On October 28, 2021, Majid Khan read an unclassified personal statement during his sentencing hearing before aGuantnamomilitary commission. In his words, it is the story that he has been waiting almost two decades to tell.

Background

In March 2003, Majid Khan was captured, forcibly disappeared, and tortured by U.S. officials at overseas black sites operated by the CIA. In September 2006, he wassent to Guantnamo Bay, at the age of 26, where he has been detained since. His torture is described at length in the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence report on the CIAs post-9/11 detention and interrogation program, key findings of which were released on December 9, 2014. His recent statementadds new details about his torture to the public record.

In February 2012, Khan was charged and pled guilty to various offenses before a military commission at Guantnamo. He pled guilty pursuant to a plea agreement with the Convening Authority for Military Commissions. Given his longstanding cooperation, Khan will conclude his military commission sentence in February 2022, after which he will be transferred from Guantnamo Bay.
