A federal appeals court has rejected arguments attempting to stop the execution next month of a condemned Ohio inmate who says hes too ill for lethal injection.

The 2-1 decision Wednesday by the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals comes in the case of Alva Campbell, whos sentenced to death for a fatal carjacking in Columbus.

The 69-year-old Campbell argues he should be allowed to raise new objections to the states lethal-injection process based on recent changes to how its carried out.
