We hear a beautiful sound
It is the breaking of chains
We see a path full of hope
We have found the way
Let them go home
Let them go home
Let them go home
Let them go today

Dear friends,

The detention facility at Guantanamo Bay has now been open longer during Obamas presidency than the Bush administration. A month ago, on January 11, we gathered and brought our visions for the detainees homecoming to the White House. See video here. We sang our hearts (and voices) out asking for the immediate release of the men detained in Cuba. Over and over we sang our plea, Let them go home so they can return to their families, to their friends, to their homes. We celebrate the release of 12 men since leaving Washington D.C. These men are free and one step closer to going home. We are excited to say that one of these men is Fahd Ghazy, who was detained in Guantanamo as a juvenile. Throughout 2015, we focused on Fahds story, holding a banner with his portrait and reading his words in front of the White House and throughout D.C. The freedom of these 12 men is a beautiful sound and we hope they are doing well.

President Obama has the power to continue to push for the release of the 91 men that remain in Guantanamo. Before he leaves office, he should use everything at his disposal to send these men home. Any plan to further detain them in the U.S. is unacceptable. The torture and indefinite detention they have and continue to suffer must end now. They have waited too long for their freedom.

During our trip to Cuba in November, we started formulating some demands concerning the release of the men left at the prison and communicated them to the U.S. Ambassador to Cuba, Jeffrey DeLaurentis. We in the WAT community insist that shutting down Guantanamo must mean shutting down indefinite detention. We submit the following demands as critical to the effort to close Guantanamo once and for all Please share this with friends as widely as you can:

Another important piece of the work to close the prison at Guantanamo Bay Prison is the fight to end Islamophobia. On January 29, 2016, our own Maha Hilal and Uruj Sheikh were part of an online panel discussion with Aliya Hussain from CCR and Noor Mir from Amnesty International to discuss their activism as muslims and how the continued detention of muslim men at Guantanamo bay is important in the fight against Islamophobia. The Panel was hosted by the National Coalition to protect Civil Freedoms. Here is the link to video.
