

67. Human Rights Watch/Americas saw and photographed the torture equipment during our visit on April 2, 1997.

68. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Flix Jorge Romero, Lima, April 9, 1997.

69. Human Rights Watch/Americas interviews with Alfonso Rojas Colca and Jos Teofilo Huamn, Lima, April 4,1997.

70. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Martn Augusto Elguera, Lima, April 9, 1997.

71. "Salud sicolgica de rehenes est deteriorada," Expreso, March 31, 1997.

72. Judge Onsimo Julio Vela Velsquez, Informe No. 003-96-1JEPP, expediente No. 55-95, January 23,1996. Pages not numbered.

73. The forensic doctors asserted that it was impossible to determine whether the victim's lesions were self-inflicted or had been caused by a third party, but they went on, contradictorily, to say that the lesions had not been self-inflicted. Diligencia de necropsia en el cadver de Jhoel Huamn Garca. Ministerio Pblico Fiscala Mixta Pasco, date indistinct.

74. Judge Onsimo Vela Velsquez, Expediente No. 55-95, page un-numbered.

75. Penal Code, Book II, Title 1, Chapter 3, Article 121(3, ii).

76. Letter from Francisco Sobern, general coordinator of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos and Felicita Buenda Or, Chamaya's widow, to Luz Salgado Rubianes, president of the Congressional Human Rights Committee, November 9, 1995.

77. "Policas enfran taxista en cmica," El Popular, September 23, 1995. According to the same source, their superiors were complicit in their escape.

78. A police witnesses who was not identified told reporters that the officers responsible, apparently backed by the station chief, Carlos Snchez Gutirrez, hatched a plan to remove and "disappear" the body: "Lieutenant Zevallos tried to take the corpse away in the trunk of a private car, but because others tried to stop him, he began to shout like a madman, threatening to 'talk' about other abuses committed in the station. Later, he disappeared." "Jefes de cmica en Santa Felicia

implicados en crimen de taxista," El Popular, September 25, 1995.

79. "Asesinos de taxista se entregan a las autoridades y admiten su crimen," La Repblica, September 28, 1995.

80. According to a legal advisor to the criminal investigations department of the national police, the National Directorate for the Investigation of Crimes (Direccin Nacional de Investigacin del Crmen, DININCRI): "On this point, since the events took place in the installations of a police establishment and as a consequence of the carrying out of professional functions, the criminal conduct falls within the terms of Article 173 of the Constitution; for this reason the present advisor is of the opinion that, in application of Article 319 and 326 of the Code of Military Justice, it is of the exclusive competence of the military jurisdiction." Asesora Legal de la DININCRI-PNP, Dictmen no. 181-0AJ-DININCRI-PNP, September 25, 1995. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

81. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

82. Letter to the judge of the 40th Criminal Court, signed by Jorge Vega Fernndez, May 14, 1996.

83. The civilian and military judges also conflicted over the place where Zevallos would serve his sentence. After his conviction by the military court, police authorities refused to return him to Lurigancho, sending him to a military prison instead. According to a memo from the national penitentiary authorities to the judge, "this decision has caused administrative problems in this department in that the prisoner was interned in a public prison, Lurigancho, with a detention order issued by your worthy court, and in his capacity as accused, and he should have been returned to the same prison." Memo to the judge of the 40th Penal Court of Lima from an official of the National Penitentiary Institute (INP), a department of the Ministry of Justice, September 17, 1996.

84. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

85. "Policas de la delegacin de Brea asesinan a comerciante de lpidas," Expreso, March 25, 1996.

86. Manifestacin de Jos Enrique Palomino Garca, document bearing the National Police stamp, dated March 26, 1996.

87. Protocol de autopsia, Ref. Ofc. 384-96-14 FPPL-MP-FN, March 24, 1996.

88. Ampliacin de la Instructiva del Inculpado Alberto Snchez Vsquez, July 18, 1996.

89. Testimony of Jos Fiorentini Vergara, cited in summary of evidence by Judge Cecilia Bolack Baluarte of the 44th Criminal Court of Lima, November 6, 1996.

90. Testimony of Capt. Jorge Manuel Cheng Kong Chu, March 29, 1996.

91. Atestado No. 448 IC-H-DDCV, Delito Cometido por Funcionarios Pblicos- Abuso de Autoridad, April 2, 1996.

92. "Descuartizan a mujer agente del SIN y a otra la torturan y la internan en Hospital Militar," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "El ejrcito investigaba por 'infidencia' a Mariella Barreto la agente descuartizada," La Repblica, April 8, 1997; "Una agente de inteligencia asegura haber sido torturada," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Congreso pide informe a ministros por denuncias de torturas en el SIN," Expreso, April 8, 1997.

93. "Los planes al desnudo," La Repblica, April 7, 1997.

94. "Descuartizan a mujer."

95. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Orlando Barreto Pea, father of Mariella Barreto, April 7, 1997.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

67. Human Rights Watch/Americas saw and photographed the torture equipment during our visit on April 2, 1997.

68. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Flix Jorge Romero, Lima, April 9, 1997.

69. Human Rights Watch/Americas interviews with Alfonso Rojas Colca and Jos Teofilo Huamn, Lima, April 4,1997.

70. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Martn Augusto Elguera, Lima, April 9, 1997.

71. "Salud sicolgica de rehenes est deteriorada," Expreso, March 31, 1997.

72. Judge Onsimo Julio Vela Velsquez, Informe No. 003-96-1JEPP, expediente No. 55-95, January 23,1996. Pages not numbered.

73. The forensic doctors asserted that it was impossible to determine whether the victim's lesions were self-inflicted or had been caused by a third party, but they went on, contradictorily, to say that the lesions had not been self-inflicted. Diligencia de necropsia en el cadver de Jhoel Huamn Garca. Ministerio Pblico Fiscala Mixta Pasco, date indistinct.

74. Judge Onsimo Vela Velsquez, Expediente No. 55-95, page un-numbered.

75. Penal Code, Book II, Title 1, Chapter 3, Article 121(3, ii).

76. Letter from Francisco Sobern, general coordinator of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos and Felicita Buenda Or, Chamaya's widow, to Luz Salgado Rubianes, president of the Congressional Human Rights Committee, November 9, 1995.

77. "Policas enfran taxista en cmica," El Popular, September 23, 1995. According to the same source, their superiors were complicit in their escape.

78. A police witnesses who was not identified told reporters that the officers responsible, apparently backed by the station chief, Carlos Snchez Gutirrez, hatched a plan to remove and "disappear" the body: "Lieutenant Zevallos tried to take the corpse away in the trunk of a private car, but because others tried to stop him, he began to shout like a madman, threatening to 'talk' about other abuses committed in the station. Later, he disappeared." "Jefes de cmica en Santa Felicia

implicados en crimen de taxista," El Popular, September 25, 1995.

79. "Asesinos de taxista se entregan a las autoridades y admiten su crimen," La Repblica, September 28, 1995.

80. According to a legal advisor to the criminal investigations department of the national police, the National Directorate for the Investigation of Crimes (Direccin Nacional de Investigacin del Crmen, DININCRI): "On this point, since the events took place in the installations of a police establishment and as a consequence of the carrying out of professional functions, the criminal conduct falls within the terms of Article 173 of the Constitution; for this reason the present advisor is of the opinion that, in application of Article 319 and 326 of the Code of Military Justice, it is of the exclusive competence of the military jurisdiction." Asesora Legal de la DININCRI-PNP, Dictmen no. 181-0AJ-DININCRI-PNP, September 25, 1995. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

81. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

82. Letter to the judge of the 40th Criminal Court, signed by Jorge Vega Fernndez, May 14, 1996.

83. The civilian and military judges also conflicted over the place where Zevallos would serve his sentence. After his conviction by the military court, police authorities refused to return him to Lurigancho, sending him to a military prison instead. According to a memo from the national penitentiary authorities to the judge, "this decision has caused administrative problems in this department in that the prisoner was interned in a public prison, Lurigancho, with a detention order issued by your worthy court, and in his capacity as accused, and he should have been returned to the same prison." Memo to the judge of the 40th Penal Court of Lima from an official of the National Penitentiary Institute (INP), a department of the Ministry of Justice, September 17, 1996.

84. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

85. "Policas de la delegacin de Brea asesinan a comerciante de lpidas," Expreso, March 25, 1996.

86. Manifestacin de Jos Enrique Palomino Garca, document bearing the National Police stamp, dated March 26, 1996.

87. Protocol de autopsia, Ref. Ofc. 384-96-14 FPPL-MP-FN, March 24, 1996.

88. Ampliacin de la Instructiva del Inculpado Alberto Snchez Vsquez, July 18, 1996.

89. Testimony of Jos Fiorentini Vergara, cited in summary of evidence by Judge Cecilia Bolack Baluarte of the 44th Criminal Court of Lima, November 6, 1996.

90. Testimony of Capt. Jorge Manuel Cheng Kong Chu, March 29, 1996.

91. Atestado No. 448 IC-H-DDCV, Delito Cometido por Funcionarios Pblicos- Abuso de Autoridad, April 2, 1996.

92. "Descuartizan a mujer agente del SIN y a otra la torturan y la internan en Hospital Militar," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "El ejrcito investigaba por 'infidencia' a Mariella Barreto la agente descuartizada," La Repblica, April 8, 1997; "Una agente de inteligencia asegura haber sido torturada," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Congreso pide informe a ministros por denuncias de torturas en el SIN," Expreso, April 8, 1997.

93. "Los planes al desnudo," La Repblica, April 7, 1997.

94. "Descuartizan a mujer."

95. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Orlando Barreto Pea, father of Mariella Barreto, April 7, 1997.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

68. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Flix Jorge Romero, Lima, April 9, 1997.

69. Human Rights Watch/Americas interviews with Alfonso Rojas Colca and Jos Teofilo Huamn, Lima, April 4,1997.

70. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Martn Augusto Elguera, Lima, April 9, 1997.

71. "Salud sicolgica de rehenes est deteriorada," Expreso, March 31, 1997.

72. Judge Onsimo Julio Vela Velsquez, Informe No. 003-96-1JEPP, expediente No. 55-95, January 23,1996. Pages not numbered.

73. The forensic doctors asserted that it was impossible to determine whether the victim's lesions were self-inflicted or had been caused by a third party, but they went on, contradictorily, to say that the lesions had not been self-inflicted. Diligencia de necropsia en el cadver de Jhoel Huamn Garca. Ministerio Pblico Fiscala Mixta Pasco, date indistinct.

74. Judge Onsimo Vela Velsquez, Expediente No. 55-95, page un-numbered.

75. Penal Code, Book II, Title 1, Chapter 3, Article 121(3, ii).

76. Letter from Francisco Sobern, general coordinator of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos and Felicita Buenda Or, Chamaya's widow, to Luz Salgado Rubianes, president of the Congressional Human Rights Committee, November 9, 1995.

77. "Policas enfran taxista en cmica," El Popular, September 23, 1995. According to the same source, their superiors were complicit in their escape.

