

Solitary Watch

Criminal Justice Issues and Prisoners' Rights

<https://solitarywatch.org/2017/09/19/photo-requests-from-solitary-comes-to-new-york/>

Campaign and Advocacy

close

Search

close

close

What People Locked Up for 23 Hours a Day Yearn to See

by Victoria Law | September 19, 2017

The following is excerpted from an article appearing last week on Gothamist, about the Photo Requests from Solitary exhibit currently on display at Photoville in Brooklyn. Solitary Watch has been collaborating on the Photo Requests from Solitary project for the past five years. Scroll down for information on exhibit location and hours.

WOLVES HOWL
Graydon Bell for Bob

No one knows exactly how many people are held in solitary confinement throughout New York State. There's the SHU, or Special Housing Unit, a special unit dedicated to locking people away from other. Then there's keeplock, where people are confined to the cells in their housing units. There's also protective custody, where people fearing or at risk for violence, are confined. In each of these, people are held in their cells for at least 23 hours each day. Often, their only human contact is with the guard that brings them their food or handcuffs them before bringing them to the shower three times each week. Some have spent years, and sometimes decades, in isolation.

While Rikers Island records the numbers of those who are isolated, no data is compiled from jails throughout the state. As of September 1, 2017, state prisons held 2,886 people in SHUs. Approximately 1,000 people are held in keeplock, where people are confined to the cells in their housing units.

That's how New York City photographer Noelle Theard became involved. After returning from Timbuktu and Mali, she saw the request for a sunrise over the Sahara. She knew she had an image that fit perfectly and dug through her negatives to send it in.

Though Theard is no stranger to prison reform issues, she was particularly inspired by the project's participatory and practical nature. The best part was that the photos could be of use to someone, she told Gothamist. Sometimes we get caught up in the overarching narrative [of an issue] that we forget that people are living these realities.

SUNSET OVER WATER
Jesse Perez for Soli

Over a 100-mile ocean, the sun is setting, the horizon is low, and the water is calm. The sun is setting over the ocean, and the water is calm. The sun is setting over the ocean, and the water is calm.

Some of the works provided to prisoners through Photo Requests from Solitary are currently on display at Photoville in DUMBO. On Wednesday night, Johnny Perez and other volunteers from the New York Campaign for Alternatives to Isolated Confinement greeted visitors examining the pictures.

For Perez, the issue of solitary confinement is personal. During his 13 years in prison, he spent an accumulated three years in solitary confinement, often in cells less than half the size of the 20 x 8 foot container. In one prison, the six-foot-tall Perez could touch the cell walls on either side whenever he stretched his arms. That's how big some of the cells are, he said.

Perez was released before Photo Requests from Solitary reached New York's prisons. But he knows the value of an image. Being in prison, he explained, means never crossing the street for 13 years. Not seeing trees or grass. Solitary is a space so deprived of sensory stimulation. It's easy to get psychologically boxed in.

Photos prevented Perez from detaching from the outside world. Pictures bring you back to reality. They give you hope. They allow you to continue, he said.

Read the full article at Gothamist.

Photoville, a pop-up exhibition space using shipping containers as galleries, is located at Brooklyn Bridge Plaza (Water and New Dock Streets) in DUMBO, Brooklyn. The Photo Requests from Solitary exhibit can be found in Container 2. Photoville is free and open to the public. Hours during the second and final week are as follows: Thursday 9/21, Friday 9/22, Saturday 9/23, 12 noon 10 pm and Sunday 9/24, 12 noon 8 pm.

Banner Photo: ARCBLOG/ARCoverage

Victoria Law is a freelance journalist and author focused on incarceration. Her books include Resistance Behind Bars, Prison By Any Other Name, and "Prisons Make Us Safer" and 20 Other Myths About Mass Incarceration. She tweets @LVikiml.

Accurate information and authentic storytelling can serve as powerful antidotes to ignorance and injustice. We have helped generate public awareness, mainstream media attention, and informed policymaking on what was once an invisible domestic human rights crisis.

Only with your support can we continue this groundbreaking work, shining light into the darkest corners of the U.S. criminal punishment system.

by Valerie Kiebala

June 13, 2019

by Jean Casella

March 27, 2019

by Jean Casella

April 30, 2018

Solitary Watch encourages comments and welcomes a range of ideas, opinions, debates, and respectful disagreement. We do not allow name-calling, bullying, cursing, or personal attacks of any kind. Any embedded links should be to information relevant to the conversation. Comments that violate these guidelines will be removed, and repeat offenders will be blocked. Thank you for your cooperation.

P.O. Box 11374
Washington, DC 20008

info@solitarywatch.org

Solitary Watch

Copyright 2022, Solitary Watch

Read about rights and permissions.

Solitary Watch News