Solitary Watch

close

Criminal Justice Issues and Prisoners' Rights

https://solitarywatch.org/2017/01/01/seven-days-in-solitary-01012017/

Campaign and Advocacy

Search
close
close
Our Weekly Roundup of News and Views on Solitary Confinement

by Aviva Stahl | January 1, 2017

The Charlotte Observer published a series of articles about the placement of youth in solitary in North Carolinas jails, including one article that focused on the isolation of 16 and 17 year olds in Mecklenburg County, another article that outlined Mecklenburg County commissioner opposition to the practice, and a third article that examined the nationwide shift away from holding children in solitary. The head of North Carolinas NAACP subsequently announced that his organization will conduct a statewide investigation into the use of solitary for juveniles and will push for an end to the practice.

The Hill published a blog that examined the case against solitary confinement. This year we learned that solitary confinement keeping prisoners in their cells for 22 hours or more per day for long durations is a harmful practice, and one that is widely overused in this country. The post was written by Bianca Clark, the executive director of the non-profit Prison Lives.

Staff from the American Civil Liberties Union of Connecticut, along with the states corrections commissioner Scott Semple, are working to draft a bill that would codify changes made to the use of solitary confinement in Connecticut prisons. Policies said to be included in the legislation included a cap on the number of days people could be placed in administrative segregation, and restrictions the use of solitary for prisoners with mental illness or developmental disabilities.

Vice News highlighted how prisons across the US routinely flout the Americans With Disabilities Act. Journalist Erika Eichelberger writes, the alleged violations include a case in Washington state where an inmate with neuropathy, a nerve condition that can cause numbness in the hands and feet, ended up living on the floor of his cell in solitary confinement.

The mother of a recently incarcerated sheriff has pleaded for her son to be removed from solitary confinement. Sheriff Robert Arnold and two others have been accused of illegally profiting from a scheme to sell electronic cigarettes in the jail. Imagine spending 23 hours a day in solitude in a windowless, 50-foot-square room for more than 80 days, said the mother in a letter to US District Judge Kevin Sharp.

Aviva Stahl is a Brooklyn-based reporter who writes about science/health at the intersection of mass incarceration, national security, and trans rights. Shes written for the New York Times, Wired, Buzzfeed News, Solitary Watch, and other outlets. Find her @stahlidarity and at stahlidarity.com.

Accurate information and authentic storytelling can serve as powerful antidotes to ignorance and injustice. We have helped generate public awareness, mainstream media attention, and informed policymaking on what was once an invisible domestic human rights crisis.

Only with your support can we continue this groundbreaking work, shining light into the darkest corners of the U.S. criminal punishment system.

by Mirilla Zhu

October 26, 2022

by Caitlin Konya

October 19, 2022

by Mirilla Zhu

October 12, 2022

Solitary Watch encourages comments and welcomes a range of ideas, opinions, debates, and respectful disagreement. We do not allow name-calling, bullying, cursing, or personal attacks of any kind. Any embedded links should be to information relevant to the conversation. Comments that violate these guidelines will be removed, and repeat offenders will be blocked. Thank you for your cooperation.

P.O. Box 11374 Washington, DC 20008

info@solitarywatch.org

Solitary Watch

Copyright 2022, Solitary Watch

Read about rights and permissions.

Solitary Watch News