78. A police witnesses who was not identified told reporters that the officers responsible, apparently backed by the station chief, Carlos Snchez Gutirrez, hatched a plan to remove and "disappear" the body: "Lieutenant Zevallos tried to take the corpse away in the trunk of a private car, but because others tried to stop him, he began to shout like a madman, threatening to 'talk' about other abuses committed in the station. Later, he disappeared." "Jefes de cmica en Santa Felicia

implicados en crimen de taxista," El Popular, September 25, 1995.

79. "Asesinos de taxista se entregan a las autoridades y admiten su crimen," La Repblica, September 28, 1995.

80. According to a legal advisor to the criminal investigations department of the national police, the National Directorate for the Investigation of Crimes (Direccin Nacional de Investigacin del Crmen, DININCRI): "On this point, since the events took place in the installations of a police establishment and as a consequence of the carrying out of professional functions, the criminal conduct falls within the terms of Article 173 of the Constitution; for this reason the present advisor is of the opinion that, in application of Article 319 and 326 of the Code of Military Justice, it is of the exclusive competence of the military jurisdiction." Asesora Legal de la DININCRI-PNP, Dictmen no. 181-0AJ-DININCRI-PNP, September 25, 1995. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

81. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

82. Letter to the judge of the 40th Criminal Court, signed by Jorge Vega Fernndez, May 14, 1996.

83. The civilian and military judges also conflicted over the place where Zevallos would serve his sentence. After his conviction by the military court, police authorities refused to return him to Lurigancho, sending him to a military prison instead. According to a memo from the national penitentiary authorities to the judge, "this decision has caused administrative problems in this department in that the prisoner was interned in a public prison, Lurigancho, with a detention order issued by your worthy court, and in his capacity as accused, and he should have been returned to the same prison." Memo to the judge of the 40th Penal Court of Lima from an official of the National Penitentiary Institute (INP), a department of the Ministry of Justice, September 17, 1996.

84. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

85. "Policas de la delegacin de Brea asesinan a comerciante de lpidas," Expreso, March 25, 1996.

86. Manifestacin de Jos Enrique Palomino Garca, document bearing the National Police stamp, dated March 26, 1996.

87. Protocol de autopsia, Ref. Ofc. 384-96-14 FPPL-MP-FN, March 24, 1996.

88. Ampliacin de la Instructiva del Inculpado Alberto Snchez Vsquez, July 18, 1996.

89. Testimony of Jos Fiorentini Vergara, cited in summary of evidence by Judge Cecilia Bolack Baluarte of the 44th Criminal Court of Lima, November 6, 1996.

90. Testimony of Capt. Jorge Manuel Cheng Kong Chu, March 29, 1996.

91. Atestado No. 448 IC-H-DDCV, Delito Cometido por Funcionarios Pblicos- Abuso de Autoridad, April 2, 1996.

92. "Descuartizan a mujer agente del SIN y a otra la torturan y la internan en Hospital Militar," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "El ejrcito investigaba por 'infidencia' a Mariella Barreto la agente descuartizada," La Repblica, April 8, 1997; "Una agente de inteligencia asegura haber sido torturada," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Congreso pide informe a ministros por denuncias de torturas en el SIN," Expreso, April 8, 1997.

93. "Los planes al desnudo," La Repblica, April 7, 1997.

94. "Descuartizan a mujer."

95. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Orlando Barreto Pea, father of Mariella Barreto, April 7, 1997.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru

(New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

69. Human Rights Watch/Americas interviews with Alfonso Rojas Colca and Jos Teofilo Huamn, Lima, April 4,1997.

70. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Martn Augusto Elguera, Lima, April 9, 1997.

71. "Salud sicolgica de rehenes est deteriorada," Expreso, March 31, 1997.

72. Judge Onsimo Julio Vela Velsquez, Informe No. 003-96-1JEPP, expediente No. 55-95, January 23,1996. Pages not numbered.

73. The forensic doctors asserted that it was impossible to determine whether the victim's lesions were self-inflicted or had been caused by a third party, but they went on, contradictorily, to say that the lesions had not been self-inflicted. Diligencia de necropsia en el cadver de Jhoel Huamn Garca. Ministerio Pblico Fiscala Mixta Pasco, date indistinct.

74. Judge Onsimo Vela Velsquez, Expediente No. 55-95, page un-numbered.

75. Penal Code, Book II, Title 1, Chapter 3, Article 121(3, ii).

76. Letter from Francisco Sobern, general coordinator of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos and Felicita Buenda Or, Chamaya's widow, to Luz Salgado Rubianes, president of the Congressional Human Rights Committee, November 9, 1995.

77. "Policas enfran taxista en cmica," El Popular, September 23, 1995. According to the same source, their superiors were complicit in their escape.

78. A police witnesses who was not identified told reporters that the officers responsible, apparently backed by the station chief, Carlos

Snchez Gutirrez, hatched a plan to remove and "disappear" the body: "Lieutenant Zevallos tried to take the corpse away in the trunk of a private car, but because others tried to stop him, he began to shout like a madman, threatening to 'talk' about other abuses committed in the station. Later, he disappeared." "Jefes de cmica en Santa Felicia

implicados en crimen de taxista," El Popular, September 25, 1995.

79. "Asesinos de taxista se entregan a las autoridades y admiten su crimen," La Repblica, September 28, 1995.

80. According to a legal advisor to the criminal investigations department of the national police, the National Directorate for the Investigation of Crimes (Direccin Nacional de Investigacin del Crmen, DININCRI): "On this point, since the events took place in the installations of a police establishment and as a consequence of the carrying out of professional functions, the criminal conduct falls within the terms of Article 173 of the Constitution; for this reason the present advisor is of the opinion that, in application of Article 319 and 326 of the Code of Military Justice, it is of the exclusive competence of the military jurisdiction." Asesora Legal de la DININCRI-PNP, Dictmen no. 181-0AJ-DININCRI-PNP, September 25, 1995. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

81. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

82. Letter to the judge of the 40th Criminal Court, signed by Jorge Vega Fernndez, May 14, 1996.

83. The civilian and military judges also conflicted over the place where Zevallos would serve his sentence. After his conviction by the military court, police authorities refused to return him to Lurigancho, sending him to a military prison instead. According to a memo from the national penitentiary authorities to the judge, "this decision has caused administrative problems in this department in that the prisoner was interned in a public prison, Lurigancho, with a detention order issued by your worthy court, and in his capacity as accused, and he should have been returned to the same prison." Memo to the judge of the 40th Penal Court of Lima from an official of the National Penitentiary Institute (INP), a department of the Ministry of Justice, September 17, 1996.

84. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

85. "Policas de la delegacin de Brea asesinan a comerciante de lpidas," Expreso, March 25, 1996.

86. Manifestacin de Jos Enrique Palomino Garca, document bearing the National Police stamp, dated March 26, 1996.

87. Protocol de autopsia, Ref. Ofc. 384-96-14 FPPL-MP-FN, March 24, 1996.

88. Ampliacin de la Instructiva del Inculpado Alberto Snchez Vsquez, July 18, 1996.

89. Testimony of Jos Fiorentini Vergara, cited in summary of evidence by Judge Cecilia Bolack Baluarte of the 44th Criminal Court of Lima, November 6, 1996.

90. Testimony of Capt. Jorge Manuel Cheng Kong Chu, March 29, 1996.

91. Atestado No. 448 IC-H-DDCV, Delito Cometido por Funcionarios Pblicos- Abuso de Autoridad, April 2, 1996.

92. "Descuartizan a mujer agente del SIN y a otra la torturan y la internan en Hospital Militar," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "El ejrcito investigaba por 'infidencia' a Mariella Barreto la agente descuartizada," La Repblica, April 8, 1997; "Una agente de inteligencia asegura haber sido torturada," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Congreso pide informe a ministros por denuncias de torturas en el SIN," Expreso, April 8, 1997.

93. "Los planes al desnudo," La Repblica, April 7, 1997.

94. "Descuartizan a mujer."

95. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Orlando Barreto Pea, father of Mariella Barreto, April 7, 1997.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

70. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Martn Augusto Elguera, Lima, April 9, 1997.

71. "Salud sicolgica de rehenes est deteriorada," Expreso, March 31, 1997.

72. Judge Onsimo Julio Vela Velsquez, Informe No. 003-96-1JEPP, expediente No. 55-95, January 23,1996. Pages not numbered.

73. The forensic doctors asserted that it was impossible to determine whether the victim's lesions were self-inflicted or had been caused by a third party, but they went on, contradictorily, to say that the lesions had not been self-inflicted. Diligencia de necropsia en el cadver de Jhoel Huamn Garca. Ministerio Pblico Fiscala Mixta Pasco, date indistinct.

74. Judge Onsimo Vela Velsquez, Expediente No. 55-95, page un-numbered.

75. Penal Code, Book II, Title 1, Chapter 3, Article 121(3, ii).

76. Letter from Francisco Sobern, general coordinator of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos and Felicita Buenda Or, Chamaya's widow, to Luz Salgado Rubianes, president of the Congressional Human Rights Committee, November 9, 1995.

77. "Policas enfran taxista en cmica," El Popular, September 23, 1995. According to the same source, their superiors were complicit in their escape.

78. A police witnesses who was not identified told reporters that the officers responsible, apparently backed by the station chief, Carlos Snchez Gutirrez, hatched a plan to remove and "disappear" the body: "Lieutenant Zevallos tried to take the corpse away in the trunk of a private car, but because others tried to stop him, he began to shout like a madman, threatening to 'talk' about other abuses committed in the station. Later, he disappeared." "Jefes de cmica en Santa Felicia

implicados en crimen de taxista," El Popular, September 25, 1995.

79. "Asesinos de taxista se entregan a las autoridades y admiten su crimen," La Repblica, September 28, 1995.

80. According to a legal advisor to the criminal investigations department of the national police, the National Directorate for the Investigation of Crimes (Direccin Nacional de Investigacin del Crmen, DININCRI): "On this point, since the events took place in the installations of a police establishment and as a consequence of the carrying out of professional functions, the criminal conduct falls within the terms of Article 173 of the Constitution; for this reason the present advisor is of the opinion that, in application of Article 319 and 326 of the Code of Military Justice, it is of the exclusive competence of the military jurisdiction." Asesora Legal de la DININCRI-PNP, Dictmen no. 181-0AJ-DININCRI-PNP, September 25, 1995. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

81. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

82. Letter to the judge of the 40th Criminal Court, signed by Jorge Vega Fernndez, May 14, 1996.

83. The civilian and military judges also conflicted over the place where Zevallos would serve his sentence. After his conviction by the military court, police authorities refused to return him to Lurigancho, sending him to a military prison instead. According to a memo from the national penitentiary authorities to the judge, "this decision has caused administrative problems in this department in that the prisoner was interned in a public prison, Lurigancho, with a detention order issued by your worthy court, and in his capacity as accused, and he should have been returned to the same prison." Memo to the judge of the 40th Penal Court of Lima from an official of the National Penitentiary Institute (INP), a department of the Ministry of Justice, September 17, 1996.

84. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

85. "Policas de la delegacin de Brea asesinan a comerciante de lpidas," Expreso, March 25, 1996.

