Indian Law Resource Center

Indigenous Peoples' Rights

https://indianlaw.org/safewomen/violation-human-rights

Policy Isssue Resources

States failure not only under its or tribal governments in safeguarding	American Indian and Alaska Native women highlights the United wn law, including the trust responsibility to Indian nations to assist ug the lives of Indian women, but also under international human c human right recognized under international law is the right to be national strategya strategy that re issue, not just a domestic or law	collaborating with Native women's organizations and tribes on a frames the issue of violence against Native women as a human rights enforcement issue. This strategy combines domestic and international advocacy and uses various types trate support, and urge action to restore safety to Native women.
pressure on the United States to a against Native women. The Cent Native women in the United Stat Elimination of Racial Discrimina Rapporteur on Violence Against	the Center and its partners not only educate, but also add world neet its obligations to end all forms of violence and discrimination er and its partners have raised awareness about violence against es within the United Nations through its Committee on the tion, Special Rapporteur on Contemporary Forms of Racism, Special Women, Special Rapporteur on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples, Issues, Commission on the Status of Women, and Human Rights
	On September 22-23, 2014, the United Nations held its first ever World Conference on Indigenous Peoples at its headquarters in New York City. Some 38 indigenous peoples from the United States attended, including 15 Native women. Remarkably, five American Indian and Alaska Native women were selected to speak on behalf of various tribes and organizations to the Conference. Over 1,000 indigenous peoples attended from all over the world to witness the United Nations General Assembly adopt an outcome document dedicated to implementation of the UN Declaration on the
The Center and its partners also leads to the organization of Amer and tribal governments, the Cent Against Native Women submittee the first human rights case involved States. The case, which involved	Rights of Indigenous Peoples. The outcome document, among other things, calls on the UN to advance by addressing violence against indigenous women. Have brought international attention to violence against Native women can States. In 2008, on behalf of numerous nonprofit organizations er and Sacred Circle National Resource Center to End Violence d an amicus brief in support of Jessica Gonzales Lenahan, who filed ing domestic violence in any international body against the United the deliberate failure of local police to enforce a domestic violence andian country. However, it has major implications for Native women ght to justice.
	In 2011, the Center and its partners, the NCAI Task Force on Violence Against Native Women and the National Indigenous Womens Resource Center, participated in the first ever thematic hearing on violence against Native women in the United States before the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights. The Commission has since expressed concern about violence against indigenous women in the United States, noting that such situations tend to be accompanied by impunity and urging the United States to address this violence through laws, policies, and programs. The Center also has worked to press for provisions in the draft American Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples that would offer protections for indigenous women stronger than those in the UN Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples.

Much more must be done to end violence and discrimination against all indigenous women everywhere. The time is now.

"It is important that the United States consider recommendations from experts with the United Nations and the Organization of American States as it begins to take action. A report to the U.N. General Assembly in 2011 concluded that the United States should consider restoring, in consultation with Native American tribes, Tribal authority to enforce Tribal law over all perpetrators, both native and non-native, who commit acts of sexual and domestic violence within their jurisdiction."

"The global reach and international human rights law is a strong push on Congress to act and remove the legal barriers in the United States that affect Native women. According to one advocate, Native women must not continue to suffer disproportionately higher rates of rape, sexual assault, and murder, and lower rates of enforcement, prosecution, and punishment just because they are Indian and live on an Indian reservation or in an Alaska Native village.'

Senate Committee on Indian Affairs Report on the Stand Against Violence and Empower Native Women Act, SAVE Native Women Act, S. Rep. 112-265, Pages 10-11 (2012).

We are a non-prot law and advocacy organization.

Subscribe to Indigenous Notes for the latest news from the Center.

Help Support and Protect Indigenous Rights.

Main Office 602 North Ewing Street Helena, MT 59601 406.449.2006 mt@indianlaw.org

D.C. Office 601 E Street SE Washington, DC 20003 202.547.2800 dcoffice@indianlaw.org

Indian Law Resource Center. All Rights Reserved. Privacy Policy Website Design by BackOffice Thinking