

Solitary Watch

Criminal Justice Issues and Prisoners' Rights

<https://solitarywatch.org/2015/04/12/seven-days-in-solitary-4122015/>

Campaign and Advocacy

close

Search

close

close

by Aviva Stahl | April 12, 2015

The following roundup features noteworthy news, reports and opinions on solitary confinement from the past week that have not been covered in other Solitary Watch posts.

A student at the University of Wisconsin-Madison wrote a piece for the Huffington Post calling for the end of youth solitary in prisons across the country. A bill to end the practice of putting children in solitary confinement is being considered in the California legislature.

A new report highlights the conditions of confinement endured by men locked up in a high-security unit at the Oregon State Penitentiary. The Oregonian reports, most are in their cells for 23 hours a day and few regularly shower or have a chance for recreation even though both are required under state Department of Corrections policies.

The Washington Post published an editorial calling for the federal government to overhaul its use of solitary confinement. The federal government should be leading the effort to end the abuse of isolating prisoners from meaningful social interaction and other basic needs. Instead, the federal systems practices are clearly contributing to the morally inexcusable overuse of prisoner isolation.

The New York Times published an in-depth article about Michael Megginson, a 25-year-old man who deteriorated psychologically after being incarcerated on Rikers Island, becoming one of the most violent inmates on the island. He spent 127 days in solitary confinement in 2013.

A 23-year-old trans man, Ky Peterson, was placed in protective custody a form of isolated confinement the day before an article about him was set to be published. Peterson is serving a 20-year sentence for killing his alleged rapist.

An advisor council of ACLU of Nebraska has called on the legislature to enact a series of pending prison reform bills, including legislation designed to ensure the appropriate use of segregation. Meaningful policy reform, like the initial effort underway in the Nebraska Legislature is the most efficient, most certain and least expensive route to cure constitutional violations in the prison system and mitigate state liability.

Aviva Stahl is a Brooklyn-based reporter who writes about science/health at the intersection of mass incarceration, national security, and trans rights. Shes written for the New York Times, Wired, BuzzFeed News, Solitary Watch, and other outlets. Find her @stahlidarity and at stahlidarity.com.

Accurate information and authentic storytelling can serve as powerful antidotes to ignorance and injustice. We have helped generate public awareness, mainstream media attention, and informed policymaking on what was once an invisible domestic human rights crisis.

Only with your support can we continue this groundbreaking work, shining light into the darkest corners of the U.S. criminal punishment system.

by Mirilla Zhu

October 26, 2022

by Caitlin Konya

October 19, 2022

by Mirilla Zhu

October 12, 2022

Solitary Watch encourages comments and welcomes a range of ideas, opinions, debates, and respectful disagreement. We do not allow name-calling, bullying, cursing, or personal attacks of any kind. Any embedded links should be to information relevant to the conversation. Comments that violate these guidelines will be removed, and repeat offenders will be blocked. Thank you for your cooperation.

P.O. Box 11374
Washington, DC 20008

info@solitarywatch.org

Solitary Watch

Copyright 2022, Solitary Watch

Read about rights and permissions.

Solitary Watch News