Between April and June 2018, Human Rights First researchers conducted three monitoring missions to McAllen, Brownsville, Laredo, and El Paso, Texas to gather information about the implementation and impact of these policies. Researchers visited five federal courts, seven ports of entry, and nine immigration detention facilities. During these missions, Human Rights First discovered the following.

During Streamline court observations court sessions in which large groups of migrants are prosecuted together Human Rights First witnessed numerous cases of family separation, including:
