Our Weekly Roundup of News and Views on Solitary Confinement

by Aviva Stahl | December 20, 2015

The Intercept published an in-depth look into the federal lawsuit recently filed against the Santa Clara County jails. While there have been a number of legal challenges to the use of solitary confinement over the last few decades, this is the first to take on its use in jails.

Solitary Watchs Victoria Law covered changes made by NYCs Board of Correction with regards to the use of solitary confinement in the citys jails. Under the new rule if a person has committed a serious assault on jail staff, he or she can be stuck in segregation for up to 60 days without a seven-day waiver; the seven-day waiver requires that after an individual spends 30 days in segregation, they must be placed in general population for at least seven consecutive days.

Accurate information and authentic storytelling can serve as powerful antidotes to ignorance and injustice. We have helped generate public awareness, mainstream media attention, and informed policymaking on what was once an invisible domestic human rights crisis.

Only with your support can we continue this groundbreaking work, shining light into the darkest corners of the U.S. criminal punishment system.