86. Manifestacin de Jos Enrique Palomino Garca, document bearing the National Police stamp, dated March 26, 1996.

87. Protocol de autopsia, Ref. Ofc. 384-96-14 FPPL-MP-FN, March 24, 1996.

88. Ampliacin de la Instructiva del Inculpado Alberto Snchez Vsquez, July 18, 1996.

89. Testimony of Jos Fiorentini Vergara, cited in summary of evidence by Judge Cecilia Bolack Baluarte of the 44th Criminal Court of Lima, November 6, 1996.

90. Testimony of Capt. Jorge Manuel Cheng Kong Chu, March 29, 1996.

91. Atestado No. 448 IC-H-DDCV, Delito Cometido por Funcionarios Pblicos- Abuso de Autoridad, April 2, 1996.

92. "Descuartizan a mujer agente del SIN y a otra la torturan y la internan en Hospital Militar," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "El ejrcito investigaba por 'infidencia' a Mariella Barreto la agente descuartizada," La Repblica, April 8, 1997; "Una agente de inteligencia asegura haber sido torturada," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Congreso pide informe a ministros por denuncias de torturas en el SIN," Expreso, April 8, 1997.

93. "Los planes al desnudo," La Repblica, April 7, 1997.

94. "Descuartizan a mujer."

95. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Orlando Barreto Pea, father of Mariella Barreto, April 7, 1997.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

71. "Salud sicolgica de rehenes est deteriorada," Expreso, March 31, 1997.

72. Judge Onsimo Julio Vela Velsquez, Informe No. 003-96-1JEPP, expediente No. 55-95, January 23,1996. Pages not numbered.

73. The forensic doctors asserted that it was impossible to determine whether the victim's lesions were self-inflicted or had been caused by a third party, but they went on, contradictorily, to say that the lesions had not been self-inflicted. Diligencia de necropsia en el cadver de Jhoel Huamn Garca. Ministerio Pblico Fiscala Mixta Pasco, date indistinct.

74. Judge Onsimo Vela Velsquez, Expediente No. 55-95, page un-numbered.

75. Penal Code, Book II, Title 1, Chapter 3, Article 121(3, ii).

76. Letter from Francisco Sobern, general coordinator of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos and Felicita Buenda Or, Chamaya's widow, to Luz Salgado Rubianes, president of the Congressional Human Rights Committee, November 9, 1995.

77. "Policas enfran taxista en cmica," El Popular, September 23, 1995. According to the same source, their superiors were complicit in their escape.

78. A police witnesses who was not identified told reporters that the officers responsible, apparently backed by the station chief, Carlos Snchez Gutirrez, hatched a plan to remove and "disappear" the body: "Lieutenant Zevallos tried to take the corpse away in the trunk of a private car, but because others tried to stop him, he began to shout like a madman, threatening to 'talk' about other abuses committed in the station. Later, he disappeared." "Jefes de cmica en Santa Felicia

implicados en crimen de taxista," El Popular, September 25, 1995.

79. "Asesinos de taxista se entregan a las autoridades y admiten su crimen," La Repblica, September 28, 1995.

80. According to a legal advisor to the criminal investigations department of the national police, the National Directorate for the Investigation of Crimes (Direccin Nacional de Investigacin del Crmen, DININCRI): "On this point, since the events took place in the installations of a police establishment and as a consequence of the carrying out of professional functions, the criminal conduct falls within the terms of Article 173 of the Constitution; for this reason the present advisor is of the opinion that, in application of Article 319 and 326 of the Code of Military Justice, it is of the exclusive competence of the military jurisdiction." Asesora Legal de la DININCRI-PNP, Dictmen no. 181-0AJ-DININCRI-PNP, September 25, 1995. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

81. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

82. Letter to the judge of the 40th Criminal Court, signed by Jorge Vega Fernndez, May 14, 1996.

83. The civilian and military judges also conflicted over the place where Zevallos would serve his sentence. After his conviction by the military court, police authorities refused to return him to Lurigancho, sending him to a military prison instead. According to a memo from the national penitentiary authorities to the judge, "this decision has caused administrative problems in this department in that the prisoner was interned in a public prison, Lurigancho, with a detention order issued by your worthy court, and in his capacity as accused, and he should have been returned to the same prison." Memo to the judge of the 40th Penal Court of Lima from an official of the National Penitentiary Institute (INP), a department of the Ministry of Justice, September 17, 1996.

84. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

85. "Policas de la delegacin de Brea asesinan a comerciante de lpidas," Expreso, March 25, 1996.

86. Manifestacin de Jos Enrique Palomino Garca, document bearing the National Police stamp, dated March 26, 1996.

87. Protocol de autopsia, Ref. Ofc. 384-96-14 FPPL-MP-FN, March 24, 1996.

88. Ampliacin de la Instructiva del Inculpado Alberto Snchez Vsquez, July 18, 1996.

89. Testimony of Jos Fiorentini Vergara, cited in summary of evidence by Judge Cecilia Bolack Baluarte of the 44th Criminal Court of Lima, November 6, 1996.

90. Testimony of Capt. Jorge Manuel Cheng Kong Chu, March 29, 1996.

91. Atestado No. 448 IC-H-DDCV, Delito Cometido por Funcionarios Pblicos- Abuso de Autoridad, April 2, 1996.

92. "Descuartizan a mujer agente del SIN y a otra la torturan y la internan en Hospital Militar," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "El ejrcito investigaba por 'infidencia' a Mariella Barreto la agente descuartizada," La Repblica, April 8, 1997; "Una agente de inteligencia asegura haber sido torturada," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Congreso pide informe a ministros por denuncias de torturas en el SIN," Expreso, April 8, 1997.

93. "Los planes al desnudo," La Repblica, April 7, 1997.

94. "Descuartizan a mujer."

95. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Orlando Barreto Pea, father of Mariella Barreto, April 7, 1997.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

72. Judge Onsimo Julio Vela Velsquez, Informe No. 003-96-1JEPP, expediente No. 55-95, January 23,1996. Pages not numbered.

73. The forensic doctors asserted that it was impossible to determine whether the victim's lesions were self-inflicted or had been caused by a third party, but they went on, contradictorily, to say that the lesions had not been self-inflicted. Diligencia de necropsia en el cadver de Jhoel Huamn Garca. Ministerio Pblico Fiscala Mixta Pasco, date indistinct.

74. Judge Onsimo Vela Velsquez, Expediente No. 55-95, page un-numbered.

75. Penal Code, Book II, Title 1, Chapter 3, Article 121(3, ii).

76. Letter from Francisco Sobern, general coordinator of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos and Felicita Buenda Or, Chamaya's widow, to Luz Salgado Rubianes, president of the Congressional Human Rights Committee, November 9, 1995.

77. "Policas enfran taxista en cmica," El Popular, September 23, 1995. According to the same source, their superiors were complicit in their escape.

78. A police witnesses who was not identified told reporters that the officers responsible, apparently backed by the station chief, Carlos Snchez Gutirrez, hatched a plan to remove and "disappear" the body: "Lieutenant Zevallos tried to take the corpse away in the trunk of a private car, but because others tried to stop him, he began to shout like a madman, threatening to 'talk' about other abuses committed in the station. Later, he disappeared." "Jefes de cmica en Santa Felicia

implicados en crimen de taxista," El Popular, September 25, 1995.

79. "Asesinos de taxista se entregan a las autoridades y admiten su crimen," La Repblica, September 28, 1995.

80. According to a legal advisor to the criminal investigations department of the national police, the National Directorate for the Investigation of Crimes (Direccin Nacional de Investigacin del Crmen, DININCRI): "On this point, since the events took place in the installations of a police establishment and as a consequence of the carrying out of professional functions, the criminal conduct falls within the terms of Article 173 of the Constitution; for this reason the present advisor is of the opinion that, in application of Article 319 and 326 of the Code of Military Justice, it is of the exclusive competence of the military jurisdiction." Asesora Legal de la DININCRI-PNP, Dictmen no. 181-0AJ-DININCRI-PNP, September 25, 1995. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

81. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

82. Letter to the judge of the 40th Criminal Court, signed by Jorge Vega Fernndez, May 14, 1996.

83. The civilian and military judges also conflicted over the place where Zevallos would serve his sentence. After his conviction by the military court, police authorities refused to return him to Lurigancho, sending him to a military prison instead. According to a memo from the national penitentiary authorities to the judge, "this decision has caused administrative problems in this department in that the prisoner was interned in a public prison, Lurigancho, with a detention order issued by your worthy court, and in his capacity as accused, and he should have been returned to the same prison." Memo to the judge of the 40th Penal Court of Lima from an official of the National Penitentiary Institute (INP), a department of the Ministry of Justice, September 17, 1996.

84. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

85. "Policas de la delegacin de Brea asesinan a comerciante de lpidas," Expreso, March 25, 1996.

86. Manifestacin de Jos Enrique Palomino Garca, document bearing the National Police stamp, dated March 26, 1996.

87. Protocol de autopsia, Ref. Ofc. 384-96-14 FPPL-MP-FN, March 24, 1996.

88. Ampliacin de la Instructiva del Inculpado Alberto Snchez Vsquez, July 18, 1996.

89. Testimony of Jos Fiorentini Vergara, cited in summary of evidence by Judge Cecilia Bolack Baluarte of the 44th Criminal Court of Lima, November 6, 1996.

90. Testimony of Capt. Jorge Manuel Cheng Kong Chu, March 29, 1996.

91. Atestado No. 448 IC-H-DDCV, Delito Cometido por Funcionarios Pblicos- Abuso de Autoridad, April 2, 1996.

92. "Descuartizan a mujer agente del SIN y a otra la torturan y la internan en Hospital Militar," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "El ejrcito investigaba por 'infidencia' a Mariella Barreto la agente descuartizada," La Repblica, April 8, 1997; "Una agente de inteligencia asegura haber sido torturada," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Congreso pide informe a ministros por denuncias de torturas en el SIN," Expreso, April 8, 1997.

93. "Los planes al desnudo," La Repblica, April 7, 1997.

94. "Descuartizan a mujer."

95. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Orlando Barreto Pea, father of Mariella Barreto, April 7, 1997.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

73. The forensic doctors asserted that it was impossible to determine whether the victim's lesions were self-inflicted or had been caused by a third party, but they went on, contradictorily, to say that the lesions had not been self-inflicted. Diligencia de necropsia en el cadver de Jhoel Huamn Garca. Ministerio Pblico Fiscala Mixta Pasco, date indistinct.

74. Judge Onsimo Vela Velsquez, Expediente No. 55-95, page un-numbered.

75. Penal Code, Book II, Title 1, Chapter 3, Article 121(3, ii).

76. Letter from Francisco Sobern, general coordinator of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos and Felicita Buenda Or, Chamaya's widow, to Luz Salgado Rubianes, president of the Congressional Human Rights Committee, November 9, 1995.

77. "Policas enfran taxista en cmica," El Popular, September 23, 1995. According to the same source, their superiors were complicit in their escape.

78. A police witnesses who was not identified told reporters that the officers responsible, apparently backed by the station chief, Carlos Snchez Gutirrez, hatched a plan to remove and "disappear" the body: "Lieutenant Zevallos tried to take the corpse away in the trunk of a private car, but because others tried to stop him, he began to shout like a madman, threatening to 'talk' about other abuses committed in the station. Later, he disappeared." "Jefes de cmica en Santa Felicia

implicados en crimen de taxista," El Popular, September 25, 1995.

