At CVT, training is about finding ways to strengthen and support the people and organizations that work with torture survivors. We offer training projects around the world so that individuals and organizations can learn new and improved ways to provide healing services to survivors and work for a world without torture.

We work to advance the science of torture survivor rehabilitation by promoting integrated, sustainable care for survivors and their families, across the United States. We maintain HealTorture.org as a unique website for state-of-the-science research, tools, resources and trainings on evidence based and promising practices in the field.

Healing in Northern Uganda is an initiative by CVT to provide mental health services to survivors of the war and to develop the ability of local organizations to provide healing services now and in the future.

New Tactics in Human Rights helps human rights defenders work more effectively so they can achieve their goals and better address human rights violations around the world.

CVT works with torture rehabilitation centers throughout the world to expand their ability to provide high quality mental health services to survivors and to build sound financially stable organizations.
