

Reframe Health and Justice

Sex Workers' rights and Human Trafficking

<https://www.reframehealthandjustice.com/>

Mission Statement

Reframe Health and Justice supports organizations and movements in deepening their practices of care, compassion, and collaboration.

Gravida lorem gravida tellus volutpat ultrices. Sed ornare neque ullamcorper ut a, netus non egestas amet.

Building Capacity for LGBTQ Service Providers: In-Depth Sex Work Harm Reduction Training in Massachusetts

Networking for Racial Equity: Piloting a National Support System for Black, Indigenous, Asian, Latine, and other People of Color

Shifting Landscapes for People who Trade Sex: Advising Institutional Advocates on Community Needs in Washington

Weaving the threads of social movements into a cohesive and comprehensive approach to change. To learn more about our client services, click here to go to our offerings page.

We love working with organizations with heart to build knowledge, support the workforce, and increase community care.

The best organizations are ones that continue to evolve and respond to the changing landscape of the world.

RHJ recognizes that change also means structural and social shifts.

We are available to speak at events, on panels, or to classrooms for a reasonable exchange of energy.

Browse our resources dedicated to empowering communities with tools for movements. Click here to access all resources.

Each year the Department of State issues a request for information on how the US is responding to the issue of human trafficking.

Each year the Department of State issues a request for information on how the US is responding to the issue of human trafficking.

Since 1999 eight countries around the world have changed their legal regimes regarding sex work to focus on the criminalization of clients, known as the "End Demand" model.

Read Reframe Health and Justice's insights. Click here to go to the blog page.

With a post-Roe v Wade world looming, what is the role of harm reduction in supporting access to abortion care?

This blog explores meaningful inclusion of people with lived experience within social justice movements and non-profit organizations.

January is Human Trafficking Awareness Month, meaning theres often a flurry of legislation that is introduced across the country on the topic.

What does it mean to survive? What does survival look like? These questions are at the core of many issues which sit at the nexus of economics, public safety, and public health.

Please reach out - we work with lots of people with lots of budgets. To learn more about pricing, visit our contact page.

Reframe Health and Justice supports organizations and movements in deepening their practices of care, compassion, and collaboration.