79. "Asesinos de taxista se entregan a las autoridades y admiten su crimen," La Repblica, September 28, 1995.

80. According to a legal advisor to the criminal investigations department of the national police, the National Directorate for the Investigation of Crimes (Direccin Nacional de Investigacin del Crmen, DININCRI): "On this point, since the events took place in the installations of a police establishment and as a consequence of the carrying out of professional functions, the criminal conduct falls within the terms of Article 173 of the Constitution; for this reason the present advisor is of the opinion that, in application of Article 319 and 326 of the Code of Military Justice, it is of the exclusive competence of the military jurisdiction." Asesora Legal de la DININCRI-PNP, Dictmen no. 181-0AJ-DININCRI-PNP, September 25, 1995. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

81. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

82. Letter to the judge of the 40th Criminal Court, signed by Jorge Vega Fernndez, May 14, 1996.

83. The civilian and military judges also conflicted over the place where Zevallos would serve his sentence. After his conviction by the military court, police authorities refused to return him to Lurigancho, sending him to a military prison instead. According to a memo from the national penitentiary authorities to the judge, "this decision has caused administrative problems in this department in that the prisoner was interned in a public prison, Lurigancho, with a detention order issued by your worthy court, and in his capacity as accused, and he should have been returned to the same prison." Memo to the judge of the 40th Penal Court of Lima from an official of the National Penitentiary Institute (INP), a department of the Ministry of Justice, September 17, 1996.

84. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

85. "Policas de la delegacin de Brea asesinan a comerciante de lpidas," Expreso, March 25, 1996.

86. Manifestacin de Jos Enrique Palomino Garca, document bearing the National Police stamp, dated March 26, 1996.

87. Protocol de autopsia, Ref. Ofc. 384-96-14 FPPL-MP-FN, March 24, 1996.

88. Ampliacin de la Instructiva del Inculpado Alberto Snchez Vsquez, July 18, 1996.

89. Testimony of Jos Fiorentini Vergara, cited in summary of evidence by Judge Cecilia Bolack Baluarte of the 44th Criminal Court of Lima, November 6, 1996.

90. Testimony of Capt. Jorge Manuel Cheng Kong Chu, March 29, 1996.

91. Atestado No. 448 IC-H-DDCV, Delito Cometido por Funcionarios Pblicos- Abuso de Autoridad, April 2, 1996.

92. "Descuartizan a mujer agente del SIN y a otra la torturan y la internan en Hospital Militar," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "El ejrcito investigaba por 'infidencia' a Mariella Barreto la agente descuartizada," La Repblica, April 8, 1997; "Una agente de inteligencia asegura haber sido torturada," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Congreso pide informe a ministros por denuncias de torturas en el SIN," Expreso, April 8, 1997.

93. "Los planes al desnudo," La Repblica, April 7, 1997.

94. "Descuartizan a mujer."

95. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Orlando Barreto Pea, father of Mariella Barreto, April 7, 1997.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos

Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

74. Judge Onsimo Vela Velsquez, Expediente No. 55-95, page un-numbered.

75. Penal Code, Book II, Title 1, Chapter 3, Article 121(3, ii).

76. Letter from Francisco Sobern, general coordinator of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos and Felicita Buenda Or, Chamaya's widow, to Luz Salgado Rubianes, president of the Congressional Human Rights Committee, November 9, 1995.

77. "Policas enfran taxista en cmica," El Popular, September 23, 1995. According to the same source, their superiors were complicit in their escape.

78. A police witnesses who was not identified told reporters that the officers responsible, apparently backed by the station chief, Carlos Snchez Gutirrez, hatched a plan to remove and "disappear" the body: "Lieutenant Zevallos tried to take the corpse away in the trunk of a private car, but because others tried to stop him, he began to shout like a madman, threatening to 'talk' about other abuses committed in the station. Later, he disappeared." "Jefes de cmica en Santa Felicia

implicados en crimen de taxista," El Popular, September 25, 1995.

79. "Asesinos de taxista se entregan a las autoridades y admiten su crimen," La Repblica, September 28, 1995.

80. According to a legal advisor to the criminal investigations department of the national police, the National Directorate for the Investigation of Crimes (Direccin Nacional de Investigacin del Crmen, DININCRI): "On this point, since the events took place in the installations of a police establishment and as a consequence of the carrying out of professional functions, the criminal conduct falls within the terms of Article 173 of the Constitution; for this reason the present advisor is of the opinion that, in application of Article 319 and 326 of the Code of Military Justice, it is of the exclusive competence of the military jurisdiction." Asesora Legal de la DININCRI-PNP, Dictmen no. 181-0AJ-DININCRI-PNP, September 25, 1995. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

81. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

82. Letter to the judge of the 40th Criminal Court, signed by Jorge Vega Fernndez, May 14, 1996.

83. The civilian and military judges also conflicted over the place where Zevallos would serve his sentence. After his conviction by the military court, police authorities refused to return him to Lurigancho, sending him to a military prison instead. According to a memo from the national penitentiary authorities to the judge, "this decision has caused administrative problems in this department in that the prisoner was interned in a public prison, Lurigancho, with a detention order issued by your worthy court, and in his capacity as accused, and he should have been returned to the same prison." Memo to the judge of the 40th Penal Court of Lima from an official of the National Penitentiary Institute (INP), a department of the Ministry of Justice, September 17, 1996.

84. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

85. "Policas de la delegacin de Brea asesinan a comerciante de lpidas," Expreso, March 25, 1996.

86. Manifestacin de Jos Enrique Palomino Garca, document bearing the National Police stamp, dated March 26, 1996.

87. Protocol de autopsia, Ref. Ofc. 384-96-14 FPPL-MP-FN, March 24, 1996.

88. Ampliacin de la Instructiva del Inculpado Alberto Snchez Vsquez, July 18, 1996.

89. Testimony of Jos Fiorentini Vergara, cited in summary of evidence by Judge Cecilia Bolack Baluarte of the 44th Criminal Court of Lima, November 6, 1996.

90. Testimony of Capt. Jorge Manuel Cheng Kong Chu, March 29, 1996.

91. Atestado No. 448 IC-H-DDCV, Delito Cometido por Funcionarios Pblicos- Abuso de Autoridad, April 2, 1996.

92. "Descuartizan a mujer agente del SIN y a otra la torturan y la internan en Hospital Militar," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "El ejrcito investigaba por 'infidencia' a Mariella Barreto la agente descuartizada," La Repblica, April 8, 1997; "Una agente de inteligencia asegura haber sido torturada," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Congreso pide informe a ministros por denuncias de torturas en el SIN," Expreso, April 8, 1997.

93. "Los planes al desnudo," La Repblica, April 7, 1997.

94. "Descuartizan a mujer."

95. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Orlando Barreto Pea, father of Mariella Barreto, April 7, 1997.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos

Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

75. Penal Code, Book II, Title 1, Chapter 3, Article 121(3, ii).

76. Letter from Francisco Sobern, general coordinator of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos and Felicita Buenda Or, Chamaya's widow, to Luz Salgado Rubianes, president of the Congressional Human Rights Committee, November 9, 1995.

77. "Policas enfran taxista en cmica," El Popular, September 23, 1995. According to the same source, their superiors were complicit in their escape.

78. A police witnesses who was not identified told reporters that the officers responsible, apparently backed by the station chief, Carlos Snchez Gutirrez, hatched a plan to remove and "disappear" the body: "Lieutenant Zevallos tried to take the corpse away in the trunk of a private car, but because others tried to stop him, he began to shout like a madman, threatening to 'talk' about other abuses committed in the station. Later, he disappeared." "Jefes de cmica en Santa Felicia

implicados en crimen de taxista," El Popular, September 25, 1995.

79. "Asesinos de taxista se entregan a las autoridades y admiten su crimen," La Repblica, September 28, 1995.

80. According to a legal advisor to the criminal investigations department of the national police, the National Directorate for the Investigation of Crimes (Direccin Nacional de Investigacin del Crmen, DININCRI): "On this point, since the events took place in the installations of a police establishment and as a consequence of the carrying out of professional functions, the criminal conduct falls within the terms of Article 173 of the Constitution; for this reason the present advisor is of the opinion that, in application of Article 319 and 326 of the Code of Military Justice, it is of the exclusive competence of the military jurisdiction." Asesora Legal de la DININCRI-PNP, Dictmen no. 181-0AJ-DININCRI-PNP, September 25, 1995. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

81. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

82. Letter to the judge of the 40th Criminal Court, signed by Jorge Vega Fernndez, May 14, 1996.

83. The civilian and military judges also conflicted over the place where Zevallos would serve his sentence. After his conviction by the military court, police authorities refused to return him to Lurigancho, sending him to a military prison instead. According to a memo from the national penitentiary authorities to the judge, "this decision has caused administrative problems in this department in that the prisoner was interned in a public prison, Lurigancho, with a detention order issued by your worthy court, and in his capacity as accused, and he should have been returned to the same prison." Memo to the judge of the 40th Penal Court of Lima from an official of the National Penitentiary Institute (INP), a department of the Ministry of Justice, September 17, 1996.

84. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

85. "Policas de la delegacin de Brea asesinan a comerciante de lpidas," Expreso, March 25, 1996.

86. Manifestacin de Jos Enrique Palomino Garca, document bearing the National Police stamp, dated March 26, 1996.

87. Protocol de autopsia, Ref. Ofc. 384-96-14 FPPL-MP-FN, March 24, 1996.

88. Ampliacin de la Instructiva del Inculpado Alberto Snchez Vsquez, July 18, 1996.

89. Testimony of Jos Fiorentini Vergara, cited in summary of evidence by Judge Cecilia Bolack Baluarte of the 44th Criminal Court of Lima, November 6, 1996.

90. Testimony of Capt. Jorge Manuel Cheng Kong Chu, March 29, 1996.

91. Atestado No. 448 IC-H-DDCV, Delito Cometido por Funcionarios Pblicos- Abuso de Autoridad, April 2, 1996.

92. "Descuartizan a mujer agente del SIN y a otra la torturan y la internan en Hospital Militar," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "El ejrcito investigaba por 'infidencia' a Mariella Barreto la agente descuartizada," La Repblica, April 8, 1997; "Una agente de inteligencia asegura haber sido torturada," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Congreso pide informe a ministros por denuncias de torturas en el SIN," Expreso, April 8, 1997.

93. "Los planes al desnudo," La Repblica, April 7, 1997.

94. "Descuartizan a mujer."

95. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Orlando Barreto Pea, father of Mariella Barreto, April 7, 1997.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

76. Letter from Francisco Sobern, general coordinator of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos and Felicita Buenda Or, Chamaya's widow, to Luz Salgado Rubianes, president of the Congressional Human Rights Committee, November 9, 1995.

77. "Policas enfran taxista en cmica," El Popular, September 23, 1995. According to the same source, their superiors were complicit in their escape.

