Public Facing Advocacy Writing

The Vera Institute of Justice's Neil A. Weiner Research Speaker Series featured Saul Kassin, Distinguished Professor of Psychology at John Jay College of Criminal Justice. Professor Kassin's research focuses on the remarkable phenomenon of false confessions in criminal investigations which are far more common than one might expect. In this podcast, Professor Kassin discusses the etiology, characteristics, and consequences of innocent people accepting responsibility for criminal acts they did not commit.

On September 26, thousands of people held in Alabama state prisons went on strike. The Alabama Department of Corrections (ADOC) has been under federal investigation since 2016, and conditions inside the state prisons are among the deadliest in the nation. Strikers say the horrific conditions include overcrowding, neglect, abuse, and a drug epidemic ...

As we approach the first midterm election since the January 6 Capitol Hill riot, the integrity of our elections is under more scrutiny than ever. Fearmongering around the myth of voter fraud is a deliberate tactic at the local, state, and federal level, and mass incarceration is central to that strategy. This summer, Florida Governor Ron DeSantis ...

To truly tackle the devastating impact of the criminal legal system, we need politicians who have lived experience.

When I vote, I feel free. This past spring, passersby could read these words on a billboard at 1201 Half Street Southeast in Washington, DC. The billboard was a result of a national campaign by artist-led consortium For Freedoms, in which artists, activists, and prison reform organizations responded to the question: What does justice mean to you ...
