

Amistad Law Project

Criminal Justice Issues and Prisoners' Rights

<https://amistadlaw.org/news/new-episode-move-it-forward-reopening-hope-board-pardons>

Public Facing Advocacy Writing

As much as mass incarceration and criminal justice reform have become common terms in American vernacular, one would think we know pretty-much all there is to know about the criminal legal system. In Episode 5, we dig into an important part of the system Commutation and the Board of Pardons. Hear from Naomi Blount-Wilson, a woman who spent 37 years in Pennsylvanias prison system on a sentence to life without parole. Now shes free and a voice of hope for many. We also hear from Lily Rorick, a leader in the campaign to change the commutation process, about what ordinary people have been doing to Move It Forward.

Listen to Move It Forward Episode 5 on Spotify, Stitcher, Apple Podcasts or Google Podcasts or through the player below!