78. A police witnesses who was not identified told reporters that the officers responsible, apparently backed by the station chief, Carlos Snchez Gutirrez, hatched a plan to remove and "disappear" the body: "Lieutenant Zevallos tried to take the corpse away in the trunk of a private car, but because others tried to stop him, he began to shout like a madman, threatening to 'talk' about other abuses committed in the station. Later, he disappeared." "Jefes de cmica en Santa Felicia

implicados en crimen de taxista," El Popular, September 25, 1995.

79. "Asesinos de taxista se entregan a las autoridades y admiten su crimen," La Repblica, September 28, 1995.

80. According to a legal advisor to the criminal investigations department of the national police, the National Directorate for the Investigation of Crimes (Direccin Nacional de Investigacin del Crmen, DININCRI): "On this point, since the events took place in the installations of a police establishment and as a consequence of the carrying out of professional functions, the criminal conduct falls within the terms of Article 173 of the Constitution; for this reason the present advisor is of the opinion that, in application of Article 319 and 326 of the Code of Military Justice, it is of the exclusive competence of the military jurisdiction." Asesora Legal de la DININCRI-PNP, Dictmen no. 181-0AJ-DININCRI-PNP, September 25, 1995. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

81. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

82. Letter to the judge of the 40th Criminal Court, signed by Jorge Vega Fernndez, May 14, 1996.

83. The civilian and military judges also conflicted over the place where Zevallos would serve his sentence. After his conviction by the military court, police authorities refused to return him to Lurigancho, sending him to a military prison instead. According to a memo from the national penitentiary authorities to the judge, "this decision has caused administrative problems in this department in that the prisoner was interned in a public prison, Lurigancho, with a detention order issued by your worthy court, and in his capacity as accused, and he should have been returned to the same prison." Memo to the judge of the 40th Penal Court of Lima from an official of the National Penitentiary Institute (INP), a department of the Ministry of Justice, September 17, 1996.

84. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

85. "Policas de la delegacin de Brea asesinan a comerciante de lpidas," Expreso, March 25, 1996.

86. Manifestacin de Jos Enrique Palomino Garca, document bearing the National Police stamp, dated March 26, 1996.

87. Protocol de autopsia, Ref. Ofc. 384-96-14 FPPL-MP-FN, March 24, 1996.

88. Ampliacin de la Instructiva del Inculpado Alberto Snchez Vsquez, July 18, 1996.

89. Testimony of Jos Fiorentini Vergara, cited in summary of evidence by Judge Cecilia Bolack Baluarte of the 44th Criminal Court of Lima, November 6, 1996.

90. Testimony of Capt. Jorge Manuel Cheng Kong Chu, March 29, 1996.

91. Atestado No. 448 IC-H-DDCV, Delito Cometido por Funcionarios Pblicos- Abuso de Autoridad, April 2, 1996.

92. "Descuartizan a mujer agente del SIN y a otra la torturan y la internan en Hospital Militar," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "El ejrcito investigaba por 'infidencia' a Mariella Barreto la agente descuartizada," La Repblica, April 8, 1997; "Una agente de inteligencia asegura haber sido torturada," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Congreso pide informe a ministros por denuncias de torturas en el SIN," Expreso, April 8, 1997.

93. "Los planes al desnudo," La Repblica, April 7, 1997.

94. "Descuartizan a mujer."

95. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Orlando Barreto Pea, father of Mariella Barreto, April 7, 1997.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

77. "Policas enfran taxista en cmica," El Popular, September 23, 1995. According to the same source, their superiors were complicit in their escape.

78. A police witnesses who was not identified told reporters that the officers responsible, apparently backed by the station chief, Carlos Snchez Gutirrez, hatched a plan to remove and "disappear" the body: "Lieutenant Zevallos tried to take the corpse away in the trunk of a private car, but because others tried to stop him, he began to shout like a madman, threatening to 'talk' about other abuses committed in the station. Later, he disappeared." "Jefes de cmica en Santa Felicia

implicados en crimen de taxista," El Popular, September 25, 1995.

79. "Asesinos de taxista se entregan a las autoridades y admiten su crimen," La Repblica, September 28, 1995.

80. According to a legal advisor to the criminal investigations department of the national police, the National Directorate for the Investigation of Crimes (Direccin Nacional de Investigacin del Crmen, DININCRI): "On this point, since the events took place in the installations of a police establishment and as a consequence of the carrying out of professional functions, the criminal conduct falls within the terms of Article 173 of the Constitution; for this reason the present advisor is of the opinion that, in application of Article 319 and 326 of the Code of Military Justice, it is of the exclusive competence of the military jurisdiction." Asesora Legal de la DININCRI-PNP, Dictmen no. 181-0AJ-DININCRI-PNP, September 25, 1995. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

81. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

82. Letter to the judge of the 40th Criminal Court, signed by Jorge Vega Fernndez, May 14, 1996.

83. The civilian and military judges also conflicted over the place where Zevallos would serve his sentence. After his conviction by the military court, police authorities refused to return him to Lurigancho, sending him to a military prison instead. According to a memo from the national penitentiary authorities to the judge, "this decision has caused administrative problems in this department in that the prisoner was interned in a public prison, Lurigancho, with a detention order issued by your worthy court, and in his capacity as accused, and he should have been returned to the same prison." Memo to the judge of the 40th Penal Court of Lima from an official of the National Penitentiary Institute (INP), a department of the Ministry of Justice, September 17, 1996.

84. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

85. "Policas de la delegacin de Brea asesinan a comerciante de lpidas," Expreso, March 25, 1996.

86. Manifestacin de Jos Enrique Palomino Garca, document bearing the National Police stamp, dated March 26, 1996.

87. Protocol de autopsia, Ref. Ofc. 384-96-14 FPPL-MP-FN, March 24, 1996.

88. Ampliacin de la Instructiva del Inculpado Alberto Snchez Vsquez, July 18, 1996.

89. Testimony of Jos Fiorentini Vergara, cited in summary of evidence by Judge Cecilia Bolack Baluarte of the 44th Criminal Court of Lima, November 6, 1996.

90. Testimony of Capt. Jorge Manuel Cheng Kong Chu, March 29, 1996.

91. Atestado No. 448 IC-H-DDCV, Delito Cometido por Funcionarios Pblicos- Abuso de Autoridad, April 2, 1996.

92. "Descuartizan a mujer agente del SIN y a otra la torturan y la internan en Hospital Militar," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "El ejrcito investigaba por 'infidencia' a Mariella Barreto la agente descuartizada," La Repblica, April 8, 1997; "Una agente de inteligencia asegura haber sido torturada," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Congreso pide informe a ministros por denuncias de torturas en el SIN," Expreso, April 8, 1997.

93. "Los planes al desnudo," La Repblica, April 7, 1997.

94. "Descuartizan a mujer."

95. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Orlando Barreto Pea, father of Mariella Barreto, April 7, 1997.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

78. A police witnesses who was not identified told reporters that the officers responsible, apparently backed by the station chief, Carlos Snchez Gutirrez, hatched a plan to remove and "disappear" the body: "Lieutenant Zevallos tried to take the corpse away in the trunk of a private car, but because others tried to stop him, he began to shout like a madman, threatening to 'talk' about other abuses committed in the station. Later, he disappeared." "Jefes de cmica en Santa Felicia

implicados en crimen de taxista," El Popular, September 25, 1995.

79. "Asesinos de taxista se entregan a las autoridades y admiten su crimen," La Repblica, September 28, 1995.

80. According to a legal advisor to the criminal investigations department of the national police, the National Directorate for the Investigation of Crimes (Direccin Nacional de Investigacin del Crmen, DININCRI): "On this point, since the events took place in the installations of a police establishment and as a consequence of the carrying out of professional functions, the criminal conduct falls within the terms of Article 173 of the Constitution; for this reason the present advisor is of the opinion that, in application of Article 319 and 326 of the Code of Military Justice, it is of the exclusive competence of the military jurisdiction." Asesora Legal de la DININCRI-PNP, Dictmen no. 181-0AJ-DININCRI-PNP, September 25, 1995. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

81. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

82. Letter to the judge of the 40th Criminal Court, signed by Jorge Vega Fernndez, May 14, 1996.

83. The civilian and military judges also conflicted over the place where Zevallos would serve his sentence. After his conviction by the military court, police authorities refused to return him to Lurigancho, sending him to a military prison instead. According to a memo from the national penitentiary authorities to the judge, "this decision has caused administrative problems in this department in that the prisoner was interned in a public prison, Lurigancho, with a detention order issued by your worthy court, and in his capacity as accused, and he should have been returned to the same prison." Memo to the judge of the 40th Penal Court of Lima from an official of the National Penitentiary Institute (INP), a department of the Ministry of Justice, September 17, 1996.

84. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

85. "Policas de la delegacin de Brea asesinan a comerciante de lpidas," Expreso, March 25, 1996.

86. Manifestacin de Jos Enrique Palomino Garca, document bearing the National Police stamp, dated March 26, 1996.

87. Protocol de autopsia, Ref. Ofc. 384-96-14 FPPL-MP-FN, March 24, 1996.

88. Ampliacin de la Instructiva del Inculpado Alberto Snchez Vsquez, July 18, 1996.

89. Testimony of Jos Fiorentini Vergara, cited in summary of evidence by Judge Cecilia Bolack Baluarte of the 44th Criminal Court of Lima, November 6, 1996.

90. Testimony of Capt. Jorge Manuel Cheng Kong Chu, March 29, 1996.

91. Atestado No. 448 IC-H-DDCV, Delito Cometido por Funcionarios Pblicos- Abuso de Autoridad, April 2, 1996.

92. "Descuartizan a mujer agente del SIN y a otra la torturan y la internan en Hospital Militar," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "El ejrcito investigaba por 'infidencia' a Mariella Barreto la agente descuartizada," La Repblica, April 8, 1997; "Una agente de inteligencia asegura haber sido torturada," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Congreso pide informe a ministros por denuncias de torturas en el SIN," Expreso, April 8, 1997.

93. "Los planes al desnudo," La Repblica, April 7, 1997.

94. "Descuartizan a mujer."

95. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Orlando Barreto Pea, father of Mariella Barreto, April 7, 1997.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

implicados en crimen de taxista," El Popular, September 25, 1995.

79. "Asesinos de taxista se entregan a las autoridades y admiten su crimen," La Repblica, September 28, 1995.

80. According to a legal advisor to the criminal investigations department of the national police, the National Directorate for the Investigation of Crimes (Direccin Nacional de Investigacin del Crmen, DININCRI): "On this point, since the events took place in the installations of a police establishment and as a consequence of the carrying out of professional functions, the criminal conduct falls within the terms of Article 173 of the Constitution; for this reason the present advisor is of the opinion that, in application of Article 319 and 326 of the Code of Military Justice, it is of the exclusive competence of the military jurisdiction." Asesora Legal de la DININCRI-PNP, Dictmen no. 181-0AJ-DININCRI-PNP, September 25, 1995. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

81. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

82. Letter to the judge of the 40th Criminal Court, signed by Jorge Vega Fernndez, May 14, 1996.

83. The civilian and military judges also conflicted over the place where Zevallos would serve his sentence. After his conviction by the military court, police authorities refused to return him to Lurigancho, sending him to a military prison instead. According to a memo from the national penitentiary authorities to the judge, "this decision has caused administrative problems in this department in that the prisoner was interned in a public prison, Lurigancho, with a detention order issued by your worthy court, and in his capacity as accused, and he should have been returned to the same prison." Memo to the judge of the 40th Penal Court of Lima from an official of the National Penitentiary Institute (INP), a department of the Ministry of Justice, September 17, 1996.

84. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

85. "Policas de la delegacin de Brea asesinan a comerciante de lpidas," Expreso, March 25, 1996.

86. Manifestacin de Jos Enrique Palomino Garca, document bearing the National Police stamp, dated March 26, 1996.

87. Protocol de autopsia, Ref. Ofc. 384-96-14 FPPL-MP-FN, March 24, 1996.

88. Ampliacin de la Instructiva del Inculpado Alberto Snchez Vsquez, July 18, 1996.

89. Testimony of Jos Fiorentini Vergara, cited in summary of evidence by Judge Cecilia Bolack Baluarte of the 44th Criminal Court of Lima, November 6, 1996.

90. Testimony of Capt. Jorge Manuel Cheng Kong Chu, March 29, 1996.

91. Atestado No. 448 IC-H-DDCV, Delito Cometido por Funcionarios Pblicos- Abuso de Autoridad, April 2, 1996.

92. "Descuartizan a mujer agente del SIN y a otra la torturan y la internan en Hospital Militar," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "El ejrcito investigaba por 'infidencia' a Mariella Barreto la agente descuartizada," La Repblica, April 8, 1997; "Una agente de inteligencia asegura haber sido torturada," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Congreso pide informe a ministros por denuncias de torturas en el SIN," Expreso, April 8, 1997.

93. "Los planes al desnudo," La Repblica, April 7, 1997.

94. "Descuartizan a mujer."

95. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Orlando Barreto Pea, father of Mariella Barreto, April 7, 1997.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

79. "Asesinos de taxista se entregan a las autoridades y admiten su crimen," La Repblica, September 28, 1995.

80. According to a legal advisor to the criminal investigations department of the national police, the National Directorate for the Investigation of Crimes (Direccin Nacional de Investigacin del Crmen, DININCRI): "On this point, since the events took place in the installations of a police establishment and as a consequence of the carrying out of professional functions, the criminal conduct falls within the terms of Article 173 of the Constitution; for this reason the present advisor is of the opinion that, in application of Article 319 and 326 of the Code of Military Justice, it is of the exclusive competence of the military jurisdiction." Asesora Legal de la DININCRI-PNP, Dictmen no. 181-0AJ-DININCRI-PNP, September 25, 1995. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

81. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

82. Letter to the judge of the 40th Criminal Court, signed by Jorge Vega Fernndez, May 14, 1996.

83. The civilian and military judges also conflicted over the place where Zevallos would serve his sentence. After his conviction by the military court, police authorities refused to return him to Lurigancho, sending him to a military prison instead. According to a memo from the national penitentiary authorities to the judge, "this decision has caused administrative problems in this department in that the prisoner was interned in a public prison, Lurigancho, with a detention order issued by your worthy court, and in his capacity as accused, and he should have been returned to the same prison." Memo to the judge of the 40th Penal Court of Lima from an official of the National Penitentiary Institute (INP), a department of the Ministry of Justice, September 17, 1996.

84. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

85. "Policas de la delegacin de Brea asesinan a comerciante de lpidas," Expreso, March 25, 1996.

86. Manifestacin de Jos Enrique Palomino Garca, document bearing the National Police stamp, dated March 26, 1996.

87. Protocol de autopsia, Ref. Ofc. 384-96-14 FPPL-MP-FN, March 24, 1996.

88. Ampliacin de la Instructiva del Inculpado Alberto Snchez Vsquez, July 18, 1996.

89. Testimony of Jos Fiorentini Vergara, cited in summary of evidence by Judge Cecilia Bolack Baluarte of the 44th Criminal Court of Lima, November 6, 1996.

90. Testimony of Capt. Jorge Manuel Cheng Kong Chu, March 29, 1996.

91. Atestado No. 448 IC-H-DDCV, Delito Cometido por Funcionarios Pblicos- Abuso de Autoridad, April 2, 1996.

92. "Descuartizan a mujer agente del SIN y a otra la torturan y la internan en Hospital Militar," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "El ejrcito investigaba por 'infidencia' a Mariella Barreto la agente descuartizada," La Repblica, April 8, 1997; "Una agente de inteligencia asegura haber sido torturada," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Congreso pide informe a ministros por denuncias de torturas en el SIN," Expreso, April 8, 1997.

93. "Los planes al desnudo," La Repblica, April 7, 1997.

94. "Descuartizan a mujer."

95. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Orlando Barreto Pea, father of Mariella Barreto, April 7, 1997.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

80. According to a legal advisor to the criminal investigations department of the national police, the National Directorate for the Investigation of Crimes (Direccin Nacional de Investigacin del Crmen, DININCRI): "On this point, since the events took place in the installations of a police establishment and as a consequence of the carrying out of professional functions, the criminal conduct falls within the terms of Article 173 of the Constitution; for this reason the present advisor is of the opinion that, in application of Article 319 and 326 of the Code of Military Justice, it is of the exclusive competence of the military jurisdiction." Asesora Legal de la DININCRI-PNP, Dictmen no. 181-0AJ-DININCRI-PNP, September 25, 1995. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

81. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

82. Letter to the judge of the 40th Criminal Court, signed by Jorge Vega Fernndez, May 14, 1996.

83. The civilian and military judges also conflicted over the place where Zevallos would serve his sentence. After his conviction by the military court, police authorities refused to return him to Lurigancho, sending him to a military prison instead. According to a memo from the national penitentiary authorities to the judge, "this decision has caused administrative problems in this department in that the prisoner was interned in a public prison, Lurigancho, with a detention order issued by your worthy court, and in his capacity as accused, and he should have been returned to the same prison." Memo to the judge of the 40th Penal Court of Lima from an official of the National Penitentiary Institute (INP), a department of the Ministry of Justice, September 17, 1996.

84. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

85. "Policas de la delegacin de Brea asesinan a comerciante de lpidas," Expreso, March 25, 1996.

86. Manifestacin de Jos Enrique Palomino Garca, document bearing the National Police stamp, dated March 26, 1996.

87. Protocol de autopsia, Ref. Ofc. 384-96-14 FPPL-MP-FN, March 24, 1996.

88. Ampliacin de la Instructiva del Inculpado Alberto Snchez Vsquez, July 18, 1996.

89. Testimony of Jos Fiorentini Vergara, cited in summary of evidence by Judge Cecilia Bolack Baluarte of the 44th Criminal Court of Lima, November 6, 1996.

90. Testimony of Capt. Jorge Manuel Cheng Kong Chu, March 29, 1996.

91. Atestado No. 448 IC-H-DDCV, Delito Cometido por Funcionarios Pblicos- Abuso de Autoridad, April 2, 1996.

92. "Descuartizan a mujer agente del SIN y a otra la torturan y la internan en Hospital Militar," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "El ejrcito investigaba por 'infidencia' a Mariella Barreto la agente descuartizada," La Repblica, April 8, 1997; "Una agente de inteligencia asegura haber sido torturada," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Congreso pide informe a ministros por denuncias de torturas en el SIN," Expreso, April 8, 1997.

93. "Los planes al desnudo," La Repblica, April 7, 1997.

94. "Descuartizan a mujer."

95. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Orlando Barreto Pea, father of Mariella Barreto, April 7, 1997.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

81. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

82. Letter to the judge of the 40th Criminal Court, signed by Jorge Vega Fernndez, May 14, 1996.

83. The civilian and military judges also conflicted over the place where Zevallos would serve his sentence. After his conviction by the military court, police authorities refused to return him to Lurigancho, sending him to a military prison instead. According to a memo from the national penitentiary authorities to the judge, "this decision has caused administrative problems in this department in that the prisoner was interned in a public prison, Lurigancho, with a detention order issued by your worthy court, and in his capacity as accused, and he should have been returned to the same prison." Memo to the judge of the 40th Penal Court of Lima from an official of the National Penitentiary Institute (INP), a department of the Ministry of Justice, September 17, 1996.

84. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

85. "Policas de la delegacin de Brea asesinan a comerciante de lpidas," Expreso, March 25, 1996.

86. Manifestacin de Jos Enrique Palomino Garca, document bearing the National Police stamp, dated March 26, 1996.

87. Protocol de autopsia, Ref. Ofc. 384-96-14 FPPL-MP-FN, March 24, 1996.

88. Ampliacin de la Instructiva del Inculpado Alberto Snchez Vsquez, July 18, 1996.

89. Testimony of Jos Fiorentini Vergara, cited in summary of evidence by Judge Cecilia Bolack Baluarte of the 44th Criminal Court of Lima, November 6, 1996.

90. Testimony of Capt. Jorge Manuel Cheng Kong Chu, March 29, 1996.

91. Atestado No. 448 IC-H-DDCV, Delito Cometido por Funcionarios Pblicos- Abuso de Autoridad, April 2, 1996.

92. "Descuartizan a mujer agente del SIN y a otra la torturan y la internan en Hospital Militar," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "El ejrcito investigaba por 'infidencia' a Mariella Barreto la agente descuartizada," La Repblica, April 8, 1997; "Una agente de inteligencia asegura haber sido torturada," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Congreso pide informe a ministros por denuncias de torturas en el SIN," Expreso, April 8, 1997.

93. "Los planes al desnudo," La Repblica, April 7, 1997.

94. "Descuartizan a mujer."

95. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Orlando Barreto Pea, father of Mariella Barreto, April 7, 1997.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

82. Letter to the judge of the 40th Criminal Court, signed by Jorge Vega Fernndez, May 14, 1996.

83. The civilian and military judges also conflicted over the place where Zevallos would serve his sentence. After his conviction by the military court, police authorities refused to return him to Lurigancho, sending him to a military prison instead. According to a memo from the national penitentiary authorities to the judge, "this decision has caused administrative problems in this department in that the prisoner was interned in a public prison, Lurigancho, with a detention order issued by your worthy court, and in his capacity as accused, and he should have been returned to the same prison." Memo to the judge of the 40th Penal Court of Lima from an official of the National Penitentiary Institute (INP), a department of the Ministry of Justice, September 17, 1996.

84. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

85. "Policas de la delegacin de Brea asesinan a comerciante de lpidas," Expreso, March 25, 1996.

86. Manifestacin de Jos Enrique Palomino Garca, document bearing the National Police stamp, dated March 26, 1996.

87. Protocol de autopsia, Ref. Ofc. 384-96-14 FPPL-MP-FN, March 24, 1996.

88. Ampliacin de la Instructiva del Inculpado Alberto Snchez Vsquez, July 18, 1996.

89. Testimony of Jos Fiorentini Vergara, cited in summary of evidence by Judge Cecilia Bolack Baluarte of the 44th Criminal Court of Lima, November 6, 1996.

