

Just Detention International

Criminal Justice Issues and Prisoners' Rights

<https://justdetention.org/>

Main Web Page

Incarcerated people deserve a chance to heal. In our new video, hear from three women who participated in our healing and leadership programs while they were in prison.

Just Detention International is a health and human rights organization that seeks to end sexual abuse in all forms of detention.

Trish is a transgender woman who has been sexually abused repeatedly during her 30 years of being incarcerated in mens prisons in Oklahoma.

Today Senators Brian Schatz (D-HI) and John Cornyn (R-TX) introduced the Sexual Abuse Services in Detention Act (SASIDA), a transformative piece of legislation to bring emotional support services to incarcerated survivors of sexual abuse.

Incarcerated people deserve a chance to heal. In our new video, you can hear from three women who participated in our healing and leadership programs while they were in prison.

In its first convening since 2014, the governments Review Panel on Prison Rape will scrutinize juvenile detention facilities that are failing and succeeding to ensure the safety of the kids in their custody.

In these pages, you'll read about our recent successes in the fight to end sexual abuse in detention and the ways that you can continue to strengthen our movement.

JDI applauds the recent revisions to the federal prison systems guidelines on housing transgender people.