Solitary Watch's James Ridgeway was interviewed yesterday on WBUR radio's Here and Now program on the release of Jamie and Gladys Scott. You can listen to the interview here: <http://www.hereandnow.org/2010/12/30/mississippi-sister-robbery>.

Our original story on the Scott sisters, one of the first to appear, can be found here: <https://solitarywatch.org/about/for-jamie-scott-an-11-robbery-in-mississippi-may-carry-a-death-sentence/>. Our thoughts on the reasons why Haley Barbour might consider pardoning the sisters appears in this follow-up story: <https://solitarywatch.org/2010/09/22/a-chance-at-freedom-for-the-scott-sisters/>.

The release is controversial because of the provision that Gladys donate a kidney to her sister Jamie as a condition of release. None of this, however, has dampened the joy of their mother, Evelyn Rasco, whose posts can be found on this Facebook page: http://www.facebook.com/home.php?sk=group_174775012538129&id=188210824527881&bcode=i24xm.

Accurate information and authentic storytelling can serve as powerful antidotes to ignorance and injustice. We have helped generate public awareness, mainstream media attention, and informed policymaking on what was once an invisible domestic human rights crisis.

Only with your support can we continue this groundbreaking work, shining light into the darkest corners of the U.S. criminal punishment system.

Solitary Watch encourages comments and welcomes a range of ideas, opinions, debates, and respectful disagreement. We do not allow name-calling, bullying, cursing, or personal attacks of any kind. Any embedded links should be to information relevant to the conversation. Comments that violate these guidelines will be removed, and repeat offenders will be blocked. Thank you for your cooperation.

I hope that there is an inquiry into each state as to those transplant teams who might be denying offenders/ex-offenders and the poor from having transplants because of the cost.