90. Testimony of Capt. Jorge Manuel Cheng Kong Chu, March 29, 1996.

91. Atestado No. 448 IC-H-DDCV, Delito Cometido por Funcionarios Pblicos- Abuso de Autoridad, April 2, 1996.

92. "Descuartizan a mujer agente del SIN y a otra la torturan y la internan en Hospital Militar," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "El ejrcito investigaba por 'infidencia' a Mariella Barreto la agente descuartizada," La Repblica, April 8, 1997; "Una agente de inteligencia asegura haber sido torturada," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Congreso pide informe a ministros por denuncias de torturas en el SIN," Expreso, April 8, 1997.

93. "Los planes al desnudo," La Repblica, April 7, 1997.

94. "Descuartizan a mujer."

95. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Orlando Barreto Pea, father of Mariella Barreto, April 7, 1997.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

83. The civilian and military judges also conflicted over the place where Zevallos would serve his sentence. After his conviction by the military court, police authorities refused to return him to Lurigancho, sending him to a military prison instead. According to a memo from the national penitentiary authorities to the judge, "this decision has caused administrative problems in this department in that the prisoner was interned in a public prison, Lurigancho, with a detention order issued by your worthy court, and in his capacity as accused, and he should have been returned to the same prison." Memo to the judge of the 40th Penal Court of Lima from an official of the National Penitentiary Institute (INP), a department of the Ministry of Justice, September 17, 1996.

84. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

85. "Policas de la delegacin de Brea asesinan a comerciante de lpidas," Expreso, March 25, 1996.

86. Manifestacin de Jos Enrique Palomino Garca, document bearing the National Police stamp, dated March 26, 1996.

87. Protocol de autopsia, Ref. Ofc. 384-96-14 FPPL-MP-FN, March 24, 1996.

88. Ampliacin de la Instructiva del Inculpado Alberto Snchez Vsquez, July 18, 1996.

89. Testimony of Jos Fiorentini Vergara, cited in summary of evidence by Judge Cecilia Bolack Baluarte of the 44th Criminal Court of Lima, November 6, 1996.

90. Testimony of Capt. Jorge Manuel Cheng Kong Chu, March 29, 1996.

91. Atestado No. 448 IC-H-DDCV, Delito Cometido por Funcionarios Pblicos- Abuso de Autoridad, April 2, 1996.

92. "Descuartizan a mujer agente del SIN y a otra la torturan y la internan en Hospital Militar," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "El ejrcito investigaba por 'infidencia' a Mariella Barreto la agente descuartizada," La Repblica, April 8, 1997; "Una agente de inteligencia asegura haber sido torturada," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Congreso pide informe a ministros por denuncias de torturas en el SIN," Expreso, April 8, 1997.

93. "Los planes al desnudo," La Repblica, April 7, 1997.

94. "Descuartizan a mujer."

95. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Orlando Barreto Pea, father of Mariella Barreto, April 7, 1997.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

84. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with lawyer Jorge Vega Fernndez, Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, Lima, April 8, 1997.

85. "Policas de la delegacin de Brea asesinan a comerciante de lpidas," Expreso, March 25, 1996.

86. Manifestacin de Jos Enrique Palomino Garca, document bearing the National Police stamp, dated March 26, 1996.

87. Protocol de autopsia, Ref. Ofc. 384-96-14 FPPL-MP-FN, March 24, 1996.

88. Ampliacin de la Instructiva del Inculpado Alberto Snchez Vsquez, July 18, 1996.

89. Testimony of Jos Fiorentini Vergara, cited in summary of evidence by Judge Cecilia Bolack Baluarte of the 44th Criminal Court of Lima, November 6, 1996.

90. Testimony of Capt. Jorge Manuel Cheng Kong Chu, March 29, 1996.

91. Atestado No. 448 IC-H-DDCV, Delito Cometido por Funcionarios Pblicos- Abuso de Autoridad, April 2, 1996.

92. "Descuartizan a mujer agente del SIN y a otra la torturan y la internan en Hospital Militar," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "El ejrcito investigaba por 'infidencia' a Mariella Barreto la agente descuartizada," La Repblica, April 8, 1997; "Una agente de inteligencia asegura haber sido torturada," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Congreso pide informe a ministros por denuncias de torturas en el SIN," Expreso, April 8, 1997.

93. "Los planes al desnudo," La Repblica, April 7, 1997.

94. "Descuartizan a mujer."

95. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Orlando Barreto Pea, father of Mariella Barreto, April 7, 1997.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

85. "Policas de la delegacin de Brea asesinan a comerciante de lpidas," Expreso, March 25, 1996.

86. Manifestacin de Jos Enrique Palomino Garca, document bearing the National Police stamp, dated March 26, 1996.

87. Protocol de autopsia, Ref. Ofc. 384-96-14 FPPL-MP-FN, March 24, 1996.

88. Ampliacin de la Instructiva del Inculpado Alberto Snchez Vsquez, July 18, 1996.

89. Testimony of Jos Fiorentini Vergara, cited in summary of evidence by Judge Cecilia Bolack Baluarte of the 44th Criminal Court of Lima, November 6, 1996.

90. Testimony of Capt. Jorge Manuel Cheng Kong Chu, March 29, 1996.

91. Atestado No. 448 IC-H-DDCV, Delito Cometido por Funcionarios Pblicos- Abuso de Autoridad, April 2, 1996.

92. "Descuartizan a mujer agente del SIN y a otra la torturan y la internan en Hospital Militar," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "El ejrcito investigaba por 'infidencia' a Mariella Barreto la agente descuartizada," La Repblica, April 8, 1997; "Una agente de inteligencia asegura haber sido torturada," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Congreso pide informe a ministros por denuncias de torturas en el SIN," Expreso, April 8, 1997.

93. "Los planes al desnudo," La Repblica, April 7, 1997.

94. "Descuartizan a mujer."

95. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Orlando Barreto Pea, father of Mariella Barreto, April 7, 1997.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

86. Manifestacin de Jos Enrique Palomino Garca, document bearing the National Police stamp, dated March 26, 1996.

87. Protocol de autopsia, Ref. Ofc. 384-96-14 FPPL-MP-FN, March 24, 1996.

88. Ampliacin de la Instructiva del Inculpado Alberto Snchez Vsquez, July 18, 1996.

89. Testimony of Jos Fiorentini Vergara, cited in summary of evidence by Judge Cecilia Bolack Baluarte of the 44th Criminal Court of Lima, November 6, 1996.

90. Testimony of Capt. Jorge Manuel Cheng Kong Chu, March 29, 1996.

91. Atestado No. 448 IC-H-DDCV, Delito Cometido por Funcionarios Pblicos- Abuso de Autoridad, April 2, 1996.

92. "Descuartizan a mujer agente del SIN y a otra la torturan y la internan en Hospital Militar," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "El ejrcito investigaba por 'infidencia' a Mariella Barreto la agente descuartizada," La Repblica, April 8, 1997; "Una agente de inteligencia asegura haber sido torturada," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Congreso pide informe a ministros por denuncias de torturas en el SIN," Expreso, April 8, 1997.

93. "Los planes al desnudo," La Repblica, April 7, 1997.

94. "Descuartizan a mujer."

95. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Orlando Barreto Pea, father of Mariella Barreto, April 7, 1997.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

87. Protocol de autopsia, Ref. Ofc. 384-96-14 FPPL-MP-FN, March 24, 1996.

88. Ampliacin de la Instructiva del Inculpado Alberto Snchez Vsquez, July 18, 1996.

89. Testimony of Jos Fiorentini Vergara, cited in summary of evidence by Judge Cecilia Bolack Baluarte of the 44th Criminal Court of Lima, November 6, 1996.

90. Testimony of Capt. Jorge Manuel Cheng Kong Chu, March 29, 1996.

91. Atestado No. 448 IC-H-DDCV, Delito Cometido por Funcionarios Pblicos- Abuso de Autoridad, April 2, 1996.

92. "Descuartizan a mujer agente del SIN y a otra la torturan y la internan en Hospital Militar," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "El ejrcito investigaba por 'infidencia' a Mariella Barreto la agente descuartizada," La Repblica, April 8, 1997; "Una agente de inteligencia asegura haber sido torturada," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Congreso pide informe a ministros por denuncias de torturas en el SIN," Expreso, April 8, 1997.

93. "Los planes al desnudo," La Repblica, April 7, 1997.

94. "Descuartizan a mujer."

95. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Orlando Barreto Pea, father of Mariella Barreto, April 7, 1997.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly

accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

88. Ampliacin de la Instructiva del Inculpado Alberto Snchez Vsquez, July 18, 1996.

89. Testimony of Jos Fiorentini Vergara, cited in summary of evidence by Judge Cecilia Bolack Baluarte of the 44th Criminal Court of Lima, November 6, 1996.

90. Testimony of Capt. Jorge Manuel Cheng Kong Chu, March 29, 1996.

91. Atestado No. 448 IC-H-DDCV, Delito Cometido por Funcionarios Pblicos- Abuso de Autoridad, April 2, 1996.

92. "Descuartizan a mujer agente del SIN y a otra la torturan y la internan en Hospital Militar," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "El ejrcito investigaba por 'infidencia' a Mariella Barreto la agente descuartizada," La Repblica, April 8, 1997; "Una agente de inteligencia asegura haber sido torturada," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Congreso pide informe a ministros por denuncias de torturas en el SIN," Expreso, April 8, 1997.

93. "Los planes al desnudo," La Repblica, April 7, 1997.

94. "Descuartizan a mujer."

95. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Orlando Barreto Pea, father of Mariella Barreto, April 7, 1997.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

89. Testimony of Jos Fiorentini Vergara, cited in summary of evidence by Judge Cecilia Bolack Baluarte of the 44th Criminal Court of Lima, November 6, 1996.

90. Testimony of Capt. Jorge Manuel Cheng Kong Chu, March 29, 1996.

91. Atestado No. 448 IC-H-DDCV, Delito Cometido por Funcionarios Pblicos- Abuso de Autoridad, April 2, 1996.

92. "Descuartizan a mujer agente del SIN y a otra la torturan y la internan en Hospital Militar," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "El ejrcito investigaba por 'infidencia' a Mariella Barreto la agente descuartizada," La Repblica, April 8, 1997; "Una agente de inteligencia asegura haber sido torturada," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Congreso pide informe a ministros por denuncias de torturas en el SIN," Expreso, April 8, 1997.

93. "Los planes al desnudo," La Repblica, April 7, 1997.

94. "Descuartizan a mujer."

95. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Orlando Barreto Pea, father of Mariella Barreto, April 7, 1997.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

90. Testimony of Capt. Jorge Manuel Cheng Kong Chu, March 29, 1996.

91. Atestado No. 448 IC-H-DDCV, Delito Cometido por Funcionarios Pblicos- Abuso de Autoridad, April 2, 1996.

92. "Descuartizan a mujer agente del SIN y a otra la torturan y la internan en Hospital Militar," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "El ejrcito investigaba por 'infidencia' a Mariella Barreto la agente descuartizada," La Repblica, April 8, 1997; "Una agente de inteligencia asegura haber sido torturada," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Congreso pide informe a ministros por denuncias de torturas en el SIN," Expreso, April 8, 1997.

93. "Los planes al desnudo," La Repblica, April 7, 1997.

