Solitary Watch

Criminal Justice Issues and Prisoners' Rights

https://solitarywatch.org/2010/06/04/oregon-converts-supermax-unit-to-treat-mental-illness/

Campaign and Advocacy

close Search
close
close
by Jean Casella and James Ridgeway | June 4, 2010

A reader recently called our attention to an article that appeared back in April in the Salem (Oregon) Statesman Journal, titled Oregon State Penitentiary Adapts to Mental Illness. According to the Oregon Department of Corrections, about half of the states 14,000 prisoners 6,797 are mentally ill. This isten times greater than the population of the states primary psychiatric hospital, the 627-bed Oregon State Hospital in Salemwhich happens to be located just north of the Oregon State Penitentiary (OSP) in Salem, the states only maximum security prison.

Now, the Department of Correctionshas announced plans to convert the OSPs supermax unit, which is officially called the Intensive Management Unit, will be converted into what the Statesman Journal callsthree therapy-minded units.

For two decades, the IMU has operated as a tightly controlled compound within the now-2,000-inmate prison. It corrals belligerent and disruptive inmatessome mentally illin their cells for more than 23 hours per day.

By the end of this year, the two-story IMU facility will get a facelift to soften its austere environment, and will begin serving a therapeutic role. Mental health services are planned for three of the four units in the IMU building:

The plan is far from perfect: Creating 187 new places in a system with 7,000 prisoner suffer from mental illness is a drop in the bucket, and its too soon to say how effective the mental health units will be. (In addition, the renovation calls for Oregons death row to occupy onepart of the former IMU.) But any provision for prisoners with mental illnessespecially one that replaces solitary confinement cellshas to be viewed as progress.

Thearticle provides a brief (and all too typical) history of how mentally ill prisoners have fared in Oregons prisons. Its author, Alan Gustafson, investigated prison suicidesmost of which took place in the IMUback in 2007; his extensive reporting on that subject is well worth reading as well.

James Ridgeway (1936-2021) was the founder and co-director of Solitary Watch. An investigative journalist for over 60 years, he served as Washington Correspondent for the Village Voice and Mother Jones, reporting domestically on subjects ranging from electoral politics to corporate malfeasance to the rise of the racist far-right, and abroad from Central America, Northern Ireland, Eastern Europe, Haiti, and the former Yugoslavia. Earlier, he wrote for The New Republic and Ramparts, and his work appeared in dozens of other publications. He was the co-director of two films and author of 20 books, including a forthcoming posthumous edition of his groundbreaking 1991 work on the far right, Blood in the Face. Jean Casella is the director of Solitary Watch. She has also published work in The Guardian, The Nation, and Mother Jones, and is co-editor of the book Hell Is a Very Small Place: Voices from Solitary Confinement. She has received a Soros Justice Media Fellowship and an Alicia Patterson Fellowship. She tweets @solitarywatch.

Accurate information and authentic storytelling can serve as powerful antidotes to ignorance and injustice. We have helped generate public awareness, mainstream media attention, and informed policymaking on what was once an invisible domestic human rights crisis.

Only with your support can we continue this groundbreaking work, shining light into the darkest corners of the U.S. criminal punishment system.

by Juan Moreno Haines

October 25, 2022

by Solitary Watch Guest Author

October 13, 2022

by Vaidya Gullapalli

September 29, 2022

Solitary Watch encouragescomments and welcomes a range of ideas, opinions, debates, and respectful disagreement. We do not allow name-calling, bullying, cursing, or personal attacks of any kind. Any embedded links should be to information relevant to the conversation. Commentsthat violate these guidelines will be removed, and repeat offenders will be blocked. Thank you for your cooperation.

well done may the rest of us follow in steps and do the same i am glad that the state has done this i hope that they stick with this and do well for the inmates as a grate man said they may not care what they said hear but they dam well best what they did hear lol this is a step in the right way behold thare is some wise ones in this nashion lol

Thank God, Now as Americans can begin to lift our heads up concerning this new act of compassion. It took long enough. How long has it taken since Mr. Ronald Reagan had other ideas for these people?

P.O. Box 11374 Washington, DC 20008

info@solitarywatch.org

Solitary Watch

Copyright 2022, Solitary Watch

Read about rights and permissions.

Solitary Watch News