94. "Descuartizan a mujer."

95. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Orlando Barreto Pea, father of Mariella Barreto, April 7, 1997.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

91. Atestado No. 448 IC-H-DDCV, Delito Cometido por Funcionarios Pblicos- Abuso de Autoridad, April 2, 1996.

92. "Descuartizan a mujer agente del SIN y a otra la torturan y la internan en Hospital Militar," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "El ejrcito investigaba por 'infidencia' a Mariella Barreto la agente descuartizada," La Repblica, April 8, 1997; "Una agente de inteligencia asegura haber sido torturada," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Congreso pide informe a ministros por denuncias de torturas en el SIN," Expreso, April 8, 1997.

93. "Los planes al desnudo," La Repblica, April 7, 1997.

94. "Descuartizan a mujer."

95. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Orlando Barreto Pea, father of Mariella Barreto, April 7, 1997.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

92. "Descuartizan a mujer agente del SIN y a otra la torturan y la internan en Hospital Militar," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "El ejrcito investigaba por 'infidencia' a Mariella Barreto la agente descuartizada," La Repblica, April 8, 1997; "Una agente de inteligencia asegura haber sido torturada," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Congreso pide informe a ministros por denuncias de torturas en el SIN," Expreso, April 8, 1997.

93. "Los planes al desnudo," La Repblica, April 7, 1997.

94. "Descuartizan a mujer."

95. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Orlando Barreto Pea, father of Mariella Barreto, April 7, 1997.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

93. "Los planes al desnudo," La Repblica, April 7, 1997.

94. "Descuartizan a mujer."

95. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Orlando Barreto Pea, father of Mariella Barreto, April 7, 1997.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

94. "Descuartizan a mujer."

95. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Orlando Barreto Pea, father of Mariella Barreto, April 7, 1997.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

95. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Orlando Barreto Pea, father of Mariella Barreto, April 7, 1997.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

96. "El ejrcito investigaba por "infidencia" a Mariela Barreto."

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

97. Ibid.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

98. Ibid.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

99. "Enjuician a cuatro de SIE por caso de torturas," El Sol, April 9, 1997; "Cuatro militares enjuiciados por torturas," Expreso, April 9, 1997.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru

(New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

100. De Bari was quoted as saying, "[The case] has occurred in a circumstantial fashion [and] remains an isolated event that we categorically condemn." "Ejrcito remueve y detiene a cuatro oficiales," El Sol, April 10, 1997. (Translation by Human Rights Watch/Americas.)

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

101. "Fiscal de la Nacin ordena investigar," Expreso,April 9, 1997; "Casos deben verse en fuero civil; Fiscal de la Nacin habla claro," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru

(New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

102. DESCO, "Trabas al Fiscal?," Resmen Semanal, April 9-15, 1997.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told

Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

103. On May 8, this lawyer was also fired by the military justice authorities for giving an unauthorized interview to the press. "Agente SIE se desmaye en juicio," Expreso, May 9, 1997.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

104. "Coronel EP por encargo del general Hermoza me propuso retirar denuncia de tortura," La Repblica, May 12, 1997.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general

Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

105. "Detienen y golpean a hermano de Leonor La Rosa," La Repblica, June 29, 1997.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

106. This was reported in the summing-up of the military prosecutor, Gen. Ral Talledo Valdivieso. "Agente Lenor La Rosa sufre desmayo durante audiencia y tribunal militar la suspende para hoy,"La Repblica, May 9, 1997.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

107. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," June 6, 1997.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

108. DESCO, "La frustracin cronometrada," Resumen Semanal, August 6-12, 1997.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

109. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos

Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

110. "El SIN estara investigando a directivos de Frecuencia Latina," El Comercio, April 7, 1997; "Denuncian presiones contra Canal 2 por informes periodsticos del SIN," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Por difundir reportaje sobre torturas presionan a Canal 2," La Repblica, April 10, 1997.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

111. The government interfered with the police to silence unwelcome criticism. In August 1997, police captain Julio Salas Cceres told Human Rights Watch/Americas that he had been ordered by his superiors to open an investigation--at the SIN's request, they told him--into alleged customs duty evasion by Channel 2. He said that his superiors had visited Vladimiro Montesinos, the SIN's de facto head, and received his personal congratulations for their work. However, when news of the investigation caused a public outcry, the government backtracked and promptly denied its existence. Alone, Salas refused to go along with this pretense; for refusing to deny his role in the investigation, he was hauled up before his superiors, threatened, physically assaulted, and summarily dismissed from the force. Salas and his lawyer were subjected to death threats, and his wife was attacked in the street by a man who told her she was going to "die like a squashed rat." Salas left the country in fear for his safety.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

112. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 24, 1997.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly

accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

113. DESCO, "Canal 2: Winter se cuadra," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

114. Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, "Noticias," May 29, 1997.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

115. Article 2(21) of the Constitution stipulates that everyone has a right "to their nationality. No one may be stripped of it." Article 20(3) of the American Convention on Human Rights holds, "No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality or of the right to change it."

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

116. The judges were transferred after being accused by the army of unlawfully granting habeas corpus petitions in favor of general Rodolfo Robles, after his detention by SIE agents in November 1996.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

117. Contrapunto's director, Luis Ibrico, told reporters: "We hit the nail on the head, we touched the spot, and the mask dropped. Something that before had been debatable has become obvious. That was the merit of Contapunto and the reason for its destruction." DESCO, "Ibrico: dimos en el clavo," Resumen Semanal, September 17-23, 1997.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

118. DESCO, "Fujimori agresivo," Resumen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

119. DESCO, "Detencin de Ricardo Palma; Hildebrandt tambien denunciado," Resumen Semanal, May 21-27, 1997.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru

(New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

120. This account is extracted from a letter from Gustavo Saberbein to Francisco Sobern, director of the Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, a nongovernmental human rights group, March 24,1997.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

121. Testimony of Patricia Valdez, sent to Human Rights Watch/Americas, March 25, 1997.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del

congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

122. Lima's deserted beaches are a well-known site where the police torture victims, sometimes half-drowning them in the ocean.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

123. DESCO, "Diez Canseco: Un Acto del SIN,"Resmen Semanal, March 19-25, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro del congresista Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 9, 1997.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

124. "Fujimori afirma que delincuentes comunes atentaron contra Diez Canseco," La Repblica, April 7, 1997; "Hermanos Huaman no incendieron carro."

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

125. Nota de prensa: Oficina Parlamentaria del Congresista Diez Canseco, Lima, 27 de mayo, 1997.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

126. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Blanca Rosales, Lima, April 7, 1997.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

127. Amnesty International, Urgent Action, UA 201/97, AI Index: AMR 46/27/97, July 8, 1997.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

128. "Un nuevo atentado contra la prensa independiente," La Repblica, July 2, 1997. Received by internet.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

129. DESCO, "Golpean a periodistas," Resmen Semanal, July 2-8, 1997.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

130. Robles' role in exposing the Colina group is described in his book. Rodolfo Robles, "Crimen e Impunidad: El "Grupo Colina" y el Poder (Lima: Asociacin Pro-Derechos Humanos, 1996).

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

131. Human Rights Watch/Americas interview with Rodolfo Robles Espinoza, Lima, April 10, 1997.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

132. Ibid.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

133. The standards set forth in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949 explicitly address conflicts that are not of an international character. Human Rights Watch/Americas applies these standards where guerrilla forces do not exercise formal, consistent control over population or territory, as is the case in Peru. Common Article 3 prohibits the mistreatment of individuals taking no active part in hostilities, including combatants who have laid down their arms or have been placed hors de combat for any reason. The following are strictly prohibited: violence to life and person, in particular murder, mutilation, torture; humiliating or degrading treatment; the passing of sentences and carrying out of executions without previous judgment pronounced by a regularly constituted court affording guarantees of due process. Common Article 3 states explicitly that its application does not affect the legal status of the parties to a conflict, nor does it confer any special status on the armed opposition.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

134. Human Rights Watch/Americas has consistently reported on violations of the laws of war by the armed opposition as well as government forces since our first report on Peru in 1984. See Americas Watch, Abdicating Democratic Authority: Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1984); A Certain Passivity: Failing to Curb Human Rights Abuses in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1987); Americas Watch, A New Opportunity for Democratic Authority: Human Rights In Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1985); Americas Watch, In Desperate Straits; Human Rights in Peru after a Decade of Democracy and Insurgency (New York: Human Rights Watch, 1990); Americas Watch, Tolerating Abuses: Violations of Human Rights in Peru (New York: Human Rights Watch, October 1988); Americas Watch, Peru Under Fire, Human Rights Since the Return to Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992);Americas Watch, Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup (New York: Human Right Watch, April 1993).

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

135. Above the Two Hills: Counter-Insurgency War and its Allies, document attributed to the Shining Path's founder, Abimael Guzmn, written in 1991, cited in Amnesty International, "Peru: Human Rights in a Time of Impunity," May 1996, AMR 46/01/96.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

136. From January through October 1989, the Shining Path assassinated forty-six mayors, and a further 263 resigned after receiving death threats. See Americas Watch, Peru under Fire: Human Rights Since the Return of Democracy (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1992), p. 65.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord" with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

137. For several years, Shining Path has been split after its imprisoned founder and leader Abimael Guzmn called for a "peace accord"

with the government. A faction known as Red Path, led by Oscar Ramrez Durand, aka "Feliciano," has openly rejected these overtures and was believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

believed responsible for a number of assassinations of advocates of the peace strategy in 1996.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

138. Americas Watch, Peru under Fire, p. 66.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

139. Ibid, p. 69.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

140. The taking of hostages is specifically prohibited in Common Article 3 of the four Geneva Conventions of 1949. The MRTA has also violated Common Article 3 by resorting to assassinations, selective executions, and indiscriminate attacks.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

141. Comando Conjunto de Las Fuerzas Armadas del Per, "La Verdadera Historia del MRTA," Comando Conjunto's internet website, http://ekeko.rcp.net.pe/CCFFAA, March 18, 1997.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

142. Ibid.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

143. Human Rights in Peru One Year after Fujimori's Coup, p.17.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

144. United States Department of State, Country Reports on Human Rights Practices for 1996 (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1997), pp. 541-542.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

145. Ibid., p. 542.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

146. The commission was known as the Goldman Commission, after its chair, Robert Goldman.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

147. "Embajador EEUU: 'Sancin a Culpables,'" Expreso, April 10, 1997.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

148. DESCO, "Las opiniones del embajador," Resmen Semanal, May 28-June 3, 1997.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.

149. In October 1996, the Fujimori government used the visit to Lima of Gen. Barry McCaffrey, director of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy, to launder the image of Montesinos, who has repeatedly been involved in scandals, including allegedly accepting pay-offs from a renowned drug-trafficker. U.S. officials took insufficient steps to publicly distance themselves from Montesinos during McCaffrey's visit, even while the press characterized his meetings with Montesinos, who is rarely seen in public, as a gesture of support. See Human Rights Watch, World Report 1997, p. 120. Since the date of McCaffrey's visit, evidence of the illegal activities of the Colina Group, said to have been directed by Montesinos, has continued to mount.